INTRODUCTION.

In presenting to the public the "Gazetteer and Business Directory," we desire to return our sincere thanks to all who have kindly aided in obtaining the information it contains, and thus rendered it possible to present it in the brief space of time in which it is essential such works should be completed. Especially are our thanks due to the editors and managers of the county papers, for the uniform kindness they have evinced in calling public attention to our efforts, and for essential aid in furnishing material for the work. We have also found valuable aid in the following: The various papers that have been read before the Berkshire Historical Society; the Berkshire Athenæum; The "History of Western Massachusetts," by J. G. Holland; Fields "History of Berkshire County," published in 1829; the "Gazetteer of Massachusetts," by Elias Nason, M. A., published in 1874; the "Gazetteer of Massachusetts" by John Hayward, published, in 1847; the "History of Lee," compiled by Rev. C. M. Hyde, D. D., and Alexander Hyde; "History of Great Barrington," by Charles J. Taylor; "History of Pittsfield," by J. E. A. Smith; the "Geology of Massachusetts," by Edward Hitchcock, LL. D.; "History of Savoy," by H. E. Miller; "History of Paper making in Berkshire," by Hon. Byron Weston; "Historical Address on New Marlboro," by Aaron Smith; "Historical Lecture on Lee," by Rev. Amory Gale; "Taghconic, or a Romance of the Hills," by "Godfrey Greylock;" Report of the "Centennial Celebration of Lenox;" "Centennial Celebration of Sheffield;" Report of the "Berkshire Jubilee," held at Pittsfield in 1845; "Report of the Massachusetts Board of Education;" the "Manual of the General Court;" F. B. Beers's "Atlas of Berkshire County;" The "Berkshire Life Insurance Co.'s Map of Berkshire County;" and in the various pamphlets, and to the reports of a number of societies, institutions, corporations and towns. Our thanks are also due to the clergy throughout the county, and to Hon. Julius Rockwell, of Lenox; H. D. Sedgwick, of New York city; W. M. Kniffin, of West Stockbridge; Josiah A. Royce, of Lanesboro; Prof. A. L. Perry, of Williams college; Henry W. Taft, W. R. Plunkett and James W. Hull, of Pittsfield; H. Clay Bliss, Hon. Jarvis Rockwell and Frederick P. Brown, of North Adams; George W. Adams, D. J. Dean, and Franklin H. B. Munson, of Adams; Leonard McCulloch, of Savoy; Dr. James Smedly, of Williamstown; A. B. Clark, of Lee; Hon. Norman W. Shores and A. Chalkley Collins, of Great Barrington ; E. J. Vosburgh, of Sheffield, and to many others who have rendered valuable aid.

That errors have occurred in so great a number of names is probable, and that names have been omitted which should have been inserted is quite certain. We can only say that we have exercised more than ordinary diligence and care in this difficult and complicated feature of book-making. Of such as feel aggrieved in consequence of errors or omissions, we beg pardon, and ask the indulgence of the reader in noting such as have been observed in the subsequent reading of the proofs and which are found corrected in the Errata following the Introduction.

It was designed to give a brief account of all the church and other societies in the county, but owing in some cases to the negligence of those who were able to give the necessary information, and in others to the inability of any one to do so, we have been obliged to omit special notices of a few.

We would suggest that our patrons observe and become familiar with the explanations at the commencement of the Directory on page 3, part 2d. The names it embraces, and the information connected therewith, were obtained by actual canvass, and are as correct and reliable as the judgment of those from whom they were solicited renders possible. Each agent is furnished with a map of the town he is expected to canvass, and he is required to pass over every road and call at every dwelling and place of business in the town in order to obtain the facts from the individuals concerned whenever possible.

The margins have been left broad to enable any one to note changes opposite the names.

The Advertisers represent some of the leading firms and business men of this and other counties, and we most cheerfully commend them to the patronage of those under whose observation these pages may come.

We take this occasion to express the hope that the information found in the book will not prove devoid of interest and value, though we are fully conscious that the brief description of the county the scope of the work enables us to give, is by no means an exhaustive one, and can only hope that it may prove an aid to future historians, who will be the better able to do full justice to the subject.

While thanking our patrons and friends generally for the cordiality with which our efforts have been seconded, we leave the work to secure that favor which earnest endeavor ever wins from a discriminating public, hoping they will bear in mind, should errors be noted, that "he who expects a perfect work to see, expects what ne'er was, is, nor yet shall be."

HAMILTON CHILD.

BERKSHIRE COUNTY, MASS.

“Thou who wouldst see the lovely and the wild
Mingled in harmony on Nature’s face,
Ascend our rocky mountains. Let thy foot
Fail not with weariness, for on their tops
The beauty and the majesty of earth,
Spread wide beneath, shall make thee to forget
The steep and toilsome way.”—BRYANT.

BERKSHIRE COUNTY, whose wealth of beauty and historic lore has fancy-tipped the pen of many gifted ones, rears, “round as the bosom of beauty,” her voluptuous hills, and wide-spreads her charming valleys and sylvan vales over the whole of Western Massachusetts, extending from the southern bounds of the Green Mountain State down to the Northern line of old Connecticut. Here the Taghconic and Green Mountain ranges have united the picturesque and the grand in an exquisite harmony, their various blendings of light and shade combining in a woof more rare than was ever wrought in the looms of Ispahan, while “cloud-girdled” Greylock, the highest mountain in the State, holds, from his mighty throne, watch and ward over all. Of this beautiful country, however, it is not our purpose to attempt in the following pages a full and detailed history, nor a complete description thereof; but simply to place on record the principal events connected with its history, to outline the lives of some of its pioneers and honored citizens, to trace the erection of each one of its townships, and to hand down to future generations the names and occupations of its present residents, all of which, however, unite in a task by no means slight, and for any imperfections in the execution thereof, we beg the kind indulgence of the reader.

Let us turn back over the old Bay Path, adown the vista of faded years, and hastily glance at the links in the strong chain that unites us with that little band whose bended knees devoutly pressed old Plymouth's frozen snow on that dreary December day in 1620—that band who had braved persecution, and the rigors of a winter sea, that they “might walk with God and one another in the enjoyment of the ordinances of God, according to the primitive fashion,” and now, on this dreary 21st of December, began their stern fight with the elements, with famine, and with a savage foe, to found one of the greatest nations upon which the sun has ever shone. A God-fearing, law-loving, fearless, industrious people were this little Puritan band, the “noblest men that ever founded a nation.” Of their many trials in those early days it is not necessary to speak—they are familiar to all. Accessions to the new settlement was soon made, other colonies were established, and it was not long before emigration began its steady march towards the West, a march that even now, though more than two and a half centuries have intervened, is not ended. Cotton Mather quaintly speaks of these times as follows.—

“It was not long before the Massachusetts colony was become like an hive overstocked with bees, and many of the new inhabitants entertained thoughts of swarming into plantations extended further into the country. The colony might fetch its own descriptions from the dispensations of the Great God unto his ancient Israel, and say: ‘O God of Hosts! Thou hast brought a ruin out of England; Thou hast cast out the heathen and planted it; Thou prepardest room before it, and didst cause it to take deep root, and it filled the land; the hills were covered with the shadow of it, and the boughs thereof were like the goodly cedars; she sent out her boughs into the sea.’ But still there was one stroak wanting for the compleat accommodacions of the description; to wit, she sent forth her branches unto the river, and this, therefore, is to be next attained. The fame of Connecticut River, a long, fresh, rich river, had made a little Nilus of it, in the expectation of the good people about the Massachusetts Bay, whereupon many of the planters, belonging especially to the towns of Cambridge, Watertown and Roxbury, took up resolutions to travel an hundred miles westward from those towns, for a further settlement upon this famous river.”

In 1631 the Connecticut first became known to the colonists, and in October, 1633, was begun the first settlement in its valley, at Windsor, Conn.; and in 1636 William Pynchon and his little band came down the old Bay Path to found what is now the flourishing city of Springfield. With this event begins the authentic history of Western Massachusetts.

A little over a quarter of a century later, old Hampshire county was incorporated, the settlements here having increased to such an extent that this act had become necessary. The act of incorporation reads as follows:—

“Forasmuch as the inhabitants of this jurisdiction are much increased, so that now they are planted far into the country, upon Connecticut river, who by reason of their remoteness cannot conveniently be annexed to any of the counties already settled; and that public affairs may with more facility be transacted according to laws now established: It is ordered by the Court, and authority thereof, that henceforth Springfield, Northampton and Hadley shall be, and hereby are, constituted as a county, the bounds or limits on the south to be the south line of the patent, the extent of other bounds to be full thirty miles distant from any or either of the aforesaid towns: and what towns or villages soever shall hereafter be erected within the aforesaid limits to be and belong to the said county. And further, that the said county shall be called Hampshire, and shall have and enjoy the liberties and privileges of any other county; that Springfield shall be the shire town there, and the courts to be kept one time in Springfield and another time at Northampton; the like order to be observed for their shire meetings, that is to say, one year at one town and the next year at the other town, from time to time. The Deputies have passed this, with reference to the consent of the honored magistrates.

“ 16th day of 3d Month, 1862.

Under this act old Hampshire county flourished for nearly a hundred years with no material curtailment of her vague and roughly stated limits; but finally, on the 21st of April, 1761, the old county was divided, its western portion taking the name of Berkshire—the territory of which we write. The old county, however, parted with very little of civilization when she gave up the territory of Berkshire, but she lost 950 square miles of beautiful territory and nearly as much of fine farming land, or nearly one eighth of the whole territory of Massachusetts, the limits of which the act of incorporation fixed as follows:—

“ Beginning at the western line of Granville, where it touches the Connecticut line, to run northerly as far as said west line of Granville runs, then easterly to the southwest corner of Blanford, and to run by the west line of the same town, to the northwestern corner thereof; from thence northerly in a direct line to the southeast corner of No. 4 [Becket], and so running by the easterly line of No. 4, to the northeast corner thereof; and thence in a direct course to the southwest corner of Charlemont, and so northerly in the west line of the same town, till it comes to the north bound of the province, and northerly on the line between this province and the province of New Hampshire [now Vermont], and on the west by the utmost limits of this province.”

Since then, however, a number of changes have been made in its eastern and western boundary lines. At that time the Dutch claimed the territory as far east as the Housatonic, on the county's western border, while the settlement of the boundary line between Massachusetts and the province of New York had long been, as it continued long to be, a subject of controversy between the two powers; indeed, it was not finally adjusted until 1787, when the line was drawn by a joint commission from the two commonwealths. This adjustment threw a large portion of the township of Hancock into New York, though it left a gore of that state's territory lying against the towns of West Stockbridge and Alford, which was finally annexed to those towns. In the extreme southwestern part of the county there was a tract of land that was incorporated as a district, April 14, 1838, under the name of Boston Coruer; but being divided, or shut off from Mount Washington by the mountains, it was ceded to New York, to which it naturally belonged, May 14, 1853. It contained an area of 940 acres, and had seventy-five inhabitants. The eastern boundary has been subjected to still greater changes. In 1783, “ the northeast corner of Becket, the south side of Partridgefield [Peru], a part of Washington, and the land called Prescott's Grants, all in the county of Berkshire," with portions of Worthington and Chester, in Hampshire county, were incorporated as the township of Middlefield, which was annexed to Hampshire county. Still later, a part of Hampshire's territory was taken to increase the territory of Windsor, and in 1792 the township of Hawley was incorporated, being made up from land that had been granted here as "Plantation No. 7," and was annexed to Hampshire county, being now, however, a part of Franklin county. Finally, in 1822, a gore of land in the north-eastern part of the county was taken towards forming the township of Monroe, which was annexed to Franklin county.

At the time of its erection there were only five incorporated townships within the limits of the county, viz.: Sheffield, Stockbridge, New Marlboro, Egremont and Pontoosuc (now Pittsfield), though the northern part of Sheffield was incorporated as the township of Great Barrington on the 30th of June, the day that the act incorporating the county went into effect; and there were only four other settlements, at Williamstown, Tyringham, Sandisfield and Becket respectively, while there are now thirty-two townships, as follows: Adams, Alfred, Becket, Cheshire, Clarksburg, Dalton, Egremont, Florida, Great Barrington, Hancock, Hinsdale, Lanesboro, Lee, Lenox, Monterey, Mount Washington, New Ashford, New Marlboro, North Adams, Otis, Peru, Pittsfield, Richmond, Sandisfield, Savoy, Sheffield, Stockbridge, Tyringham, Washington, West Stockbridge, Williamstown and Windsor. The total area of these towns constitute a territory of 950 square miles, lying between $42^{\circ} 2'$ and $42^{\circ} 44'$ north latitude, and between $4^{\circ} 4'$ and $3^{\circ} 32'$ east longitude, bounded north by the state of Vermont, east by Franklin, Hampden and Hampshire counties, south by Connecticut, and east by New York, while their total population in 1880 amounted to 69,082 souls.

But of the beauties of Berkshire and its superb views, what can we say? Pen cannot paint nor palette filch its delicious curves, its varying, tremulous colors—hazy, dreamy, changing as the chameleon's, with the varying atmosphere. Since first they gladdened the heart of the pioneer, they have inspired the poetry of giant intellects, and the quaint legends that have their home among them have afforded food for the pen of Longfellow, Bryant, Hawthorne, Melville, Thoreau, Sedgwick, Holmes, Kemble, and others, each of whom has failed to leave a perfect picture of the hills they loved so dearly. What wonder, then, that our "poor shell should fail to wake the weary nine," and our palsied pen shrink, appalled, the task. No more brief, analytical, view of this subject, perhaps, can be found than that presented by the mellow pen of "Godfrey Greylock," in his charming work, Taghconic, which we take the liberty of repeating:—

"But first listen to Mr Ruskin," he says, "whom I suppose you will recognize as a competent interpreter the laws of beauty:

"That country is always the most beautiful which is made up of the most curves."

“That is the great teacher’s absolute dictum directly applicable here : and listen to another, applicable by indirection but clearly pertinent :

“In all beautiful designs of exterior descent, a certain regularity is necessary ; the lines should be graceful, but they must also balance each other, slope answering slope, and statue to statue.’

“And now observe what may be considered Mr. Ruskin’s application of the first-quoted law. It forms part of his ideal description or characterization of the ‘picturesque blue country’ of England ; that is, a country having a blue distance of mountains :

“‘Its first and most distinctive peculiarity is its grace ; it is all undulation and variety of line, one curve passing into another with the most exquisite softness, rolling away into faint and far outlines of various depths and decision, yet none hard or harsh ; and, in all probability, rounded off in the near ground into massy forms of partially wooded hill, shaded downward into winding dingles or cliffy ravines, each form melting imperceptibly into the next, without an edge or angle. * * * * * Every line is voluptuous, floating and waving in its form ; deep, rich and exquisitely soft in its color ; drowsy in its effect, like slow, wild music ; letting the eye repose upon it, as on a wreath or cloud, without one feature of harshness to hurt, or of contrast to awaken.’

“Mr. Ruskin might have written the quoted passages sitting here upon this tower [at Maplewood Hall, Pittsfield], and been guilty of nothing worse than almost Pre-Raphaelite precision. The landscape is literally all curves : there is not a straight or ungraceful line in it, except it be of man’s making. In what graceful sweeps those mountain walls were thrown up. Into what an endless and infinitely varied succession of interlacing loops and curves, the old glaciers scolloped their crests and indented their ravines. The meanderings of the countless brooks, the serpentine windings of the Housatonic, the wavy and sinuous contours of the lakes, soothe the eye by the multitude of their luxurious curves. The bare morains, the wooded knolls, the mossy maple groves and clumpy stretches of willow, are all soft and rounded. The shadows which lie under the solitary trees on the hill side, have no harsher shape than that which the fleecy passing cloud casts near them. Nay, Nature, compelling man to own her own sweet mood, forces him to bend his railroads and highways gently around the circled bases of her mountains. Even when he makes his ways straight, ‘Nature soon touches in her picturesque graces,’ and covers his streets and his habitations with her swelling drapery. Berkshire, as you see it here, surely answers well to Mr. Ruskin’s definition of ‘the most beautiful country.’

“And as to the demands of the second passage which I have quoted, and to the general requisitions of his essay ; I repeat what I have said elsewhere :

“A lovelier landscape one might not desire to see ; and when satiated with long luxurious gazing, the spectator seeks to analyze the sources of his delight, all the elements of beauty justify his praise. To the eye the valley here presents the proportions which architects love to give their favorite structures. The symmetry, too, with which point answers to point, exceeds the attainment of the art.

“Variety, the most marvelous, but without confusion, forbids the sense to tire. Colors, the richest, softest and most delicate charm the eye, and vary with the ever-changing conditions of the atmosphere. Fertile farms and frequent villages imbue the scene with the warmth of generous life; while, over all, hangs the subdued grandeur which may well have pervaded the souls of the great and good men who have made Berkshire their home from the days of Jonathan Edwards down.”

As we have previously stated, the county lies upon the great ridge which separates the valleys of the Hudson and Connecticut rivers, and which is divided into the Green and Taghconic ranges of mountains; the former extending from north to south across the eastern part of the county, while the Taghconics have a parallel course across the Western part. Between the Taghconic range and a spur of the Green Mountains known as the Hoosacs, there stretches a beautiful valley through the whole length of the county, through which flow the Hoosac and Housatonic rivers, the former to the north and the latter to the south. Along these streams are located the principal villages and manufactures, while on either hand from this valley are stretched the agricultural towns. The valley towns are from 500 to 1,200 feet above the level of the sea, while the mountain towns have a mean elevation of from 1,200 to 1,800 feet, the highest point being located in the north-western part, where Greylock rears his crest to an altitude of 3,500 feet. Of the healthfulness of the Berkshire Hills, Dr. J. F. A. Adams, president of the Berkshire District Medical Society, states in a paper read before that society in December, 1883, as follows:—

“The climate is dry, cool and bracing. Against the cold and moist east and northeast winds which prevail along the New England coast, Berkshire possesses a double line of defense, namely, that portion of the Green Mountain range which skirts it on the east, and also the southern prolongation of the White Mountain system east of the Connecticut valley. On the summits and eastern slopes of these two mountain chains the east winds deposit their superabundant moisture and expend their force, so that, on reaching Berkshire their character is wholly changed. In like manner the west winds are deprived by the two mountain ranges east and west of the Hudson river of the dampness gathered from the great lakes. The elevation of this region is another cause of the dryness of the atmosphere, and likewise renders it cool and bracing. Other things being equal, the average temperature of a place is diminished one degree for every 300 feet of elevation. The average temperature of Berkshire is, therefore, from two to six degrees cooler than the lower districts lying to the east and west. The climate of moderate altitudes is stimulating, accelerating the breath and circulation and giving tone to the nervous system. The beneficial influence of this stimulation on invalids, especially consumptives, has been carefully studied by eminent medical authorities in Switzerland, Colorado and elsewhere, and, although the altitude of the towns among the Berkshire hills is less than that of the Engadine or of Denver, the same quality of atmosphere exists and a similar beneficial effect is experienced."

Aside from those mentioned, the principal elevations are Mount Everett, Mount Washington, Monument Mountain and Potter Mountain, all of which and many others are spoken of in detail in connection with the sketch of the towns wherein they are located. The county is well supplied with streams which have their sources in the clear springs of the many hill-sides, the principle of which are the Housatonic, Hoosac, Deerfield, Westfield, Green and Farmington rivers, with their numerous tributaries. The Housatonic, whose name, with its various orthographies, was derived from the Indians, and signifying "over the mountains," has its sources in the towns of Lanesboro and Windsor. The two branches meet at Pittsfield, where the river forms; it then passes south, through Berkshire county, entering Connecticut, and thence meanders on to Long Island Sound. The sources of the river being located at an altitude of more than a thousand feet above the ocean, its current affords excellent motive power. The volume of water is not very large, except in seasons of freshet, when the rains from the mountains swell it until it inundates the valleys, thus greatly fertilizing the soil. The scenery which environs it is in many places enchanting.

The Hoosac river proper has its source in two branches, one in the northern part of the county and the other in the mountainous tracts of Bennington county, Vt. The branches unite near Hoosac Falls, N. Y., about three miles west of the celebrated Bennington battle ground, and thence it drops into the Hudson, fifteen miles north of Troy. The stream in this county affords many excellent mill-sites.

The Deerfield river rises in Stratton, Vt., and falls into the Connecticut. It is connected with Berkshire county only in forming the eastern boundary line of Florida. It is an important stream, however, being about fifty miles in length, watering 320 square miles of territory.

Westfield river is made up by three branches. North branch has its source in Windsor. It flows northerly, thence easterly, round the hills, and then turning southerly into Hampshire county; Middle branch rises in Peru and flows southwesterly into Hampshire county; and West branch has its sources in Washington and Becket, and flows southeasterly to unite with the other branches, in Montgomery, Hampden county.

Farmington river rises in Becket and flows a southerly course into Hampden county, forming a part of the eastern boundary line of Sandisfield.

Green river, so named from the color of its waters, which is probably produced by the clay washed out from its banks, rises in Austerlitz, N. Y., and flowing through Alford and Great Barrington unites with the Housatonic. There are also many other minor streams, and a great many lakes and ponds which are spoken of in the several town sketches.

GEOLOGICAL.

A study of the science of geology is ever an interesting one ; and as related to this county is exceedingly so, for here the records of the changes, or "foot-prints," that time has left in succeeding ages since the earth was created, are numerous and well developed. Before mentioning the several rock formations that enter into the structure of the county, however, it may not be considered superfluous to briefly note some of the fundamental principles of the science.

Among geologists it has become the common, if not the prevailing opinion, that in the beginning all the elements with which we meet were in an ethereal or gaseous state—that they slowly condensed, existing for ages as a heated fluid, by degrees becoming more consistent—that thus the whole earth was once an immense ball of fiery matter—that, in the course of time, it was rendered very compact, and at last became crusted over, as the process of cooling gradually advanced, and that its interior is still in a molten condition. Thus, if the view suggested be correct, the entire planet in its earlier phases, as well as the larger part now beneath and within its solid crust, was a mass of molten fire, and is known to geologists as the elementary or molten period. Following this came another age, in which the molten mass began to cool and a crust to form, called the igneous period. Contemporaneous with the beginning of the igneous period came another epoch. The crust thus formed would naturally become surrounded by an atmosphere heavily charged with minerals in a gaseous or vaporous condition. As the cooling advanced, this etherealized matter would condense and seek a lower level, thus coating the earth with another rock. This is named the vaporous period. At last, however, another age was ushered in, one altogether different from those that had preceded it. The moist vapor which must of necessity have pervaded the atmosphere began to condense and settle, gathering into the hollows and crevices of the rocks, until nearly the whole surface of the earth was covered with water. This is called the aqueous period. As these waters began to recede and the "firmament to appear," the long winter that intervened while the sun was obscured by the heavy clouds, would cover the earth with mighty ice floes and glaciers, forming a drift or glacial period.

A great difference also exists in the consolidation and structure of the deposits thus formed. The very newest consist of unconsolidated gravel, sand and clay, forming alluvium. A little further down we come to the tertiary strata, where are some hardened rocks and others more or less soft. Next below the tertiary are found thick deposits, mostly consolidated, but showing a mechanical structure along with the crystalline arrangement of the ingredients. These are called secondary and transition. Lowest of all are found rocks having a decidedly crystalline structure, looking as if the different minerals of which they are composed crowded hard upon one another. These rocks are called metamorphic, hypozoic and azoic.

The principal rocks entering into the geological structure of Berkshire are mostly azoic, and are known as gneiss, limestone, talcose-slate, mica-slate quartz rock associated with mica-slate and chlorite, mentioned in the order of their preponderance. The great bed of gneiss enters the county from the south, extending nearly to the Vermont line, underlying the greater part of Sandisfield, New Marlboro, Otis, Tyringham, Becket, Lee, Washington, Hinsdale, Peru, Windsor and Savoy. The essential ingredients of gneiss are quartz, feldspar, and mica, forming a rock closely resembling granite, differing from it only in having a distinctly stratified, slaty or laminated structure. For this reason it makes a very handsome and convenient building stone, as the sheets or strata can be easily obtained at the quarries, and it can be split or divided into any required thickness.

Limestone extends all through the vallies of the Hoosac and Housatonic rivers, affording an abundance of material for building purposes, for the manufacture of lime, and for monument and cemetery work, as in many places it is in the form of beautiful grades of marble. The best of these Berkshire marbles are white, some grades of a snowy white; some of them, however, are clouded, and some gray. The gray and white are the most esteemed for durability. For further notice see the sketches of the several towns wherein the quarries are located.

Talcose-slate is the next rock in point of abundance. A large bed of this rock extends along the whole western border of the county, branching out in the northern part into New Ashford, Williamstown, Adams and North Adams, Cheshire and Lanesboro. Of this range Prof. Hagar speaks as follows: "It embraces Saddle mountain, and the Taconic range, the loftiest mountains in Massachusetts. It is interstratified with the mica-slate and limestone in some of the valleys; but chiefly near their western side, except at Adams, where we find the talcose-slate at the foot of Hoosac mountain in nearly perpendicular strata. All of the talcose-slate in the western part of Berkshire embraces more or less of mica, except perhaps occasional beds of chlorite-slate; and often it passes into mica-slate so entirely as to perplex the observer. I suppose that the term micaceo-talcose slate would be the most appropriate one for this rock. Although frequently much resembling the talcose slate of the Hoosac range, yet in general it is obviously a newer deposit, passing insensibly on its western side into argillaceous-slate. Crystalized minerals are not common in it, except octahedral iron ore, quartz, and a few others, though such minerals are not common in the Hoosac mountain range."

Mica-slate is found in the southern part of the county principally in New Marlboro, and in the northern part in Clarksburg, Adams, North Adams, Florida, Savoy, Windsor and Peru. This formation is about the same as that of talcose-slate, except that it has mica in place of talc.

Quartz rock is found in most of the valley towns of the Housatonic, and also, in lesser degree, in the Hoosac valley. From this rock is obtained the valuable supply of quartz sand used in the manufacture of glass. The principal ingredient in this rock, as its name implies, is quartz, though it takes into its composition mica, feldspar and sometimes the blue schistose clay. In this county it largely partakes of mica, differing from mica-slate, in many places, only in the preponderance of quartz. In other places it has a schistose structure.

Chlorite slate is only found in the eastern parts of Savoy and Windsor. The principal minerals found are plumbago, iron, lead, serpentine steatite, etc., though only iron has been wrought to any great extent. For description of the deposits, works, etc., of the latter, see the article under the head of "manufactures."

Numerous evidences of the aqueous period are met with throughout the county, in the form of ancient sea beaches. They consist of sand and gravel, which have been acted upon, rounded and comminuted by the waves, and thrown up in the form of ridges, with more or less appearance of stratification or lamination. The manner in which they were formed may be seen along the sea-coast at any time in the course of formation, as they have the same form of modern beaches, except that they have been mutilated by the action of water and atmospheric agencies since their deposition.

Evidences of the drift or glacial period are left here by large boulders scattered over the country, by drift scratches and by moraine terraces, while it is asserted that many of the valleys, and the peculiar rounded appearance of the hills and mountains were produced by this glacial epoch. These drift scratches are grooves worn in the rocks by those mighty rivers of ice, which though they moved through the valleys at the rate of only about two feet per day, their great thickness, and the weight of the superincumbent snow, caused them to grate and crush the rocks beneath, leaving marks that eons cannot efface. Morain terraces are elevations of gravel and sand, with correspondent depressions and scarcely describable forms. The theory of their formation is that icebergs became stranded at the base and on the sides of hills, and that deposits were made around and upon them, and that they would have been level-topped if the ice had remained, but in consequence of its melting they became extremely irregular.

For facts further than the hasty glance we have given of the geology of the county, see the sketches of the several towns.

SOIL AND STAPLE PRODUCTIONS.

The soil of Berkshire differs materially in different parts of the county, though in general it is inferior to that of no other county in the state, its several river valleys being proverbial for their richness, while its foot-hills and mountain slopes afford large areas of grazing land, for which the county is justly celebrated. There is one other thing that Berkshire people are proud of, too, and that is their Berkshire Agricultural Society, the mother of all agricultural societies, for it was the first organized in this country, and after it are modeled all the societies of to-day. The society was brought into existence, briefly, as follows: During the first decade of the present century, Hon. Elkanah Watson, then a resident of Pittsfield, having moved there from Albany, imported a pair of Merino sheep, the first brought into Berkshire. As the sheep here were then very scrawny and possessed of course wool and very little of it, the advent of the sleek, fine-wooled Merinos naturally attracted a great deal of attention. Accordingly, Mr. Watson determined to devote one day to their exhibition; so one bright day in 1807 the two sheep were placed on exhibition under the "old elm" in Pittsfield park—the first exhibition of the kind in the county. But it does not appear that anything was done towards establishing a society until 1810, when Samuel H. Wheeler, of Lanesboro, issued an invitation to farmers in general to an exhibition of stock, in the village of Pittsfield, on the first of October, from nine to three o'clock. This exhibition proved a great success, as is attested by the local press, which in remarking thereon said: "The display of fine animals, and the numbers, exceeded the most sanguine hopes of its prompters, and a large collection of people participated in the display."

On the 25th of February, 1811, an act of the legislature was passed, incorporating the "Berkshire Agricultural Society, for the promotion of Agriculture and Manufactures." The petitioners named in this act were Elkanah Watson, Ezekiel Bacon, John B. Root and John Churchill, of Pittsfield; Caleb Hyde, of Lenox; and Samuel H. Wheeler of Lanesboro, who were authorized to appoint the time and place for the first meeting in Pittsfield. At this meeting Hon. Elkanah Watson was chosen president. The present officers of the society are James Bullard, of Lee, president; Charles J. Kittridge, of Hinsdale, first vice-president; Joseph A. Kline, of Egremont, second vice-president; W. H. Murray, of Pittsfield, secretary; and Charles E. Merrill, of Pittsfield, treasurer.

Mr. Watson also found here very poor grades of pigs and cattle. The pigs, especially, were lean and scrawny, seemingly incapable of becoming fat. So he purchased some short-legged, small-boned pigs, thus laying the foundation here of the celebrated breed of "Berkshire hogs." The cattle were small, of Devon breed, and not suitable for this soil and climate. So Mr. Watson imported an English bull of a different breed, and from that time the breed of cattle all over the county began to improve, spreading all over the State. Thus much has Mr. Watson and Berkshire county done for agriculture.

The Housatonic Agricultural Society.—This society, located at Great Barrington, had its origin in the gathering of a few gentlemen at the Berkshire House, in Great Barrington, October 30, 1841, "to consider the propriety of forming an agricultural society in the southern part of Berkshire county. At this meeting committees were appointed from each of the eleven southern towns of the county to confer with the people and ascertain their views on the subject. This movement resulted in the organization of the society before the end of that year, though it was not incorporated until 1848. At its formation, in 1841, Major Samuel Rosseter was chosen president;

Increase Sumner, secretary ; and Philip Barnes, treasurer. The first exhibition was held on the 28th and 29th of September, 1842. The society organized under its act of incorporation, April 11, 1848, when the following officers were chosen : Seth Norton, president ; William Dewey and Gilbert Munson, vice-presidents ; Charles N. Emerson, secretary ; and Edward P. Woodworth, treasurer. The present officers are Joseph A. Kline, of Egremont, president ; Marshall S. Heath, of Stockbridge, and Charles E. Slater, of Tyringham, vice-presidents ; Frank A. Wright, of Great Barrington, treasurer ; and Henry T. Robbins, of Great Barrington, secretary.

The northern part of the county has also a flourishing society, the "Hoo-sac Valley," with headquarters at North Adams, detailed mention of which we are obliged to omit, owing to our inability, notwithstanding repeated correspondence, to procure the information.

As the soil, productions, etc., of each town is spoken of in connection with the sketch thereof, we will conclude our remarks at this point by quoting the following statistics, shown by the census reports of 1880. The county then had 3,751 farms, representing 314,644 acres of improved land, valued at $12,696,545.00, while its total public debt, bonded and floating, was $1,526,436.00. These farms supported 6,992 horses, fifteen mules, 1,411 working oxen, 19,497 milch cows, 15,137 other cattle ; 22,802 sheep, and 7,287 swine. The stock products for the year were 99,388 pounds of wool, 1,825,864 gallons of milk, 1,540,848 pounds of butter, and 240,097 pounds of cheese. The agricultural products were 12,418 bushels of barley, 35,459 bushels of buckwheat, 202,221 ; bushels of Indian corn, 288,937 bushels of oats, 45,896 bushels of rye, 2,284 bushels of wheat, 103,774 tons of hay, 308,731 bushels of potatoes, and 85,747 pounds of tobacco, while their valuation of orchard products was $62,038.00.

MANUFACTURES.

The unusually good motive power offered by the several streams of the county, whose utility has been greatly augmented in many places by the erection of reservoirs, early pointed Berkshire out as a manufacturing region, and that prediction has surely been verified. There are four principal manufacturing industries to be noted, viz.: That of cloth, of paper, of iron, and of glass, though there are many other manufacturing industries of lesser note, all of which, however, are spoken of in detail in connection with the sketch of the town wherein they are located. At this point, then, we will only briefly notice the four principal manufactures mentioned and give some general statistics.

Iron Manufacture.—All of the available iron deposits in the county are of the brown hematite variety, or the hydrus peroxyd of iron. Geologically considered, it belongs in all probability to the tertiary formation which extends from Canada to Georgia. The principal deposits are found in Adams, Lanesboro, Cheshire, Pittsfield, Richmond and West Stockbridge, the two latter containing the largest, though it exists to a greater or less degree in many other towns. The principal works are those of the Colby Iron Co., at Lanesboro, which has one stack; the Richmond Iron Works, which has three stacks, one at Cheshire, one at Richmond, and one at Great Barrington, all being charcoal furnaces; and the Pomeroy Iron Works, in West Stockbridge, which is an anthracite furnace. The charcoal stacks make from ten to twelve tons of iron daily, while the anthracite furnace will make twenty-five tons daily. The ore is mostly mined underground and hoisted to the surface.

Paper Manufacture.—The pioneer in this manufacture was Zenas Crane, who came on from Worcester in 1799, prospecting for a suitable site for erecting a mill, finally locating in Dalton, where, in company with Henry Wiswall and John Willard, he erected a mill in 1801, upon the site now occupied by the mill of Carson & Brown. This mill was not only the first mill erected in the county, but it was also the first built west of Worcester. Since that time the county has become celebrated throughout the world for this branch of manufacture, the principal mills being erected in Dalton, Lee, South Lee, Mill River, Housatonic, Sandisfield, Sheffield, Otis, Hinsdale, Glendale, Tyringham, Adams and Pittsfield.

Cloth Manufacture.—The manufacture of cotton and woolen goods of all grades, for which Berkshire is now so justly celebrated, was began in the first years of the present century. It is claimed that the first broadcloths ever manufactured in this country were made in Pittsfield, in 1804. "About 1789," the account runs, "one Arthur Scholfield emigrated from Saddleworth, near Leeds, and came into Pittsfield in 1800. Here he at once set up a machine for carding wool, and although the women were somewhat jealous, at first, of his innovations, they soon became his patrons, and wagons heaped with wool came teeming into the town, and went out, with the same neatly carded into rolls, the envelope (a spare sheet in most cases), being secured with thorns, for that was before the day of cheap pins. Mr. Scholfield was soon joined by his nephew, Isaac, and commenced the manufacture of carding machines for sale. These machines commanded about $1,300.00 each. Scholfield was a man of great energy and enterprise. In order to get his machinery out from England, from which its exportation to this country was forbidden, he had to make two voyages to England, and bring the machinery out piece-meal, hidden in his bedding, with drawings and models of the more cumbersome parts. Having been joined by one Rigby, another Englishman of congenial spirit, the Scholfields carried on their business profitably until the introduction of power looms, when they entered heartily into the new improvements. During the war of 1812 they sold considerable quantities of the gray mixed broadcloth, which was the uniform of one of the regiments, to the officers stationed at Pittsfield. It was a stout, coarse article, which would now be worth, perhaps, $1.50 per yard, though it then sold for $15.00 per yard." From this small beginning has grown the great enterprise, occupying acres upon acres of floor-room, and its thousands of busy looms.

Glass Manufacture.—Berkshire county was identified with the manufacture of glass very early in the present century. Its eastern range of mountains is rich in quartz sand of the purest quality. Nothing equal to it is found this side of the Mississippi river. These rich deposits of sand, and abundance of fuel, led to the development of the glass industry, which for many years has been an important one in Berkshire county. The first incorporated glass company in Massachusetts was located here. Its name was the Adams Glass Co., its date of incorporation, June 15, 1812, the names of its incorporators being "John Whipple, James Mason, Daniel Sherman and others." This factory was located in the town of Adams. The next incorporated company in Western Massachusetts was located in Chester, and was known as "The Chester Glass Co.," the date of incorporation being June 7, 1814. Two days later, June 9, 1814, was incorporated the Farmers Glass Co., located in Clarksburg. The names of its incorporators were Rufus Darling, Ebenezer Pratt, A. Southwick, Daniel Aldrich, and John and Isaac Sherman. The most important of all, though never incorporated, was the Cheshire Crown Glass Works, which were built and commenced operation in 1813. These Cheshire works were the second in point of date, the Adams company, being incorporated in 1812, and the Chester and Clarksburgh in 1814. The capitalist of the Cheshire concern was Capt. Daniel Brown, and the company consisted of his sons Darius and John, and John D. Leland, son of the celebrated Parson Leland, and a man named Hunt. These works were crown works, and were situated near the stream and close by the present sand works of the Gordon Company. Though built directly over one of the finest sand deposits in the country, the proprietors were ignorant of the fact, and brought their sand from the Lane bed three miles above.

While there are many interesting legends connected with these works, relating principally to the difficulties encountered, trouble with their drunken workmen, etc., etc., we have only space to say that they only ran between two and three years; but sufficiently long to financially ruin the proprietors. Capt. Brown ran a store and distillery in connection with the glass works, and from his day book it appears that the men were more dependent on the distillery than the store for their daily pay. With the closing of the Cheshire works, the manufacture of glass in Berkshire county ceased for a generation, though the sand from the Lane bed was taken to Sand Lake, N. Y., and to Keene, N. H., for many years for glass purposes. This sand has no superior in the world for glass making, being more than 99 per cent. pure Silix. The finest glass made in the country has always been made from this sand. But its inland situation and the difficulties attending the transportation of the glass to market prevented any further manufacture till 1847, when the present works at Berkshire were started by a stock company known and incorporated as the Berkshire Glass Company. The original incorporators were Samuel Smith, W. D. B. Linn, and William T. Filley, the latter of whom is still living in Pittsfield. The stock was principally taken in Boston. The works were built in 1853, under the superintendence of Mr. A. K. Fox, of Sand Lake, whose works there were destroyed by fire, and what was left of the Sand Lake works was brought to Berkshire. With the exception of one year, during the panic of 1857-58, these works have been in constant operation since their erection, and have been very much enlarged under their present management, which commenced in 1858, when the original Berkshire Glass Company failed. In 1858 a division of the works and sand beds was made, the works and real estate being bought by Page, Robbins & Harding, of Boston, and the sand beds by George W. Gordon, of Boston. In 1862 Mr. Robbins sold his interest to Mr. Page, and, until 1883, the firm style was Page & Harding, and Page, Harding & Co. In 1883 an act of incorporation was obtained, and it is now known as the Berkshire Glass Company. The plant of the company embraces one plate and cathedral and three window glass furnaces. For the last ten years the ribbed plate and rolled cathedral have been largely made here, and only here in the United States. The cathedral is made in a great variety of colors and tints. The quality of the glass made here has always been of the highest standard, and it is the only glass made in the country which is equal in quality to the best foreign manufacture, and commands the same price.

The same year that the Berkshire Glass Co. commenced operations, the Lenox Iron Co., which had been incorporated in 1848, erected glass works near their iron furnace in Lenox. The iron company was composed of Oliver Peck, William A. Phelps and James Collins. The glass works were erected under the superintendance of these men and Hiram Pettee, now living in Pittsfield. Mr. Pettee soon left, to manage the Briggs Iron Works in Lanesboro, and was succeeded in the management by his brother, Seneca Pettee. After a very short run these glass works were burned, and immediately rebuilt. After running two years and incurring a heavy loss to the Iron Company, they were closed. In the autumn of 1855 they were leased to James N. Richmond, of Cheshire, who had been experimenting for the Massachusetts Glass Co., at Cheshire, in the manufacture of rough or rolled plate. Mr. Richmond contracted to purchase the works and organized a stock company. The stock was principally taken in New York, and prominent in the management were Judge Lathrop and Richard Busted, of considerable political notoriety. The casting table and fixtures of the Cheshire company were removed to Lenox.

This was an entirely experimental business, nothing of the kind having ever before been attempted in this country, and they failed in the next year, 1856. The works returned into the hands of the iron company and were left idle until 1858, when the iron company resumed the manufacture of rough plate, and were very successful until 1862, when the works were again destroyed by fire, involving a heavy loss, and with no insurance. They were immediately rebuilt and successfully run till 1865, when the Lenox Plate Glass Company was organized and succeeded to the property and business. This company continued the business until December 30, 1869, when a new company, known as the Lenox Glass Company, was organized. One year previous to this, 1868, the "Lenox Crystal Glass Company," for the manufacture of cylinder or sheet glass, was organized. The new organization, the The Lenox Glass Company, was a very large concern with a large capital, and under it were consolidated both the Lenox Plate and the Lenox Crystal Companies, also a cryolite company from Philadelphia, hitherto known as the "Hot Cast Porcelain Company." The Lenox Glass Company attempted the polishing of plate and erected a fine building for this purpose. The company failed in 1872, and the property was sold and divided. The polishing works were bought by the Smith Paper Company, of Lee, and is now run by them as a paper mill. The cylinder or crystal works went into the hands of the Schanck estate, of New York, and the plate works to Mr. Theodore Roosevelt, of New York. Since the failure in 1872 the rough plate works have been run at intervals under a lease by Messrs. Servin & Averill, and by Mr. Servin alone, and are now run under a lease by Page, Harding & Co.

The sand used by these various works was principally obtained from the Washington mountain bed, situated just south of Lake Ashley, and it was from this bed that the Chester works obtained their sand in 1814. With the exception of the period included during our late war, the years between 1812 and 1820 seem to have been the most active in glass making, especially in Berkshire county, where, including Chester, five different works were established. From 1815 to 1845 glass works were in operation most of the time in Keene, N. H., and the sand was carted for many years for these works from the Lane bed in Cheshire. Cylinder glass was again made in Cheshire in 1860, by James N. Richmond, for a short time, and subsequently by James B. Dean and a few associates. The works have been converted to other purposes, and there is no present prospect of the revival of glass making in Cheshire, where it was established in 1813, and revived three different times since.

According to official statistics for 1880, there were then in the county 515 manufacturing establishments, representing an invested capital of $13,882,594.00, giving employment to 11,364 hands, to whom was paid $3,732,714.00. The total value of material used was $11,744,047.00, and the total product $19,876,467.00.

COURTS AND COUNTY BUILDINGS.

At the time the settlement of the county was commenced, and thence down to the period of the Revolution, the judicial system of the Province comprised a Superior Court of Judicature with original and appellate jurisdiction throughout the Province, corresponding in a great degree to the present Superior Judicial Court, and holding its sessions in the several counties; a court called the Superior Court of Common Pleas, for each county, consisting of four justices, of whom three were necessary to form a quorum, which had "cognizance of all civil actions, * * * * triable at the common law, of what nature, kind or quality, soever;" and a Court of Sessions in each county, comprising all of its justices of the peace, which had a limited criminal jurisdiction, and managed the prudential affairs of the county. Justices of the peace had a separate jurisdiction in minor matters, both criminal and civil, and from their judgment there was a right of appeal to the Common Pleas and Court of Sessions. There was also a Probate Court, having jurisdiction as at the present time. The Superior Court never held any session in Berkshire, but all its causes arising in this county were heard at the term held in the county of Hampshire. Judicial business was thus equalized, though the courts with which the inhabitants of the county were most familiar were those presided over by the local magistrates. All of the judicial officers were appointed by, and held their offices at, the pleasure of the crown, or its representative, the governor of the Province, with the consent of the council.

The county of Hampshire, as we have stated, was created in 1662, and although its boundaries were so loosely defined, it did in fact extend so far as to embrace territory now included in the States of New Hampshire and Connecticut, a portion of Worcester county and thence westward to the Province line. During all the period, therefore, which elapsed after the settlement of Berkshire county commenced, down to 1761, the inhabitants of its territory were within the county of Hampshire, and were amenable to the jurisdiction of its magistrates, though having magistrates among their own number who were called to attend on the courts and transact their public business at Springfield and Northampton. We find that during this period two of the justices of the Court of Common Pleas for Hampshire county were appointed from among the citizens of Berkshire county—Ephraim Williams, in 1741, and Joseph Dwight, in 1753.

Ephraim Williams, the first of those mentioned, was a son of Captain Isaac Williams, born at Newton, October 21, 1691. He married and settled in Newton and removed thence to Stockbridge, in 1739, having possibly lived for a time in Hatfield, whose pastor, Rev. William Williams, was his brother. He was appointed a justice of the peace in Middlesex in 1735. Tradition affirms that when he removed to Stockbridge he carried his younger children in panniers upon a horse. His was one of the four English families provided for in the original settlement of Stockbridge. His house in Stockbridge was on the hill overlooking the present village street, on or near the site afterward occupied by Rev. Dr. West. He was a man of decided position and influence in his new home, and retained his position of justice until 1749, when he resigned. He was a colonel in the local militia, and hence is sometimes confounded with his son of the same name, the founder of Williams college. He died while on a visit to his son, Dr. Thomas Williams, in August, 1754, and was buried at Deerfield. His descendants in the county are to be found in the Sergeant, Dwight, Hopkins and Sedgwick families, of Stockbridge.

The only persons whom we can find held the office of justice of the peace, then an office of great dignity and importance, resident in Berkshire county while it remained a part of Hampshire county, other than those referred to, were David Ingersoll and Jabez Ward. David Ingersoll was a son of Thomas Ingersoll, of Westfield, and after a residence in Springfield and Brookfield, he settled in Great Barrington, then a part of Sheffield, as early perhaps as 1735. He was vigorous, energetic, and perhaps audacious in his business enterprises. He became interested largely in real estate, and in or about 1739 he was the occupant, if not the owner, of the water-power now belonging to the Berkshire Woolen Co., and there erected a dam, saw and grist-mills, and also a forge and trip-hammer for the manufacture of bar iron. He was a captain of militia, and served as a selectman of the town of Sheffield. He was appointed a justice of the peace, September 8, 1749. His business enterprises eventually proved disastrous, however, resulting in his becoming involved in difficulties, whence he fell into such disrepute that he was removed from office in 1755. He died at Great Barrington, March 23, 1773, aged seventy-three years. Jabez Ward was probably a native of Marlboro, and removed with his large family to New Marlboro in 1744. He was prominent in the organization of his adopted town, and does not seem to have been re-commissioned after the incorporation of Berkshire county. He died at New Marlboro, August 29, 1767, aged sixty years.

The increase of population in Berkshire, its distance from the Connecticut river valley and the difficulty of communication attendant on the few and imperfect highways of the period, led, as we have stated, to the formation of Berkshire county, in 1761, the act of incorporation going into effect the 30th of June of that year. The first duty of the executive after the passage of this act of incorporation was to organize the new county by the appointment of its judicial and executive officers. The governor of the province was then Sir Francis Bernard, who was appointed by the crown in 1760. Thomas Hutchinson, a native Bostonian, long familiar with the people and politics of the province, was lieutenant-governor, and Israel Williams was member of the council from the western counties. Governor Bernard then, on the 24th of June, appointed Joseph Dwight, William Williams, John Ashley and Timothy Woodbridge, justices of the Court of Common Pleas; Joseph Dwight, judge; Elijah Dwight, register of probate; and Elijah Williams, sheriff.

The Court of Common Pleas, as then constituted, was exceptionally timely and fitted for its duties, though the members of the court at this period were not usually entitled to very high respect for judicial ability. The justices were not commonly professional men, nor familiar with judicial proceedings. Very few of the judges of the Superior Court were bred to the law. But of the new Berkshire judges, Dwight and Ashley were educated lawyers, and the former had had a long judicial career. Williams and Woodbridge were cultivated and intelligent men and had long been magistrates. The first meeting of the justices of this court is recored as follows:—

“Berkshire: At the first meeting of the Justices of the Inferior Court of Common Pleas, held at the dwelling of Timothy Woodbridge, Esq., of Stockbridge, in said county, on Monday, the 13th day of July, in the first year of the reign of George the Third, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, etc., Annoque Domini, 1761:

“ Present,	Joseph Dwight,	} Esq’s.
	William Williams,
	John Ashley,
	Timothy Woodbridge,

“After having taken and subscribed the oaths appointed by Act of Parliament, instead of the oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, the Test or Declaration in said Act contained, together with the oaths of Arbitration, the Previous oath respecting the Bills of Public Credit of Connecticut, Rhode Island and New Hampshire, and the oath of office, unanimously appointed Mr. Elijah Dwight to be the Clerk of said Court, who was sworn to the faithful discharge of his said office.”

At the same time and place the same persons under commissions as justices of the peace organized the Court of Sessions, appointed Elijah Dwight, clerk, and Mark Hopkins, register of deeds, the latter to hold the position until some person should be elected to the office.

By the statute incorporating the county, Great Barrington was made the shire town, and the courts were to be held alternately at that place and Pittsfield. The first regular session of the Court of Common Pleas was held at Great Barrington, on Tuesday, September 1, 1761, in the meeting-house which stood on the east side of the river, near the bridge in the upper part of the village. Seventy eight actions were entered, a jury was in attendance, and there were three trials. Mark Hopkins, who was admitted to the bar at this term, now tried and won his first case before a jury. The second session was held at Pittsfield, at the house of Col. Williams, one of the judges, on the first Tuesday of December, 1761, and this appears to have been the usual place of meeting in Pittsfield for a considerable period.

The Court of Sessions was held at the same time and places as the Court of Common Pleas and grand and traverse juries were in attendance, crimes and misdemeanors were inquired into and indictments duly presented and tried. The same Traverse jury appears to have served in both courts. The first criminal case tried by a jury was an appeal by one John Williams, Jr., who had been convicted before a justice of the peace of stealing two deer-skins. The jury acquitted him. The first indictment found by the grand jury was against Samuel Lee, of Great Barrington, for presuming to be an inn-holder and selling strong drink without a license. The first indictment returned by the grand jury which came to a hearing illustrates the spirit of the times. Hewitt Root, of Great Barrington, was indicted at the March term, 1762, for that “he did wittingly and wilfully suffer and permit singing, fiddling and dancing in his dwelling house, there being there a tavern or public house." He pleaded guilty and was fined 10 s. and costs. And a further illustration is found in the fact that at the same time Judges Dwight and Ashley were licensed as retailers of spirituous liquors, and their associates on the bench became their sureties.

The Court of Sessions made early provision for the erection of a court-house and jail at Great Barrington, but as late as 1765 they were still unfinished. Israel Dewey's house was fitted up and used as a jail for several years. The court-house was a plain unpretentious wooden structure, about 30x40 feet, and stood in and near the west side of Main street, in front of the entrance of Castle street, then only a lane leading to the residence of Rev. Samuel Hopkins. It was high between joists, finished on the ground floor only, and had neither cupola nor spire. The jail was a few rods southwest of the court-house and not far from the site of the present Episcopal church.

The records of the Court of Common Pleas show some peculiarities. There was not, so far we can learn, a practicing attorney residing in the county at the time of its organization, and the appearance in the court of lawyers from Hampshire county and the neighboring colony of Connecticut was continuous up to the period of the Revolution. Joseph Hawley, of Northampton, John Worthington and Moses Bliss, of Springfield, were quite constant in attendance, and more rarely John Bliss, of Springfield, Simeon Strong, of Amherst, Cyrus Marsh, of Windham Co., and John Canfield, of Sharon, Conn.

The justices of the court seem to have been accustomed to prosecute and defend their own cases in their own court, and the scarcity of lawyers led to the employment of non-professional attorneys. Jabez Ward, Esq., appeared often in behalf of his neighbors, as did Joseph Gilbert and William King, of Great Barrington, the latter a man of imperfect education but of fine natural endowments. The court was also empowered by law to make rules of practice. The wild and unsettled condition of the country is manifested by such descriptions of parties as the following, which are frequent: "Janathan Hinsdale, living on a tract of land north of Stockbridge, in the county of Berkshire, yeoman, etc." This was in 1763, and the locality the present village of Lenox. Again—"Asa Hills, living in the green woods, so-called, on the road leading from Pittsfield to No. 4, etc." The common law forms were closely followed, and great strictness in pleading seems to have been required, notwithstanding the provision of law enacted as early as 1701, that, "no writ * * * shall be abated * * * for any kind of circumstantial errors or mistakes when the person and case may be rightly understood and intended by the court, nor through defeat or want of form only, and the justices, on motion made in court, may order amendment thereof."

The first Probate Court was held at Great Barrington, July 30, 1761, and the court continued to be held there until after the death of Judge Dwight, when it was alternately held at Great Barrington, Stockbridge and Pittsfield. The sessions of the Court of Common Pleas terminated with the May term, 1774, the August term being broken up by troubles attending the general unsettled condition of the country just prior to the Revolution. Judge Dwight died in 1765, and was succeeded by Perez Marsh, otherwise the composition of the court was unchanged previous to the Revolution. Colonel William Williams succeeded Dwight as judge of Probate, and held his last court August 17, 1774. The office of registrar of deeds was kept open until July, 1776, perhaps the period when the time of the incumbent expired. From this time until 1780 no courts were held. In the meantime occurred the Revolutionary contest, and soon after its close events occurred which brought about the memorable Shays Rebellion. For this reason it may be well to insert a sketch of that affair at this point, though it properly belongs, perhaps, to another portion of our work. For the following notice thereof we are indebted to the History of Berkshire County, published in 1829:—

Shays Rebellion, though primarily brought about by the scarcity of money, caused by the interruption of trade and the drain upon the finances of the country, by the war, was largely owing to two circumstances in this county. One was, that when the Revolutionary war began, the people were laboring under the hardships of a new settlement; the calamities growing out of the war being, therefore, more deeply felt. The other circumstance was, that the inhabitants of this county were the first to put a stop to courts at the beginning of the Revolution, and were very backward in consenting to have them resume their functions. No probate courts were held here from 1774 until 1778, and even deeds were not recorded from 1776 until the last year mentioned. In the course of this year the several towns were consulted as to whether they would open and support the courts of Common Pleas and of Quarter Sessions, until a new constitution should be framed, and adopted by the people, and the point was decided in the negative by large majorities; as appears from the minutes of the county convention, which sat on the 26th of August. This convention drew up a petition to the General Court to call a convention of delegates from all the towns and places liable to taxation, to form a bill of rights and a constitution of government. In 1779, it is understood, the county assented by a small majority of their delegates in convention, after debating more than two days, that the courts might be opened, though no judicial proceedings were actually held until after the adoption of the constitution, in 1780. This suspension of the courts, however desirable the constitution was, besides occasioning a vast accumulation of causes for future adjudication, was unfriendly in its influence to order and good government.

After the constitution was adopted, courts were held according to the provisions which it contained, and justice again began to take its direct course. But in 1782 an act was passed, usually denominated "The Tender Act," providing that executions issued for private demands might be satisfied by neat cattle and other articles particularly enumerated, at an appraisal of impartial men under oath, which caused a multitude of law suits to be postponed until the year's existence of the law expired. This law furnished the first signal for hostilities between creditors and debtors, between the rich and the poor, the few and the many. The increase of civil actions gave employment to the practitioners at the bar, and induced an unusual number to enter into the profession. These became odious to debtors as the legal instruments of their distresses, and were held up at length as the proper objects of proscription by the disaffected generally. From the bar ill will was extended to the courts and to the senate, to the laws of the state and the provisions of the constitution. No mild measures were sufficient to satisfy the discontented. An evil spirit continued and spread, until the summer and autumn of 1786, when events rapidly hastened the crisis which took place the succeeding winter.

During the Revolutionary war, county conventions had been held for the purpose of devising measures for promoting the public welfare, and were instrumental of much good. They were now held to consider grievances, and became, in some instances, the instruments of unspeakable mischief. On the 22d of August a convention met at Hatfield, composed of delegates from fifty towns in the county of Hampshire, which drew up a catalogue of grievances and sent them into the counties of Worcester and Berkshire. The effect of this was soon visible, though the precise effect that followed may not have been intended by the convention. On the last Tuesday in this month a large number of insurgents, supposed to be near 1,500, assembled under arms at Northampton, took possession of the court-house, and effectually prevented the sitting of the court of common pleas and general sessions of the peace there at that time, as prescribed by law.

Upon this violence a proclamation was issued by the Governor, calling in strong and spirited language upon all the officers and citizens of State to suppress such treasonable proceedings. Notwithstanding this, more than 300 insurgents appeared the next week at the court-house in Worcester, where the court of common pleas and general sessions of the peace were to be held, and by a line of bayonets prevented the judges from entering the door. Though the judges went to a neighboring house, opened court and adjourned until next morning, the violence of the mob soon obliged the court of common pleas to adjourn without day, and the court of sessions to adjourn until the 21st of November.

During the last of August, a county convention was held at Lenox, which took a much more justifiable course than the convention in Hampshire. Though a rage for reformation was conspicuous in it, yet they passed many judicious resolutions, and among others, that they would use their influence to support the courts in the exercise of their legal powers, and endeavor to quiet the agitated spirits of the people. The insurgents, however, assembled in force to the number of eight hundred at Great Barrington soon after, and not only prevented the sitting of the courts, which were so obnoxious to them, but broke open the jail and liberated the prisoners. They also com pelled three of the judges of the Court of Common Pleas to sign an obligation, that they would not act under the commissions until grievances were redressed. It, however, in justice to the insurgents, ought to be mentioned that Hon. Elijah Dwight, then too a member of the senate, upon a proper resistance, was not compelled to subscribe to the obligation.

Hitherto the insurgents had directed their efforts against the inferior courts, but they were now determined to prevent the sitting of the Supreme Judicial Court, that they might not be indicted for obstructing the administration of justice. This court was about to sit at Springfield, and the Governor ordered Maj. Gen. William Shepard to occupy the court-house with 600 men, which was accordingly done. But on the day of the court's sitting, Shays appeared with a body of men equally numerous, greatly incensed that the government had taken possession of the court-house. The insurgents sent a request to the judges that none of the late rioters should be indicted, who returned a firm reply, purporting that they should execute the laws of the country agreeably to their oaths. But such was the confusion attending the presence of so many armed men, who were continually increasing, and the panel of jurors not being filled, that the court adjourned on the third day, after resolving that it was expedient to proceed to the county of Berkshire.

When the time arrived for holding this court in Great Barrington, the malcontents, pretending the resolution of the court was merely intended to deceive them, assembled there in considerable numbers, became extremely riotous, and obliged several persons, who were obnoxious to them, to fly. One gentleman, who sustained a very honorable office, was pursued by armed men in various directions, houses were searched, and, in some instances, citizens fired upon.

Some time after this, and while the house of representatives (for the legislature had been convened) was debating respecting the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, some of the insurgents, alarmed by the circumstance, sent a circular letter to the selectman of many towns in the county of Hampshire requiring them immediately to assemble their inhabitants, to see that they were furnished with arms and ammunition according to law. They also ordered the militia in some instances, to be furnished with sixty rounds of powder, and to stand ready to march at a moment's warning.

On the 21st of November, when the Court of General Sessions were to meet according to adjournment at Worcester, the seat of justice was filled with armed men; the justices were obliged to open at a tavern, and all the exertions of the sheriff were insufficient to procure them entrance into the court-house. Immediately on receiving news of this procedure, the Governor issued his orders as commander-in-chief, called upon the major-generals of the militia immediately to see that their several divisions were completely organized and equipped, and ready to take the field at the shortest notice.

In the early part of December some hundreds of the insurgents collected at Worcester, and on the 16th of the month Shays assembled 300 malcontents at Springfield, took possession of the court-house, and prevented the court, which was to sit then at that place, from proceeding to business.

On the first of January the Governor and council, in view of these transactions, determined to raise a body of men from different counties, to suppress the insurrections which were now taking place with alarming frequency. Seven hundred from the county of Suffolk, 500 from Essex, 800 from Middlesex, 1,200 from Hampshire, and 1,200 from Worcester, the whole amounting to 4,400, rank and file. Two companies of artillery were ordered to be detached from Suffolk, and a like number from Middlesex. The troops of the first three named counties were ordered to rendezvous in the vicinity of Boston, on the 19th of January; those from Hampshire, at Springfield, on the 18th; those from Worcester were to join the troops from the eastern counties at the town of Worcester, and the whole were to be raised for thirty days, unless sooner discharged.

On the 19th of January, 1787, his Excellency directed Major-General Benjamin Lincoln, of Hingham, whose military reputation and mildness of temper admirably fitted him for the delicate and important trust, to take command of this respectable course. In his instructions, the Governor informed him that the great objects to be effected were, to protect the judicial courts, particularly those which were about to be held in the county of Worcester, should the justices of those courts request his aid; "to assist the civil magistrates in executing the laws, and in repelling or apprehending all and every such person and persons as should in a hostile manner attempt and enterprise the destruction, detriment or annoyance of the commonwealth; and also to aid them in apprehending the disturbers of the public peace, as well as all such persons as might be named in the State warrants, that had been or might be committed to any civil officer or officers, or to any other person to execute."

In case he should judge it necessary, the governor authorized him to call upon the major-general for further and effectual aid; and while he confided much to his discretion, suggested that it might be necessary to march a respectable force into the western counties. The raising and movement of these troops produced strong sensations among the malcontents, and prompted them to various expedients and efforts, in hope of securing themselves from punishment, and of distressing and weakening the friends of government.

Before the troops under Gen. Lincoln marched from Roxbury, Gen. Shepard had been ordered to take possession of the post at Springfield. He soon collected 900 men, and afterwards 200 more, the continental arsenal furnishing them with a sufficient number of field pieces, and such equipments as were wanted. It became an object with the insurgents to gain this post, if possible, before the arrival of Lincoln's army. Their movements, therefore, were towards West Springfield on the one side, where about 400 men were collected under the command of Luke Day; and towards the Boston road on the other, where 1,100 more were headed by Shays himself. Besides these, a party of about 400 from Berkshire, under the command of Eli Parsons, were stationed in the north parish of Springfield.

Shays proposed to attack the post on the 25th of January, and wrote to Day on the 24th to co-operate with him. In a letter which was intercepted by Gen. Shepard, Day replied that he could not assist him on the 25th, but would the day after. On the 25th however, Shays, confident of his aid, about four o'clock in the afternoon, approached the arsenal where the militia were posted, with his troops in open column. Gen. Shepard sent several times to know the intention of the enemy, and to warn them of their danger, and received for an answer, in substance, that they would have the barracks, and they immediately marched onward to within 250 yards of the arsenal. Another message was sent, informing them that the militia was posted there by order of the Governor and of congress, and that if they approached any nearer they would be fired upon. One of their leaders replied, "that is all we want," and they immediately advanced one hundred yards. Gen. Shepard was now compelled to fire; but, in hope of intimidating them, ordered the first two shots to be directed over the heads, which, however, instead of retarding, quickened their approach; and the artillery was at last pointed at the center of their column which produced its effect; a cry of murder was raised in the rear of the insurgents; their whole body was thrown into the greatest confusion, and in spite of all the efforts of Shays to form them, the troops retreated precipitately about ten miles to Ludlow, leaving three of their men dead on the field, and one wounded. Had Gen. Shepard been disposed to pursue, he might easily have cut many of them in pieces. But the object was not to destroy them, but to bring them to consideration and amendment.

Notwithstanding this retreat, there was serious apprehensions of another attack from the insurgents; for Day was now on the west side of Connecticut river with his men, and Parsons at Chickopee, whither the party of Shays repaired, after losing 200 men by desertion, on the 26th. This apprehension was allayed the next day, at noon, by the arrival of Lincoln's army.

Gen. Lincoln had reached Worcester on the 22d; had protected the courts there, and learning the situation of Gen. Shepard had started for Springfield on the 25th, having dispatched orders to Gen. Brooks to proceed to the same place as speedily as possible, with the Middlesex militia. Although the march from Worcester was very fatiguing, the weather being uncommonly severe, the army were ordered under arms at half past three o'clock the same day on which they arrived; most of them were marching across the river to attack Day, while Gen. Shepard, with the Hampshire troops, moved up the river to prevent Shays from joining him. The party under Day speedily fled, with scarcely a show of opposition, and made the best of their way to Northampton. In like manner the party under Shays fled the next day, as the army approached them, retreating through South Hadley to Amherst.

On his arrival at Amherst, Gen. Lincoln, finding that Shays had passed through the place with most of his men towards Pelham, too long to be overtaken, gave up the pursuit and directed his march to Hadley, the nearest place he could find cover for his troops. The next morning, information being received that a small number of Gen. Shepard's men had been taken at Southampton, and that some of the enemy were still there, a party was sent after them, who overtook this body of insurgents at Middlefield, at midnight, captured fifty nine prisoners and nine sleigh loads of provisions, and returned to the army the day following.

The whole force of the insurgents having taken post on two high hills in Pelham, called east and west hills, which were rendered difficult of access by reason of the depth of snow around them, Gen. Lincoln, on the 30th of January, directed a letter to Capt. Shays and the officers commanding the men in arms against the government, calling upon them to disband their deluded followers, threatening them with apprehension in case of refusal, etc., which led on to an unsatisfactory correspondence. The time for an adjourned session of the legislature soon arrived, and on the 3d of February a sufficient number of representatives were collected for the transaction of business. On this day the Governor laid before the assembly a full view of the state of things in the commonwealth, and the day after, a declaration of rebellion was unanimously passed in the senate, and concurred by the lower house. A petition dated the 30th of January, and purporting to be from the officers of the counties of Worcester, Hampshire, Middlesex and Berkshire, at arms, in Pelham, was sent to the general court, acknowledging their error in taking up arms, and promising to lay them down and return to their homes, on condition that a pardon should be granted the insurgents for their past offences.

They did not wait, however, the result of this petition, but on the 3d of February moved their forces from Pelham to Petersham. Gen. Lincoln, informed of this, marched for Petersham on the evening of the same day, and by a rapid movement of thirty miles, in which much was suffered, the latter part of the way from a violent snow storm, came upon them by surprise on the 4th and put them to flight. One hundred and fifty were taken prisoners, many retired to their homes, and the rest, including all the principal officers, fled into the states of New Hampshire, Vermont and New York. The rebels being thus dispersed, Gen. Lincoln, after dismissing three companies of artillery, and ordering two regiments to Worcester, directed his attention toward Northfield, in the neighborhood of which many of the fugitives had taken shelter. But an express arrived with a letter from Maj. Gen. John Patterson, the commander of the militia in Berkshire, which led him to take a different course.

Some time previous, while the army was marching from the vicinity of Boston, the disaffected in this county, who had not proceeded to Hampshire, undertook to support their cause by appearing under arms in their own neighborhood, while the friends of good order adopted measures to oppose them. Should they be driven from the counties eastward, it was apprehended they would collect in some of the fastnesses on the Green Mountain range, on the borders between Hampshire and Berkshire, draw their subsistence from towns in the vicinity well affected to government, and take, perhaps, some of the more important characters as hostages. To secure themselves, and promote the public welfare, therefore, a voluntary association was formed, amounting to about 500 men, comprising the most respectable citizens. One company of these volunteers, containing forty or fifty men, was formed in Sheffield, under Capt. Joseph Goodrich. But so great was the agitation in that town, (and many other towns were in commotion,) and such was the danger of their being attacked by their fellow citizens that they did not march to Stockbridge, the place of rendezvous, until a company went down from Great Barrington and joined them. To show their spirit and determination at this juncture, 150 or 200 insurgents assembled at West Stockbridge village. It was deemed indispensable to disperse them before their numbers should be increased. The companies at Stockbridge were formed into three divisions, and ordered to march to that place in the directions which the road naturally pointed out. The central division took the common road to the village, over the mountains; another, under Capt. Goodrich, took a more southern route, and the third, under Maj. Rowley, of Richmond, a more northern. On the approach of an advanced party from the central division, consisting only of thirty-seven infantry, and seven gentlemen on horseback, they were fired upon by the sentries, and the insurgents were at once formed in good order, and were commanded to fire. But their situation so affected them that they apparently staggered. Advantage of this pause was taken by Judge Sedgwick, whom they well knew, who rode to their front and directed them to lay down their arms, which many of them did, while others fled. A firing, however, took place between scattering parties on both sides, and two of the insurgents were wounded. The southern and northern divisions, having further to march, did not arrive at this place in season, but had an opportunity for taking many of the insurgents prisoners as they fled. On the return of the divisions to Stockbridge it was found that eighty-four, among whom was their leader, had been taken. These were kept under guard, while the troops traversed the county.

The express related this affair to Gen. Lincoln, and also stated that the insurgents afterwards collected at Adams, but upon the approach of Gen. Patterson separated, intending to collect again at Williamstown; that here also upon his appearing they again scattered; that there seemed, notwithstanding, such a disposition in them to embody, in order to prevent the sitting of the courts, and that such numbers were actually on their way to Washington, under Maj. Wiley, that Gen. Patterson thought his situation unsafe, and earnestly requested assistance from the army. On receiving this communication, in connection with Gen. Patterson's letter, Gen. Lincoln sent back the following reply:—

PETERSHAM, February 6, 1787.

"Dear Sir :—I have been honored with the receipt of yours of yesterday's date. Shays Saturday afternoon left Pelham. In the evening I received information of his movement, put the troops in motion, and arrived here Sunday morning, nine o'clock. Upon our approach, he left this place in a very precipitate manner. One hundred and fifty men fell into our hands. He moved through Athol northerly; the last information I had of him was near Chesterfield, N. H., with about one hundred men. The rest were dispersed, and many returned to their homes. This gives me an opportunity to remove as fast as possible towards you. I shall commence my march for Hadley to-morrow morning. No time will be lost in throwing a very sufficient force into your county. shall have the pleasure to come with the troops. The general court have conducted with great spirit and dignity; they have fully approved the measures taken—they will provide for the expense of it. They have declared a rebellion to exist, and have ordered the Governor to keep up a force until the rebellion is fully crushed.

"Take some strong post, if you consider yourself in danger, until I can relieve you. Should you think it advisable to attack the insurgents prior thereto, warn them of their danger; and that the general court has declared a rebellion to exist, and that if they do not surrender they will be considered as open enemies and treated as such.

"I am, etc.,

"B. LINCOLN."

"Gen. Patterson."

According to his promise, Gen. Lincoln marched immediately for this county, passing through Amherst, Hadley, Chesterfield, Worthington, etc., to Pittsfield, while another division of the army, under Gen. Shepard, marched by a different route to the same place. But before their arrival a body of insurgents, amounting to about 250 men, who had gathered in Lee in order to stop the courts, agreed to disperse, providing the commander of a body of militia, consisting of about 300, collected to oppose them, would use his influence, should they be pursued by the government, to have them tried within their own county; and so the matter was adjusted. From Pittsfield Gen. Lincoln detached a party under the command of the adjutant-general, to Dalton, after Wiley; and another, under Capt. Francis, to Williamstown, on a similar undertaking. Both returned the next day, the first with six prisoners, (one of whom was Wiley's son, Wiley himself having escaped,) and the other with fourteen.

From these events, however, we are not to infer that the spirit of the insurgents was altogether broken. The following letter from Eli Parsons, probably intended for the disaffected in Hampshire, as well as some other events which followed, show the contrary:—

"BERKSHIRE, February 15, 1787.

"FRIENDS AND FELLOW SUFFERERS.—Will you now tamely suffer your arms to be taken from you, your estates to be confiscated, and even swear to support a constitution and form of government, and likewise a code of laws, which common sense and your consciences declare to be iniquitous and cruel? And can you bear to see and hear the yeomanry of this commonwealth being parched and cut to pieces by the cruel and merciless tools of tyrannical power, and not resent it even unto relentless bloodshed? Would to God I had the tongue of a ready writer, that I might impress on your minds the idea of the obligation that you, as citizens of a republican government, are under, to support those unalienable rights and privileges that the God of nature hath entitled you to. Let me now persuade you by all the sacred ties of friendship, which natural affection inspires the human heart with, immediately to turn out and assert your rights.

“The first step that I would recommend, is to destroy Shepard’s army, then proceed to the county of Berkshire, as we are now collecting at New Lebanon, in New York, and Pawnal, in Vermont, with a determination to carry our point if fire, blood and carnage will effect it. Therefore, we beg that every friend will immediately proceed to the county of Berkshire, and help us to “Burgoyne” Lincoln and his army. I beg that this may immediately circulate through your country.

“I am, gentlemen, in behalf of myself and other officers, your humble servant, ELI PARSONS.”

The volunteer companies in Berkshire, on Gen. Lincoln’s arrival, returned to their homes. The time for which the militia was detached expired on the 21st of February, and the troops under the new enlistment, which had been ordered, did not assemble in large numbers at once. In one instance the General was left with only about thirty men. Though the rebels may not have known precisely his situation, they were watching for opportunities to do mischief.

On the 26th of February Capt. Holcomb marched from Sheffield to headquarters with a company of drafted men, with the best arms that could be obtained. Learning this fact, a body of the insurgents, under Capt. Perez Hamlin, who had been lurking about the borders of New York, eighty or ninety in number, made an interruption the night following into Stockbridge, at midnight, which they pillaged at their pleasure, and took a great number of the most respectable inhabitants. The next morning they proceeded with their booty and their prisoners to Great Barrington, where they halted at a public house. News of this interruption was soon communicated to Sheffield, runners spread the news, and the citizens friendly to government met at the center, with such arms as they could muster, and about one o’clock, being joined by Captains Dwight and Ingersoll, and a small company from Great Barrington, who had fled before the insurgents, they were prepared to advance northwards to meet them. The whole body, about eighty, was under the command of Col. John Ashley.

The insurgents were now supposed to be coming down to Sheffield, and various rumors were abroad as to the course they were taking. It was at first said they were making their way westward, through Egremont and out of the county. But it was found that they were marching towards Sheffield, and in a little valley near the western line of that town the foes met, and there immediately occurred the most severe skirmish during the insurrection.

The insurgents got in the rear of Col. Ashley’s troops, surprising them. A halt was immediately made, and an attempt made to form the companies in order. After a few moments of great confusion, Capt. Goodrich directed the Sheffield company to follow him through a lot of girdled trees, on the west side of the road; and the Great Barrington company, under Capt. Ingersoll, advanced through a copse of timber on the east. By this time a scattering fire commenced, and continued while the companions were advancing, with a rapid march, fifty or sixty rods, when a well directed fire from eight or ten, who were foremost, upon a considerable body of insurgents in the road, discomfited them and put them to flight. The whole body dispersed at once, fleeing in different directions. They left two of their number dead near the place of action, and more than thirty were wounded, among whom was Hamlin, their captain, and a man by the name of Rathbun, who died some time after of his wounds. A body of men coming on from Lenox, under the command of Capt. William Walker, immediately after the skirmish, enabled the conquerors to take more than fifty prisoners. The loss of the militia was two killed and one wounded. One of the killed was Mr. Porter, of Great Barrington; the other was Solomon Glezen, taken prisoner at Stockbridge. The person wounded was Dr. Burghardt, of Richmond. He was in the company of Capt. Walker, and was wounded by a small party who fired upon them before they arrived at the spot where the action was fought.

The insurgents generally showed great want of firmness and perseverance in the actions in which they were engaged, owing in part to their being poorly officered, but more, probably, to serious doubts concerning the lawfulness of their proceedings, and apprehension of their proving finally mischievous to themselves. After this affair at Sheffield, Gen. Lincoln dispatched an express to the Governor of New York, informing him of the incursion into the county, and of the continuance and support of the rebels in one district of that State; which produced prompt and energetic measures for dispersing or apprehending the m. The consequence was that they fled to Vermont, where the government had been previously requested to lend their aid in apprehending the rebel ringleaders, and where a proclamation from the Governor was issued about this time against them. Other States in the neighborhood also adopted measures for suppressing the rebellion.

The cause of the insurgents had been for some time sinking. Very many privates gave up their arms, submitted to government, and took the oath of allegiance, agreeably to the proclamation which Gen. Lincoln issued at Hadley, both before and after his arrival at Pittsfield. Indemnity was granted afterwards to 790 persons concerned in the rebellion, by him and two other gentlemen, associated with him by the general court for that purpose. It was judged necessary, however, to take a different course with some who had been more deeply concerned in opposing the government. Early in the spring, therefore, the supreme judicial court proceeded to try a number charged with treason. Six were then convicted of this offence in this county, six in Hampshire, one in Worcester and one in Middlesex, all of whom were sentenced to death. Besides these large numbers were convicted of seditious words and practices, many of whom were persons of consequence, and one a member of the legislature, who was sentenced to sit on the gallows with a rope about his neck, to pay a fine of £50, to give bonds for keeping the peace and for maintaining good behavior for five years; which sentence was put into execution. Of those condemned to death, four in this county and four in Hampshire received a free pardon on the 30th of April; and the rest on the 17th of May, were reprieved until the 21st of June, then until the 2d of August, and then again until the 20th of September. Those confined in Berkshire finally escaped from jail, and the others, as reasons for severe measures had now passed away, were pardoned. One man, however, in Berkshire, sentenced to death in October, was favored only with a commutation of punishment, to hard labor for seven years.

In September, 1787, the military forces which had been kept up in the western counties, where the insurrections principally took place, were all discharged, and peace and tranquility were considered as restored. Too much, however, had been said and done to permit the feelings of the people at once to become altogether friendly. Unhappy jealousies remained in neighborhoods and towns. The clergy who had favored the Revolution, opposed the rebellion, and thereby offended, in some instances, many of their parishioners. This is understood to have occasioned the dismissal of the ministers in Egremont and Alford. The Congregational church of the former town remained destitute of a pastor for nearly thirty years, and the church in the latter town, after dwindling for a time, became extinct. From the same cause, disaffection arose against their minister from a part of the congregation in Sandisfield. It was generally thought, however, that this rebellion impressed the importance of an energetic national government, and hastened the formation and adoption of the present constitution of the United States.

In November, 1782, upon petition of representatives from this county, the legislature appointed a committee to take a general view of Berkshire, and to determine where the courts should thereafter be held. The committee examined the county, conversed with the gentlemen of intelligence in different places, and met a delegation from twenty towns, at Stockbridge, in which the subject of the future seat of the courts was largely discussed. The committee decided upon Lenox as the most central town, and advised that a courthouse and jail be erected there. This report was accepted and an act passed directing the courts to be held at Lenox after the 1st day of January, 1784. In May, 1783, however, a petition was set on foot at an adjourned court of sessions in Great Barrington, praying the general assembly to postpone the removal of the courts to Lenox indefinitely, on the alleged ground that the county was unable to erect the necessary buildings. The result of this petition in the assembly was the postponement of the removal of the courts to Lenox for two years only, until the 1st of January, 1786.

In the autumn of 1784 an effort was made to have the courts held alternately at Great Barrington and Lanesboro; and in 1785 a greater effort was made to have the court of Common Pleas held alternately at Stockbridge and Pittsfield, to have the Supreme Court held at Stockbridge, and that established as the shire town, both of which failed. In the beginning of 1787 an order was issued by the legislature for the Court of Common Pleas to be held at Lenox in February, and the Supreme Court in May of that year, and in 1790 the prisoners were ordered to be removed from the jail in Great Barrington to Lenox, as soon as the new jail should be prepared. The new buildings were commenced in the spring of 1788, and finished in 1791.

From that time until 1868, Lenox remained the shire town of the county, though a conflict was kept up between the northern and southern portions of the county in consequence thereof. In 1868, Pittsfield, after several unsuccessful attempts, was at last successful in securing to itself the honor of being appointed the shire town, where the courts have since been held.

The Court of Common Pleas, as established in 1761, was continued until 1811, during which time the following named judges officiated, the court consisting sometimes of three judges, and sometimes of four, three constituting a quorum.

In 1811 the State was districted and a Circuit Court of Common Pleas established for each district, the western district comprehending Worcester, Hampshire, Franklin, Hampden and Berkshire counties, the only judge of which from Berkshire County was Ezekiel Brown, of Pittsfield, serving from 1811 to 1814. In 1820 this court was abolished and a Court of Common Pleas established for the State, which held three sessions in the county annually, commencing on the fourth Monday in February, June and October, until 1859, when it was abolished and the present Superior Court established, Julius Rockwell, of Lenox, and James M. Barker, of Pittsfield, now being justices thereof. Sessions of the Superior Court are now held at Pittsfield, for civil business, on the fourth Mondays of February, June and October; for criminal business, on the second Mondays of January and July. The Supreme Judicial Court holds its sessions at the same place on the second Tuesdays of May and September.

Prior to September, 1804, the judges of the Supreme Court had a clerk of their own, who attended them in their circuits through the commonwealth. Since that time the clerks of the Court of Common Pleas, and later of the Superior Court, have been clerks of the Supreme Court. The clerks from 1761 have been as follows:—

Elijah Dwight, of Great Barrington.....	1761-81
Henry W. Dwight, of Stockbridge.....	1781-1803
Joseph Woodbridge, of Stockbridge.....	1803-21
Charles Sedgwick, of Lenox.....	1821-56

The Probate Court and Court of Insolvency, though distinct in their jurisdiction, powers, proceedings and practice, have the same judge and registrars. Probate courts are held at four places in the county, as follows: At Pittsfield, on the first Tuesdays of January, February, March, April, May, June, September, October and December, on the third Tuesday of July, and on the Wednesday next after the first Monday of November; at Lee, on the Wednesdays next after the first Tuesdays of January, April and October, and on the Wednesdays next after the third Tuesday of July; at Adams, on the Thursday next after the first Tuesdays of January and October, on the Wednesday next after the first Tuesday of March, and on the Thursday next after the third Tuesday of July; and at Great Barrington on the Wednesdays next after the first Tuesdays of February, May, September and December. The judges of the probate, since the establishment of the court in 1761, have been as follows:—

From 1761 until 1790 there was but one registry of deeds in the county, at Great Barrington, where Mark Hopkins served from 1761 to 1776, and Moses Hopkins from 1778 to 1790. In 1790 the county was divided into three districts, the Middle, Northern and Southern, the towns belonging to the middle district now being Lenox, Pittsfield, Richmond, Stockbridge, Tyringham, Lee, Otis, Becket, Washington, Hinsdale, Dalton and Peru; all the towns north of this constitute the Northern District, and those to the south the Southern District. At the time the division was made the proceedings and records were all removed to Lenox, where they were kept until 1868, when they were removed to Pittsfield, there being an office in each of the other districts, however, at Great Barrington and Adams, respectively. The registrars of the Middle Districts have been as follows:—

Caleb Hyde, of Lenox.....	1790-96
Samuel Quincey, of Lenox.....	1796-1801

Previous to 1761 only five persons resided within the limits of the county who were engaged after their settlement here, in the practice of law, viz.: John Huggins, John Ashley, Elisha Huggins, Mark Hopkins and Theodore Sedgwick. For a list of the present members of the Berkshire bar, see the Classified Business Directory, in part second of this book.

In 1868, when it was decided to remove the seat of justice from Lenox to Pittsfield, the clause—"on condition that the town shall furnish suitable sites for the court-house and jail, and provide rooms for the courts until the court-house shall be completed," was inserted. The town readily accepted the conditions, and appointed the following committee to select and purchase the

The legislature granted $350,000.00, to be assessed on the county, for the erection of the buildings. Of this sum $190,000 was expended on the court-house, and the remainder on the jail and house of correction building. Subsequently $28,000.00 were appropriated for furnishing the buildings, of which the greater portion was expended for the court-house. The buildings were completed in 1871, the court-house being one of the finest in the State, both in point of utility and beauty. It is constructed of white marble from the quarries of Sheffield, resting on a basement of light-blue marble from the same town. It was first occupied at the September term of the Supreme Court in 1871. The jail is constructed of marble and pressed brick, having all the modern improvements of prison architecture. It has 129 cells, and now (July, 1884) has 100 inmates, most of whom are employed in the manufacture of ladies' and children's shoes, under contract by George C. Hall & Co., of Pittsfield. The institution is under the immediate supervision of Hiram B. Wellington, sheriff of the county, whose twenty-three years experience as sheriff and deputy sheriff well fits him for the position.

There have been eight executions in the county for capital offences, as follows: John Bly and Charles Rose, December 6, 1787, for burglary committed in Lanesboro, under pretense of getting supplies for men engaged in Shays Insurrection; Ephraim Wheeler, February 20, 1806, for outraging his own daughter; Ezra Hutchinson, November 18, 1813, for rape; Peter Johnson, a negro, November 25, 1819, for rape; Samuel P. Charles, an Oneida Indian, November 22, 1826, for murdering a negro in Richmond; James Callender, a mulatto, in November, 1863, for the murder of Mrs. Jones and her two children, of Otis; and John Ten Eyck, August 16, 1878, for the murder of Mr. and Mrs. Stillman, of Sheffield. All of these executions, except the latter, which occurred at Pittsfield, were performed in Lenox.

INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS.

One of the first requisites after the settlement of the wilderness country was begun was the establishment of roads, or avenues of communication. The embryo road, however, was nothing more than a bridle-path, or blazed track, through the forest, in many instances following the course of some old Indian trail. As the settlement increased, these paths were enlarged, extended and improved, some of them ultimately becoming the greatly improved turnpike, which, during the latter quarter of the 18th and first quarter of the 19th centuries, were considered the very acme of convenient modes of intercommunication; and even our modern fancy, in these days of speed, push, force and power, turns with a sigh to the "good old staging days," when the sharp crack of the driver's whip and the resonant toot of his horn blended in a thrilling music long since drowned in the shrill shriek of the dashing, snorting locomotive.

It must be remembered that the approach of civilization towards Berkshire county, or to Hampshire county as it then was, extended from the east and from the west—by the Dutch up the valley of Hudson river, and by the puritans from Massachusetts Bay into the valley of the Connecticut. The great approach from the east was the well known "Great Trail," or "Bay Path," which extended through Grafton, Sutton and Oxford, in Worcester county, to Hartford and Springfield. Over it passed Rev. Joseph Hooker and his flock on their way to Hartford to found a new State, and also William Pynchon, the father of Springfield, two and a half centuries ago, nearly one and a half of which it was the main thoroughfare between the people of Massachusetts Bay and those of the Connecticut Valley; and over this well-trodden course, also, wearily plodded many of those grand ones who opened new townships among the densely wooded hills of what is now proud old Berkshire county, bringing with them those stern, rigid principles of integrity, justice and industry, upon whose broad, deep foundation rests her fair renown of today.

The first road into Berkshire county, of which we find any mention, is that "from Westfield to Sheffield," which is mentioned in a report of a committee to the General Court, January 15, 1735, as follows: "The committee are of the opinion that there should be four new townships opened upon the road between Westfield and Sheffield, etc.," (see sketch of Sandisfield). Again, in a petition by Samuel Winchell, then living west of Sheffield, February 8, 1743, mention is made that he "settled at Twelve Mile pond [Brewer's], on the road from Westfield to Housatonic; at that time there was no other person lived on that road, etc."

The thoroughfare thus mentioned, after passing through Blandford, enters the country at East Otis, formerly making a detour to the north of the hotel, thence in near the present traveled way for a short distance; thence by a direct westerly course, it crossed the Farmington river, a little more than a mile south of Otis Center; thence, continuing westerly over a steep hill, through the northerly part of Sandisfield, between the two Spectacle ponds to a junction with the present road from Cold Spring to West Otis, about a mile southeast of the latter place. Within this distance, about six miles, which is now almost entirely abandoned, there were at the time of the Revolution, four hotels, at one or more of which Burgoyne and portions of his troops and captors, en-route to Boston, were fed and lodged. From West Otis the road followed nearly the course of the present traveled way, through Monterey, passing Three Mile hill, through the village of Great Barrington, across Green river, through North Egremont and thence into New York state. With the exception of about a mile and a half of new road in the westerly part of Monterey, laid north of the old course, the old thoroughfare can be readily traced as one drives over the present carriage way.

Unwritten historic lore is thickly woven about this old highway—the first road established in Berkshire county. It was first an Indian trail, and doubtless some old forest monarch along its course, could it speak, would rehearse strange tales of the Redman's wiles, his wild loves and savage wooings. Next we find it the probable route of Maj. Talcott, in his pursuit and capture of a body of Indians in Southern Berkshire, in 1676, the first whites known to have invaded the territory of Berkshire county. Later on it afforded a mode of entry to the founders of most of the towns of Southern Berkshire, and over it passed the commerce between them and their neighbors east and west. Later still, it witnessed the marshalled array of Gen. Amherst and his army, in 1759, the soldiers of the Revolution, Burgoyne and his captured army enroute to Boston, the soldiers of the war of 1812-15, while many a weary pilgrim, long since passed away, enjoyed the hospitality of its numerous taverns of by-gone days. Yes, strange tales, indeed, could that old forest monarch tell.

In 1742 or '43 a branch from this road, commencing about a mile east of Brewer's pond and passing north of Mount Hunger, through old Tyringham Center (about a mile northwest of the present center of Monterey), thence over the high mountains in the northwestern part of that town, through Bear-town to Stockbridge, was constructed. A branch leaving it about half a mile northwest of the old center aforesaid, and passing Artemas Dowd's and William Miner's, to a junction with the old Albany road, about half a mile east of the line between Great Barrington and Monterey, was probably one of the early important roads, made necessary by the location of Tyringham Center, a mile north of the Albany road.

The next road through the county was probably along the Deerfield valley, over the Hoosac mountain, passing Fort Massachusetts, through Williamstown, etc. The fort being built in 1744, a road or trail was probably in use then. In 1752 a grant of 200 acres, including the fort, to Ephraim Williams, stipulates that he shall "be required to keep an open way two rods wide, on the northerly side of the said fort, leading towards Albany." In 1746 Samuel Rice petitioned for a grant of 200 acres, on condition that he "build a new and better road over the Hoosac mountain."

"In obedience to the note and order of the Honorable House of Representatives, I set out on Monday, the 23d day of March, to look out and make a horse road from Northampton towards Albany. Rode to Stockbridge, got two Indians to assist me, and traveled to a place called by the Indians Cakemuck, which is about fifteen miles from Albany and lies upon the river that runs through Kinderhook. From thence we began to mark the road and came about five miles, along by said river, most of the way in intervale land. We crossed said river twice, having good fording at both places. Soon after we left the river we came to a large hill, but the ascent was gradual and the hill not steep, so that I believe there may be a good cart road over it. About a mile east of the foot of the hill we came to the west line of the Pontoosuck township [Pittsfield] and had good traveling till we came to Pontoosuck river, which was in the northeast part of the township. The river where we crossed it, was about four rods wide, the bottom good, and I believe may be easily forded in most seasons of the year, although sometimes it may be difficult to ford it. From Pontoosuck to the east branch of the Westfield river, which is about seventeen miles, the land is generally hilly and very thick set with timber, so that I believe there cannot be a good, pleasant, easy road there, but I believe there may be, with a little cost, as good a road, if not better, than that between Westfield and Sheffield. Westfield river we crossed in five branches. The westernmost branch is but about a rod wide and the water shallow; the next east of it is much the largest of all the branches, but the banks and bottom are good, so that I believe it may be used almost any time, as I myself, and the Indians that were with me, waded it the first day of April and it was not then three feet deep; the next branch to it is not half so big, and the bottom very good; the easternmost branch, save one, is, where we crossed it, about twenty feet wide, and the bottom is rocky, so that in high water it will be bad crossing, but there is a very good place to make a bridge, and it may be done with a very little charge; the easternmost branch is about two rods wide, and the bottom is very good. From Westfield river to Northampton the road is feasible and has few hills. The road we have marked crosses the river that runs to Northampton five times, but the river is so small that it may be forded at any time. The distance from Northampton to Albany, to go in the road we have marked, is, I suppose, about sixty-three miles, and I believe there is no part of the way but a team might draw two-thirds of a load, if the way be cleared.

“ERASTUS HAWLEY.

“To the Honorable House of Representatives Sitting at Cambridge.”

From this time forward roads multiplied with the constant increase in population, though it was not until the latter quarter of the century that turnpike corporations began to be popular, as more convenient modes of communication were rendered necessary by the great increase in travel and commerce. We will not mention the many companies that were organized, but simply speak of one, the Pontoosuc Turnpike Company, chartered in 1825, to Jonathan Allen, Lemuel Pomeroy, Joseph Shearer, Joseph Merrick and Thomas Gold, of Pittsfield; Henry Stearns, of Springfield, and Enos Foot, of Southwick. They were granted the right of building a turnpike through Chester, Middlefield, Becket, Washington, Dalton and Pittsfield, “which route presented, of all others, the most level passage from the Hudson to the Connecticut,” as was subsequently reported by those in charge of the initial survey of the Western railroad. This turnpike was completed in October, 1830, and ultimately became, practically, the route of the Western railway—the Boston & Albany railroad of to-day.

In the mean time the feasibility of building a canal from Boston to Albany was presented to the legislature, which was more seriously entertained after the successful completion of the Erie canal, in 1823, and in 1825 they appointed three commissioners and an engineer to ascertain if it were practicable. The commissioners were Nathan Willis, of Pittsfield, Elihu Hoyt, of Deerfield, and Henry A. S. Dearborn, of Boston, with Col. Laomi C. Baldwin, engineer. Several routes were tested, though their report, in 1826, favored a route across "northern Worcester, up the Deerfield river, through the Hoosac mountain, and, by the valley of the Hoosac river, to the Hudson, near Troy." This route, so far as Berkshire county is concerned, ultimately became the route of the Troy & Greenfield railroad, necessitating a bore of Hoosac mountain, one of the most stupendous engineering feats the world has ever produced. To these remote beginnings, then, must we look for the present routes of the two great railroads of northern and central Berkshire.

The Boston and Albany Railroad.—As early as 1827 the feasibility of constructing a railroad on one of the above mentioned routes was agitated, though it was then contemplated that horse-power be used. Some idea of their conception of such a road may be derived from the following extract from a committee's report before the legislature on the 16th of January, 1829:—

"It is found that the cost of a continuous stone wall, laid so deep in the ground as not to be moved by the effect of frost, and surmounted by a rail of split granite about a foot in thickness and depth, with a bar of iron placed on top of it, of sufficient thickness to form the track on which the carriage wheels shall run, is much less than that of the English iron rail, and that rails of this construction, so far as can be judged by experiments which have yet been made, possess all the advantages of durability, solidity and strength."

This impracticable idea was soon abandoned, however, as was also that of utilizing horse-power. March 15, 1833, the charter of the Western Railroad Corporation was granted by the legislature to Nathan Hale, David Henshaw, George Bond, Henry Williams, Daniel Denny, Joshua Clapp and Eliphalet Williams and their associates, for the purpose of constructing a railroad from Worcester, the terminus of the Boston & Worcester Railroad, to the line of the State of New York, with a capital limited to $2,000,000.00. The corporation was not organized until January, 1836, when the following gentlemen were directors: John B. Wales, Edmund Dwight, George Bliss, William Lawrence, Henry Rice, John Henshaw, Francis Jackson, Josiah Quincy, Jr., and Justice Willard. Maj. William Gibbs McNeil was engaged as chief engineer, and Capt. William H. Swift as resident engineer of the company. The organization of the directors was, Thomas B. Wales, president; Josiah Quincy, treasurer; and Ellis Gray Loring, clerk.

The survey of the corporation commenced in April, 1836. Twenty miles of the road, commencing at Worcester, were put under contract in January, 1837, and work was commenced on that section in the month following. In June of the same year, the road from East Brookfield to Springfield was put under contract, and the work commenced upon the section in July. On the 1st day of October, 1839, the road was opened to travel between Worcester and Springfield, and, on the 23d of that month, regular merchandise trains were established. Early in 1842 the whole line was completed through to the Hudson river, with the exception of fifteen miles within the State of New York, which was run on the track of the Hudson and Berkshire railroad. From the State line to Albany the road was nominally, at least, under the conduct of a New York corporation, with the name of the Albany & West Stockbridge railway. This section was opened for travel on the 12th of September, thus accomplishing the long looked for object. On December 1, 1867, the Worcester and Western railroads were consolidated, under the name of the Boston & Albany railroad.

The Hudson and Berkshire Railroad Company.—This company was incorporated in 1832, for the purpose of building a road from Hudson, N. Y., to the State line at West Stockbridge, a distance of thirty-one miles. The road extended over the line into West Stockbridge, a distance of three miles, however, making the whole length thirty-four miles. The road was built during the years 1836, '37 and '38. November 1, 1854, it was purchased by the Western Railroad for $150,000.00.

Troy & Greenfield Railroad.—In 1845, three years after the completion of the Western railroad, a road was opened from Boston to Fitchburg; and soon after another was commenced, extending from the latter place to the Connecticut river at Deerfield. Between this point and the State line in Vermont, a distance of thirty-four miles, was left a gap, the only missing link of another great chain connecting Boston with the West. To construct this link, the Troy & Greenfield Railroad Co. was incorporated, in 1848, with a capital of $3,500,000.00, the persons named in the act of incorporation being George Grennell, Roger H. Leavitt, Samuel H. Read, James E. Marshall, Henry Chapman, Alvah Crocker, Jonas C. Heartt, Franklin Ripley, Abel Phelps, Asahel Foote, Ebenezer G. Lamson, and D. W. Alvord. To construct this link, however, it was necessary to make the great bore of the Hoosac mountain, which had been talked of when the proposed canal question was being considered, as previously mentioned.

This mountain, five miles in diameter, was a formidable object to attack. Surveys for the tunnel were commenced in 1850, and on the first of January of the following year the directors voted to break ground at once. A broad path was cleared over the mountain, extending from the proposed eastern and western mouths of the great bore, work being begun at both ends. Subsequently, however, it was decided to sink a shaft from the summit of the mountain to the level of the tunnel, there having already been one sunk from the western part, thus enabling the miners to bore from six surfaces. The magnitude of the work may be seen when we consider that in sinking this central shaft alone, a distance of 1,028 feet, required four years of continuous labor and the expenditure of not less than half a million of dollars. Here, too, the nicety of the engineering skill employed is attested, in that alligning the work, so that the workmen who were boring from the different openings should meet, the calculations varied only five-sixteenths of an inch.

It is not necessary to speak of the changes of contracts, loans from the State, and final completion by the commonwealth, or of the many trials and delays; but we will simply state that the great work was so far completed as to allow the passage of cars on February 9, 1875, after twenty years of labor, during a portion of which time upwards of a thousand men were employed and the work pushed night and day. On April 5th the first freight train passed through, consisting of twenty-two cars, from the west, loaded with grain. Passenger trains began to run from Boston to Troy in October of the same year, though the tunnel was not officially declared to be fully open and ready for business until July 1, 1876. In round numbers, the tunnel is 25,031 feet in length, twenty feet in height, twenty-four feet in width. From it was excavated 1,900,000 tons of rock, while it has 7,573 feet of brick arching, in which are 20,000,000 bricks. Its entire cost was $14,000,000.00 and 195 human lives. The road and tunnel are now the property of the State.

The Pittsfield and North Adams Railroad.—The Pittsfield & North Adams Railroad Company was originally incorporated in 1843, with the right of building a railroad from Pittsfield to North Adams, passing through the towns of Pittsfield, Lanesboro, Cheshire, and (since) Adams. Nothing was done under this charter, however, so it expired, and it was renewed in 1846. During that year the road was commenced and completed, at an expense of $450,000.00, the last rail being laid at eleven o'clock, October 6th. The road was constructed under the direction of the Western Railroad corporation, through an arrangement made with the government of the Pittsfield & North Adams company. Under this agreement the road was leased to the Western company, at a rent of six per cent. per annum upon its cost, for a term of thirty years, at the expiration of which time it had the right to either buy the road at cost, or renew the lease for ninety-nine years, at five per cent. rent, hence it is now operated by the Boston & Albany Railroad Co. In order to induce this arrangement, the citizens of North Adams raised a guarantee-fund of $31,000.00, which was to be drawn upon yearly to make up to the Western Co. any deficiency between its earnings and expenses. This fund was exhausted about 1855, soon after which the road became remunerative.

The Berkshire Railroad Company.—This company was incorporated in 1842, for the purpose of building a road from the state line in Sheffield, to continue the Housatonic road from that point to West Stockbridge, passing through Great Barrington village and Van Deusenville, to connect at West Stockbridge with the Hudson & Berkshire road. It was completed during that year. In 1847 it also obtained permission to connect with the Western road, at State Line, and is now a part of the Housatonic railroad.

The Pittsfield & Stockbridge Railroad Company.—This company was organized in 1848, for the purpose of building a road from Pittsfield to connect with the Berkshire road, at Van Deusenville. Ground was broken the next year, and on the first of January, 1850, the road was opened for traffic and travel. The road is twenty-two miles long and cost $440,000.00, and is operated by the Housatonic railroad company, under a perpetual lease. This, then, gives the Housatonic road, which was originally opened in 1842, extending from Bridgeport, Conn., to the state line of Massachusetts, connection through to Boston and to Albany, and also with New York, via the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, from Bridgeport.

This completes our sketch of the county's internal improvements, though we have made no mention of the many charters that have been issued, granting the right to build railroads over different proposed routes. In some instances indeed, however, these proposed roads were surveyed and their construction begun, large sums of money being expended on them, though ultimately, from one cause and another, they were abandoned.

NEWSPAPERS.

In the following sketch of the newspapers that are or have been published in the county, we give the towns wherein they were published precedence according to alphabetical order, though the papers for each town are arranged in chronological order:—

ADAMS.—The Adams Republican, the first paper printed at South Adams, was established by Cushing & Frary, the first number appearing June 1, 1827. It was a four-page, five-column paper, issued every Thursday. It was continued here about a year, when it was removed to Lenox.

The Berkshire Post, a six-column folio, was established by F. O. Sayles, the first number appearing January 19, 1861. The Post was continued here until March, 1862, when it was sold to Delos Sutherland and removed to Chatham, N. Y., where it is still published as the Chatham Courier.

The Saturday Freeman was established by B. F. Reynolds, the first number appearing December 1, 1876. Mr. Freeman retained the paper until December 1, 1881, when it was purchased by W. F. Davis, who has since conducted it, changing its name to THE ADAMS FREEMAN, December 1, 1883. The FREEMAN is an eight-column folio, issued each Friday.

The Adams Independent was started by B. F. Reynolds, January 1, 1884, and was issued each Saturday for about six months, when it was discontinued.

GREAT BARRINGTON.—THE BERKSHIRE COURIER was established by John D. Cushing, the first number appearing October 16, 1834. The paper was printed in an old building which stood, blocked up on timbers, in the rear of the stone store of J. C. & A. C. Russell, then in process of erection. The printing office of Mr. Cushing was afterwards removed to an upper room in the rear of the old Leavenworth store, on the Castle street corner, where the paper was printed until April 10, 1839, when the building was burned down, and the publication was consequently, for a few weeks, interrupted. Mr. Cushing, having repaired the damage to the press and types, renewed the issue of the paper on the 19th of May, and continued it without interruption till the autumn of 1854, when the office—at that time on Railroad street—was destroyed by fire. By this disaster the publication of the paper was delayed only one week. The office was re-opened in the Mechanic's Hall, on the site of the Sumner building, where the COURIER was for several years afterward published. In the spring of 1846 the title of the paper was changed to the Berkshire Courier and Great Barrington Gazette, and Clark W. Bryan, of Hudson, N. Y., became associated with Mr. Cushing in its publication, under the firm name of Cushing & Bryan; but Mr. Bryan's connection with the paper—at that time—was only for the space of six months.

In the meantime two other papers had been established here, The Independent Press, in 1845, by Kipp & Murray, and the Housatonic Mirror, by Theodore Dewey, about April 1, 1846. The COURIER and the Mirror were Whig papers, while the Press was Democratic in politics. A semi-partnership existed between the Press and the Mirror, and the curious anomaly was presented of a Whig and a Democratic sheet printed on the same press, with the same types, and aside from the political editorials, containing the same matter, for such was the case with those papers. But those new enterprises were not of long duration. When Mr. Bryan left the COURIER, Theodore Dewey joined Mr. Cushing in its publication, and the paper, for the time, assumed the name of The Berkshire Courier and Housatonic Mirror. The publication of the Independent Press was suspended in the summer of 1847, and the COURIER has from that time, been the only paper published in Great Barrington. In November, 1848, Clark W. Bryan resumed his connection with Mr. Cushing, and assumed the business management of the BERKSHIRE COURIER. The co-partnership then formed continued just four years, when Mr. Bryan withdrew and connected himself with the Springfield Republican. Mr. Cushing then for nearly ten years conducted the COURIER alone; and in January, 1862, was joined by Marcus H. Rogers, who assumed the management of the paper under the firm name of Cushing & Rogers. In the spring of 1865 Mr. Rogers purchased Mr. Cushing's interest in the business, removed the office to the second floor of the building next south of the postoffice, and a little later substituted a steam press in the place of the old hand press. Mr. Rogers erected the substantial Courier building in January, 1871, and continued the publication of the paper to January 1, 1879, when he sold the COURIER and the building to Clark W. Bryan, who with his son, James A. Bryan, has published the COURIER to the present time.

LEE.—The Berkshire Democrat was established at Lee in 1840, by E. J. Bull, with L. D. Brown editor. The Democrat had a short existence in Lee, however, when it was removed to Stockbridge, and published there under the title of the Weekly Visitor.

THE VALLEY GLEANER.—In 1851 a printing office was started here by Charles French and Josiah A. Royce, two enterprising young men who were occupied for a few years mainly in printing wrappers for the paper manufacturers. In December, 1856, a prospectus was issued from the office of The Westfield News Letter, announcing that the Lee Home Companion would be published weekly in Lee, commencing January 1, 1857. This stirred French & Royce to a similar enterprise, and on the same date, also, appeared the first number of THE VALLEY GLEANER. The former proved to be a second edition of the Westfield News Letter, with a local editor, and a page devoted to Lee news and advertisements. The GLEANER appeared on a small sheet, 18x24 inches, with only four columns on a page. At the end of the first year the Companion ceased to exist, and the GLEANER was enlarged to five columns on a page, and in 1860 it was again enlarged to six columns. In 1862 Mr. Royce bought out his partner, and for twelve succeeding years was both editor and publisher of the GLEANER, assisted during the latter part of the time by Alexander Hyde, to whom and J. P. Clark, a practical printer, he sold the office in 1874; in the mean time having enlarged the paper to its present size. Mr. Clark retired from the office the first of January, 1876, and in 1877 Mr. Hyde sold out to Rockwell & Hill. May 18, 1881, the concern was purchased by James Golden, formerly of the Sentinel, of South Norwalk, Conn. February 1, 1883, Mr. Golden sold out to E. S. Rogers, and returned to the Sentinel, and Mr. Rogers has continued the publication of the paper since. The GLEANER is issued on Wednesday and has circulation of 1,500.

The Central Berkshire Chronicle was established by William H. Hill & Co., in 1868, edited by James Harding. The paper was continued three years, when its subscription list was transferred to the Pittsfield Eagle. In 1876 the Chronicle was revived by Mr. Hill and continued about one year when it was united with the GLEANER.

LENOX.—The Watch Light was the first paper published in Lenox. It was a campaign sheet established by Eldad Lewis, M. D., about the year 1800, opposing the election of Jefferson. It was continued only about six months.

The Berkshire Star was removed from Stockbridge to Lenox, by Charles Webster, where it was united with the Adams Republican, which had also been moved here by John D. Cushing, January 10, 1828, and published under the title of the Berkshire Star and County Republican, by Webster & Cushing. September 11, 1828, the firm was changed to Webster & Stanley, and April 23, 1829, another change was made, making J. G. Stanley editor and proprietor. August 28, 1829, Mr. Stanley disposed of the paper to John Z. Goodrich, who then commenced the publication of the Berkshire Journal. Mr. Goodrich subsequently became one of the most prominent leaders not only of Berkshire, but of National politics, being chairman of the National committee of the Republican party in the formative period of its existence. September 1, 1831, the Pittsfield Argus was removed to Lenox, united with the Journal, and published by Samuel W. Bush, under the title of the Berkshire Journal and Argus. The subsequent history of the paper is given in that of THE ARGUS, of Pittsfield.

Berkshire Herald, a campaign paper advocating the election of William Wirt, of Maryland, for president, and Amos Ellmaker, of Pennsylvania, for vice-president, was established by J. G. Stanley, January 5, 1832. It was continued for only about six months.

The Lenox Echo, a monthly, was published by W. E. Ranger, then principal of the Lenox High School, the first appearing in December, 1882. The Echo was devoted to school interests and local news, and was continued one year.

NORTH ADAMS. — The Berkshire American, a weekly, was the first newspaper printed at North Adams. It was neutral, and was edited by Dr. Asa Green, who issued the first number early in the winter of 1826-27. The subscription list never exceeded 400, and the undertaking was disastrous to those who engaged in it, as they sunk nearly the amount of their investment. The paper had a sickly existence of about two years.

The Socialist was also published by the same unfortunate pioneers, being merely the matter of the Berkshire American reprinted on a smaller sheet without the advertisements. It had about 100 subscribers.

The Berkshire American (No. 2.) was started in 1830, Atwill & Turner having been induced to recommence that publication. With the same old Ramage press, but some additions to the type, they got up a very respectable sheet, for those days, which they served to 500 subscribers, for two years. Heman Atwell was the editor.

The Adams Gazette and Farmers' and Mechanics' Magazine, neutral, next came into the field — William M. Mitchell, editor and publisher. This paper had about 450 subscribers, and existed one and a half years.

The Berkshire Advocate. — In 1833 A. H. Wells appeared in the field, and, with the aid of some enterprising citizens, a new press and modern style of type were added to the old concern, and the paper appeared, advocating Whig doctrines. It had 400 subscribers, and lived about one year.

The Greylock Mirror was next brought out, by William M. Mitchell, with 400 subscribers, and was printed about six months. For several years after this none could be found bold enough to undertake the revival of a press here, the want of which, however, was sadly felt by all classes of the community.

THE NORTH ADAMS TRANSCRIPT. — This paper was established, as a Whig sheet, under the title of the Adams Transcript, September 7, 1843, by John R. Briggs, with 600 subscribers. In April, 1844, Mr. Briggs associated with him Henry Chickering, and in the following December retired from the firm. Later, Messrs. Burton and Winton purchased the paper merging it with the Free American. They in turn disposed of the concern to William S. George and then it became the property of William H. Phillips, who united with it the Hoosac Valley News, and took into partnership with him Francis S. Parker. Parker subsequently withdrew, and Phillips, in 1866, sold out to Hon. James T. Robinson, who, in company with his son, Arthur, still conducts the sheet. When the News was united with the TRANSCRIPT the title was changed to the Adams Transcript and News, and soon after Mr. Robinson took the paper he changed the name to the Adams Transcript which was retained until the division of the town, when it was again changed, to the NORTH ADAMS TRANSCRIPT, which title it now bears. It is a large, nine-column sheet, having a circulation of over 2,000, issued each Thursday.

The Greylock Sentinel was started, as a Free-soil paper, February 15, 1851, A. J. Aikens, editor. In February, 1852, Mr. Aikens retired, and the editorial chair was filled by A. D. Brock. The Sentinel had a circulation of about 650, and in the autumn of 1852 was changed to the Free American. In 1853 it was sold to Burton & Winton, who subsequently united it with the TRANSCRIPT.

THE HOOSAC VALLEY NEWS was originally established by Clark & Phillips, in 1857, Mr. Phillips subsequently becoming sole owner, who united it with the TRANSCRIPT as stated above. When he sold the latter paper to Mr. Robinson, he also sold the good-will of both sheets, giving bonds not to publish another paper in North Adams; notwithstanding this, however, he, in company with John Mandeville, re-established the NEWS, in January, 1867. He was soon obliged to relinquish the enterprise, however, selling his interest to J. C. Angel. The firm of Angel & Mandeville was continued three or four years, when J. L. Bowen purchased Mandeville's interest and, about a year after, Angel became sole proprietor. In 1877 his son, E. D. Angel, became published, the father still acting as editor. July 1, 1879, the paper was leased to Charles T. Evans, the lease continuing in power until October 1, 1880, soon after which the paper was sold to Angel's son-in-law, A. W. Hardman, who, in company with Edward A. McMillin, is the present publisher, the latter having been admitted as a partner in the autumn of 1884. Since that time, however, it has been run under lease by Angel & Evans and by the Oatman Bros., of Pittsfield, Mr. Hardman having had the paper in charge only since October 1, 1883, and during all the period, except when under lease to the Oatman Bros., Mr. Angel has acted as editor. The News is published on Saturday of each week.

PITTSFIELD.—The American Centinel, the first paper established in Pittsfield, was commenced by E. Russell, December 1, 1787, on a sheet ten by eighteen inches, at the head of was printed the following audacious motto:—

“Here you may range the world from pole to pole, Increase your knowledge, and delight your soul.”

In the second issue Mr. Russell “returns his thanks to those gentlemen who expressed their anxiety to have the printing office at Pittsfield by engaging him to print a certain number of papers, and begs leave to inform them that he has a large number of papers on hand for which he has, as yet, received nothing, and which he wishes those gentlemen to call for, according to agreement. If agreements are not fulfilled, the Centinel must stop.” This modest request seems not to have been very generally responded to on the part of the Centinel's subscribers, for the publication of the paper was soon after stopped.

The Berkshire Chronicle was the next paper established here, by Roger Storrs, the first number appearing May 8, 1788. It bore for its motto the following couplet :—

“Free as the savage roams his native wood,
Or finny nations swim the briny flood.”

The second number of the paper contains two well written moral essays on the first page, and quite extended foreign news on the second, while the other pages are occupied by a good summary of domestic news, a poet's corner headed “The Parnassian Packet,” agricultural reading, and advertisements. The first number is twelve by eight inches in size. The 31st number which appears as the Berkshire Chronicle and Massachusetts Intelligencer is enlarged to the size of eighteen inches by ten. The advertisements came much more from other towns in Berkshire county than Pittsfield. Fugitive slaves from New York are advertised among other things. This paper was really conducted with much talent, and must have been, for its time, a remarkable affair. Its facilities for getting news may be ascertained in the paper of April 24, 1789, which had Boston news to April 20, New York to April 3, and London to December 20, the previous year. In the issue of May 3d the proceedings of Congress are brought down to April 15th. This paper was living January 17, 1790, with no signs of dissolution, though at what time it was discontinued we are unable to state.

The Chronicle was succeeded by a paper the very name of which is forgotten. Tradition tells us that it was published by a Mr. Spooner who soon after the establishment of the sheet removed to Windsor, Vt.

The Berkshire Gazette was started by Nathaniel Holly, Orsemus C. Merrill and Chester Smith, the first number appearing January, 17—, a sheet nineteen inches by twelve, bearing the following motto :—

“Man is man, and who is more.”

Sixteen numbers of the Gazette are preserved, and represent a respectable newspaper. Mr. Merrill withdrew from the firm in June, 1798, and Mr. Holly, in March, 1799. Mr. Smith then conducted the paper alone until its close, which occurred with the close of the year 1799.

THE PITTSFIELD SUN, whose long and honorable career is not yet ended, succeeded the Gazette, being established by Phineas Allen, the first number appearing September 16, 1800. This paper was printed on a sheet thirteen inches long by eleven wide, being on a scale smaller than any of its predecessors, except the Chronicle, which was enlarged with its thirty-first number, while the SUN remained as at first for twelve years. The first number was adorned with a rude cut of the rising sun, and bore the motto,—

“Here all may scribble with unbounded sway,
If they will do it in a decent way.”

The SUN continued to be published by Phineas Allen alone, until 1829, when he admitted his son of the same name, as partner in its publication and editorship. The senior partner died May 8, 1868, but his son continued the paper until May, 1872, when he sold it to his kinsman, Theodore L. Allen.

The new proprietor, after conducting it creditably from May to August of that year, sold it to William H. Phillips, of North Adams, who removed to Pittsfield and conducted the paper until it was taken by Horace J. Canfield, who had it in charge until it was taken by the present Sun Printing Company, March 15, 1882. The SUN is Democratic in politics, devotes a large portion of its space to local matters, and issues a very readable sheet each Thursday.

The Berkshire Reporter was the next paper started, by Dutton & Smith. Dutton subsequently retired from the firm, after which the paper was conducted by Seymour & Smith for a time, when Seymour retired and the publication was continued by Milo Smith & Co. Smith, however, was not a good business man and got into debt. To get out, he agreed to get ten men of the Federal party, whose organ the paper was, to become responsible for him, on giving them a mortgage on his press and type. He got three, and then crossed the line into New York. The victimized three paid his debts, and continued the paper with the imprint of "E. Leonard, for the proprietors," until about 1815, when it was discontinued.

The American was started by Dr. A. Green, in December, 1825. It was a small sheet and treated local and general affairs alike in a humorous way. Mr. Green soon removed to North Adams.

THE ARGUS.—A handsome sheet, twenty-one inches by sixteen in size, was commenced by Henry K. Strong, the first number appearing in May, 1827. Mr. Strong having become financially embarrassed, left the State, and was succeeded by Samuel W. Bush, May 1, 1828, who conducted the paper until September 1, 1831, when he removed it to Lenox, and united it with the Berkshire Journal, then published by John Z. Goodrich. In removing to Lenox the paper took the name of The Journal and Argus. Mr. Bush continued to edit until September, 1838, when Mr. Goodrich became editor as well as proprietor. With the issue of August 27, of that year, the name was changed to the Massachusetts Eagle. In March, 1838, Messrs. Eastman and Montague became publishers, with Henry W. Taft, editor. Charles Montague became sole proprietor in July, 1838, and on the retirement of Mr. Taft, in 1840, he assumed the editorial chair. In 1842, Mr. Montague removed the paper to its old home in Pittsfield, where he continued its publication until November 20, 1852. It was then purchased by Samuel Bowles & Co., of Springfield, who replenished the material of the office and leased it to Otis F. R. Wait, who changed the name to the BERKSHIRE COUNTY EAGLE. But after the end of one year, the establishment was sold to Henry Chickering, then of North Adams, and Henry A. Marsh, of Pittsfield, who conducted it until July 20, 1855, under the firm name of Chickering & Marsh. At that date Mr. Marsh was succeeded by James B. Davis, and the firm continued to be Chickering & Davis until January 1, 1859, when Mr. Davis withdrew, Mr. Chickering conducting the paper alone until July 1, 1865, when William D. Axtell became associated with him in its ownership and management.

March 5, 1881, Mr. Chickering died, and July 1st of the same year, the firm became Axtell & Pomeroy, W. M. Pomeroy having purchased what had been Mr. Chickering's share. March 1, 1883, Mr. Pomeroy sold his share to John B. Haskins, the firm now being Axtell & Haskins. The EAGLE is issued every Thursday.

Old Tip, a campaign paper, was published by Thaddeus Clapp, 3d, in 1840, supporting the election of Gen. Harrison.

The Berkshire County Whig appeared in 1840. It was edited by Hon. Henry Hubbard and his son, Douglas S. Hubbard, the latter being also publisher. In 1849 the publisher migrated to California, and the paper was discontinued.

The Cataract appeared in 1844, established by T. D. Bonner. Bonner was a rabid temperance reformer and used the paper for ventilating his very peculiar views, and that, too, in so grossly personal and scurrilous a manner, that his office was at one time mobbed and he was at last obliged to leave, at the end of two years. The paper passed into the hands of Messrs. Quigley, Kingsley and Axtell, who continued it eighteen months, and then sold the subscription list to an Albany publisher.

The Star was commenced in 1847, by William D. Axtell, who published a sprightly and pleasant paper for about six months, when it was discontinued.

The Berkshire Agriculturist was commenced in 1847 by Charles Montague and E. P. Little. At the close of the first year, Mr. Little left town, and Mr. Montague continued the publication until 1848, when he sold it to Dr. Stephen Reed, who changed its name to the Culturist and Gazette. Dr. Reed continued to edit the paper until 1858, when it was discontinued.

The Berkshire Medical Journal, a monthly, magazine was published by Professors William H. Thayer and R. Cresson Stiles, in 1861.

The Institute Omnibus was a small but sparkling sheet, published by the pupils of the Young Ladies' Institute for several years.

The Berkshire Gymnasium was the name of a small sheet, published by the students of the institution of that name, during the time it flourished here.

THE PITTSFIELD EVENING JOURNAL was established by Nathan C. Fowler, under the title of the Daily Evening Journal, the first issue appearing September 27, 1880. Mr. Fowler retained the paper until August 1, 1881, when he sold out to the Journal Company, with I. C. Smart, editor. March 12, 1883, Whitman & Mills purchased the enterprise, conducting the paper until August 30, 1883, when B. C. Magie, Jr., came into possession. Mr. Magie conducted the paper until December 22, 1883, when it was purchased by Joseph E. See, the present proprietor. Mr. See changed the name of the paper to the one it now bears, and conducts a creditable sheet, the only daily paper published in the county.

STOCKBRIDGE.—The Berkshire Star was the first paper printed in Stockbridge. It was established by Loring Andrews, of Boston, in the autumn of 1783, the second paper published in the county. After Mr. Andrews, the paper was managed by Benjamin Rosseter and Heman Willard, in company ; then by Willard alone ; Edward Seymour, Elisha Brown and Jared Curtis, in company ; Richard H. Ashley and Charles Webster, in company, and lastly by Webster alone. The name of the paper was changed several times, being successively The Western Star, The Political Atlas, The Farmer's Herald, The Berkshire Herald, and the Berkshire Star. Under the latter name, in 1828, the paper was removed to Lenox, where Mr. Webster was joined by John D. Cushing, publishing the paper under the title of the Berkshire Star and County Republican.

The Weekly Visitor was the next paper established here. It was originally established at Lee, in 1840, by Jonathan E. Field, who removed it to Stockbridge in 1841, changing its name from The Berkshire Democrat to the Weekly Visitor. The paper lived here about two years, when the types, materials, etc., were taken to Great Barrington, where they were used in giving life to the Independent Press.

The Temperance Banner was commenced here about 1843, by T. D. Bonner, a violent temperance reformer. In 1844 he removed it to Pittsfield, changing the name to the Cataract, where he made his batteries so hot and personal as to cause his being warred off.

This completes our list of the newspapers that have been published in Berkshire county, and we believe it covers them all, unless, perhaps, it be some small amateur publication, or a campaign paper gotten out for partisan purposes during the heat of an approaching election.

ABORIGINAL OCCUPANCY.

The origin of the North American Indians is a subject which, though it has engrossed the attention of learned men for over two hundred years, must ever remain open to debate ; and the question, "By whom was America peopled?" will doubtless ever remain without a satisfactory answer. In 1637, Thomas Morton wrote a book to prove that the Indians were of later origin. John Joselyn held, in 1638, that they were of Tartar descent. Cotton Mather inclined to the opinion that they were Scythians. James Adair seems to have been fully convinced that they were descendants of the Israelites, the lost tribes ; and after thirty years residence among them, published in 1775, an account of their manners and customs, from which he deduced his conclusions. Dr. Mitchell, after considerable investigation, concluded "that the three races, Malays, Tartars, and Scandinavians, contributed to make up the great American population, who were the authors of the various works and antiquities found on the continent." DeWitt Clinton held, that "the probability is, that America was peopled from various quarters of the old world, and that its predominant race is the Scythian or Tartarian." Calmet, a distinguished author, brings forward the writings of Hornius, son of Theodosius the Great, who affirms that "at or about the time of the commencement of the Christian era, voyages from Africa and Spain into the Atlantic ocean were both frequent and celebrated," and holds that "there is a strong probability that the Romans and Carthagenians, even 300 B. C., were acquainted with the existence of this country," adding that there are "tokens of the presence of the Greeks, Romans, Persians and Carthagenians, in many parts of the continent." The story of Madoc's voyage to America, in 1170, has been repeated by every writer upon the subject, and actual traces of Welsh colonization are affirmed to have been discovered in the language and customs of a tribe of Indians living on the Missouri. Then the fact is stated that "America was visited by some Norwegians," who made a settlement in Greenland, in the tenth century. Priest, in his American Antiquities, states that his observations had led him "to the conclusion that the two great continents, Asia and America, were peopled by similar races of men."

But it is not necessary to enlarge upon this catalogue. Charlevoix and other later writers have entered into elaborate disquisitions on this subject, and the curious reader will find much to interest, if not to instruct him. The aboriginal occupants of Berkshire belonged to the Mahican nation, and when first known to the whites here they had only a small village in Great Barrington, called Westenhook. The theory of a northwestern immigration by the barbarous hordes of Asia, long advocated, and holding credence among modern authors generally, is in a measure substantiated by the early tradition of the Mahicans respecting their origin, which runs as follows:—

"The country formerly owned by the Muhheakunnuk nation was situated partly in Massachusetts and partly in the states of Vermont and New York. The inhabitants dwelt chiefly in little towns and villages. Their chief seat was on Hudson's river, now it is called Albany, which was called Pempotowwut-hut-Muhhecanneuw, or the fire-place of the Muhheakunnuk nation, where their allies used to come on any business whether relative to the covenants of their friendship or other matters. The etymology of the word Muhheakunnuk, according to original signification, is great waters or sea, which are constantly in motion, either ebbing or flowing. Our forefathers asserted that they were emigrants from west-by-north of another country; that they passed over great waters, where this and the other country are nearly connected, called Ukhkokpeck; it signifies snake water or water where snakes are abundant; and that they lived by side of a great water or sea, from whence they derive the name of Muhheakunnuk nation. Muhheakunneuw signifies a man of Muhheakunnuk tribe. Muhheakunneyuk is a plural number. As they were coming from the west they found many great waters, but none flowing and ebbing like Muhheakunnuk, until they came to Hudson's river; there they said one to another, this is like Muhheakunnuk our nativity. And when they found grain was very plenty in that country, they agreed to kindle a fire there and hang a kettle, whereof they and their children after them might dip out their daily refreshment. That before they began to decay, our forefathers informed us that the Muhheakunnuk nation could then raise about one thousand warriors who could turn out at any emergency."

The Mahicans, who, says O'Callagan, ("the Mahicanders or River Indians,")

lined the Hudson on either side of its mouth, had, according to Hecewelder's account, been confined to the east bank of the river at the time of Hudson's advent in 1609. Hecewelder's information "of the extent of country the Mahicanni inhabited," (the best he could obtain,) "was from an aged and intelligent man of this nation whose grandfather had been a noted chief." He said the western boundary was the Mahicanniltuck (the Hudson or North river); and that their "settlement extended on the east side of this river from Thuphane or Tuphane, (a Delaware word for cold stream, from which the whites have derived the name Tappan,) to the extent of tide water up this river; here was the uppermost town. From thence our towns were scattered throughout the country on the smaller rivers and creeks."

"Our nearest neighbors on the east," continues the narrative, "were Wampano. These inhabited the Connecticut river downwards, and had their largest town where the sea runs a great way into the land, and where the white people have since built a town, which they called New Haven. These (the Wampano) were in possession of an island, which the white people called Rhode Island. Adjoining the Wampano, east, were the Munachècanni; next to these the Paamnaktò; then the Putuchtinnau; then the Waw-iàchtenno, and the Machtitschwànnau. These latter lived at or near a place on the sea, where there were a number of islands together, through which a strong current ran, wherefore they were called by this name, which signifieth the same. All these nations were with the Mahicanni like one, and assisted their grandfather, the Delawares, in carrying on the war against the common enemy, the Maqua, until the white people had come into their country. Our grandfather (the Delawares), owned and inhabited all the country from the extent of tide water above Gàschtenick [Albany], to the extent of tide-water, in a river far to the south, where a place was called Pathàmook or Pate-ham-moc [Potomac]. Clean across this extent of country [viz.: from Albany to the Potomac], our grandfather had a long house, with a door at each end, one door being at Pate-ham-moc, and the other at Gàschtenick; which doors were always open to all nations united with them. To this house the nations from ever so far off used to resort, and smoke the pipe of peace with their grandfather. The white people coming over the great water, unfortunately landed at each end of this long house of our grandfathers, and it was not long before they began to pull the same down at both ends. Our grandfather still kept repairing the same, though obliged to make it from time to time shorter, until at length the white people, who had by this time grown very powerful, assisted the common enemy, the Maqua, in erecting a strong house on the ruins of their grandfathers."

Such, then, is a brief sketch of those Indians whose territory originally embraced the head waters of the Hudson, the Housatonic and the Connecticut, and the water-shed of lakes George and Champlain. But their "long house" had indeed grown shorter and shorter, until they finally had dwindled down to a few scattering remnants. One of these was located in Berkshire county. It consisted of about twenty families, who were located mostly in Great Barrington, Sheffield and Stockbridge.

In 1722 Joseph Parsons and 176 others purchased of these Indians a tract of land in the valley of the Housatonic, which became known as the celebrated "Upper and Lower Housatonic Townships." "That which the people of New England then regarded as an absolute essential in such enterprises," says one writer, "a reservation for the use and support of a minister was included in their charter. Subsequent investigation having proved that the location of a minister among them could be greatly promoted by availing themselves of the aid of the Society for Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, and that the prospect of improving the condition of the Mahicans by direct association was better than through the intercourse had with them at the forts, where missionaries had been stationed, it was determined to make application to that society for a missionary. The application was granted, but on condition that the consent of the Mahicans should first be obtained. A committee accordingly visited them at Westenhook, in July, 1734. The relations existing between the Mahicans and the Massachusetts government being intimate and friendly—Konkapot, the Mahican chief, having been commissioned a captain by Governor Belcher, and Umpachene, his subordinate, made a lieutenant, in the colonial service—this consent was readily obtained. In September following, the Rev. John Sargent was appointed to the mission and entered upon his duties in October. In 1735, the mission was definitely located on the W-nahk-ta-hook, or the Great Meadow, the great council chamber of the nation, where a township six miles square was laid out by the legislature as a reservation, under the name of Stockbridge, by which name the Mahicans who were then located there, as well as those who subsequently removed thither, were known to the authorities of Massachusetts and New York."

Thus was commenced the celebrated Stockbridge mission, whose further history will be given in connection with the sketch of Stockbridge, on a future page; therefore, suffice it to say at this point, that after the erection of Stockbridge into a township, these Indians shared in conducting all the town affairs until 1785-87, when they removed to Stockbridge, Madison county, N. Y., where they erected the first grist and saw-mill in that town. Subsequently, in 1822, they made a second migration, to Green Bay, on the western side of Lake Michigan. In 1833 the United States government effected a treaty with them, giving them $25,000.00 and two townships on Lake Winnebago, in exchange for their improvements and lands at Green Bay. Thither they accordingly removed, remaining in comparative peace until 1838, when a new emigration began to be agitated, which finally resulted in their removing to Shawnee county, Wis., where about 250 of them now constitute a little Christian community. And this little settlement has dwindled the mighty Mahican nation, the people who greeted Hudson on his visit to the river that has since borne his name, and who were the aboriginal occupants of the Berkshire Hills.

WHEN FIRST SETTLED BY THE WHITES.

Following along down the faded decades in search of the first event connecting Berkshire county's territory with history, we arrive at the year 1676, when were transpiring the closing events of King Phillip's war. In August of that year Maj. John Talcot, with a body of Connecticut soldiers and friendly Indians, pursued a body of hostile Indians from Westfield, and overtaking them on the banks of the Housatonic, killed and made prisoners of a number of them. This sanguinary event turns the first page in the history of this region. Although the event certainly occurred in what is now Berkshire county, it is difficult to place the exact scene of the battle, some authorities claiming it for Stockbridge, others for Sheffield, and still others for Great Barrington. In Hoyt's Antiquarian Researches the following narrative of the affair is given:—

“Not long after his arrival at that place [Westfield], the trail of about two hundred Indians was discovered in the vicinity, shaping towards the Hudson. Talcot immediately took the trail, and pressed on to overtake the Indians, and on the third day discovered them encamped on the west bank of Housatonic river, in the most perfect security. Being late in the day, he resolved to postpone an attack until the next morning, and drawing back, lay upon his arms in the most profound silence. Towards the dawn of day, forming his troops into two divisions, one to pass the river below the Indians, make a detour, and attack them in the rear, while the other was to approach by a direct route opposite to their camp, and open a fire across the river the moment the attack commenced on the opposite side. The plan was partially frustrated. One of the Indians left the camp in the night, and proceeded down the river for the purpose of taking fish, and as the troops who had crossed the river, as had been ordered, were advancing to the attack, he discovered them and gave the usual cry. Awanux! Awanux! on which he was instantly shot. Talcot, now opposite to the Indian camp, hearing the report, instantly poured in a volley, as the Indians were rising from their slumbers. A complete panic ensued, and they fled in confusion into the woods, followed by Talcot, and most who escaped the first fire made good their retreat. The division below was too far distant to share in the victory. Twenty-five Indians were left on the ground, and twenty were made prisoners, and among the former was the Sachem of Quoboag. Talcot lost but one man and he a Mohigan.”

Hubbard, in his Narrative of Indian Wars, written soon after the occurrence, says that Talcot fought with the Indians, “killing and taking prisoners forty-five, whereof twenty-five were fighting men, without the loss of any one of his company, beside a Mohigan Indian. Many of the rest were sorely wounded,” he continues, “as appeared by the dabbling of the brushes with blood, as was observed by them that followed them a little further.” As a postscript to this report, he states: “It is written since from Albany that there were sundry lost besides the forty-five forementioned, to the number of three-score in all; and also that a hundred and twenty of them are now dead of sickness."

Thus were the Berkshire Hills early baptized with blood, and its silent forest wakened to the echo of the dying war-whoop and the death rattle. The next historical reference we find follows on a few years later, when certain shrewd Dutch traders at Albany take advantage of the Indians ignorance and cupidity to secure to themselves a title to the larger part of this beautiful region. But to make clear our statements we will digress for a moment.

It is doubtless well known to the reader that Massachusetts had great trouble in finally establishing and maintaining the boundary lines of the western part of her territory. On the north, where was then the province of New Hampshire, the boundary line was long a source of controversy, a mooted question that was not settled until March 5, 1740, when King George II. decreed that the line should be surveyed in accordance with certain special instructions, which was accordingly done during the following year by Richard Hazen, whereby the Bay State lost a large amount of territory, which she had supposed was her own. On the south, when the boundary line was finally determined, in 1713, it was found that Massachusetts had appropriated 107,793 acres of land that rightfully belonged to Connecticut. This land she retained, however, by ceding to Connecticut a like amount, located in other parts of her domain. This "equivalent land," was sold at public auction by Connecticut, on the 25th day of April, 1715, being bid off for £683, New England currency, or about one farthing per acre, the money thus obtained being applied to the use of Yale College. But over the western boundary of the Province occurred the sternest controversy of all. Here New York originally laid claim to all territory as far east as the Connecticut river, thus including what is now the entire territory of Berkshire, and nearly all of Franklin, Hampshire and Hampden counties. And it was not without apparent good reason that New York insisted upon the Connecticut as her eastern boundary line, and had she rapidly pushed settlers into the disputed territory, the Berkshire Hills would doubtless at this time be the just pride of New York, instead of belonging to her Puritanic sister. But this she failed to do, neglecting to push her settlements east of the Taconic Mountains, while Massachusetts by occupancy obtained possession, eventually establishing her right to the disputed territory. This divisional line, after long and tedious quarrels, sometimes resulting in bloodshed, was finally agreed upon in 1773, at a general distance of twenty miles east of the Hudson, though it was not permanently settled until 1787.

We will now return to the Dutch grant, given under the authority of the Province of New York, and known as the "Patent of Westenhook." The petition for the patent, dated July 11, 1705, with its claim based upon deeds given by the Indians in 1685, 1703 and 1704, recites, that "the petitioners had, several years before, advanced money and goods to the Indian proprietors of land on a creek called Westenhook, describes the boundaries of the two upper tracts, nearly as they were written in the patent, and states that the Indians mortgaged the premises to the petitioners; that they had made further advancements of money and goods to the Indians, and had purchased the lands of them on the first and second of October, 1703; that, the Indians being unable to pay the sums previously advanced, or to obtain the money and goods which they wanted from any other party, the petitioners had 'con-descended' to make these further advancements and take deeds of the land." The grant under this patent covers four large tracts of land extending north-erly, along both sides of the Housatonic river from a point below Canaan Falls to a considerable distance above Glendale, and was issued in favor of Peter Schuyler, Derrick Wessels, Jno. Abeel, John Jouse Bleecker, Ebenezer Wilson, Peter Fanconier, Doctor Daniel Cox, Thomas Wenham and Henry Smith. The boundaries are vaguely stated, though sufficiently clear to show that the grant covered a large part of the county. It does not appear that any improvements were instituted previous to the advent of Massachusetts settlers, though the subsequent clashing of titles led to vexatious quarrels.

Finally, in 1722, occurred the first movement towards a civilized settlement in the wilderness that covered the Berkshire Hills. On the 30th of January of that year, 176 inhabitants of Hampshire county petitioned the general court for two townships of land situated on the Housatonic river. The petition was granted, and the townships ordered to contain a tract seven miles square, each. John Stoddard and Henry Dwight, of Northampton, Luke Hitchcock, of Springfield, John Ashley, of Westfield, Samuel Porter, of Hadley, and Ebenezer Pomeroy, of Northampton, were appointed a committee for dividing the tract, granting lots, admitting settlers, etc. This committee met in the following March, at Springfield, and fifty-five prospective settlers received grants, complying with the conditions attached to them. Measures were taken to purchase the land contained in the grants, of the Indians, and, on the 25th of April, 1724, a deed was executed by them, conveying a tract bounded on the south by the divisional line between Massachusetts and Connecticut, west by the colony of New York, eastward to a line four miles from the Housatonic river, "and in a general way so to extend;" and north "to the great mountains." The deed thus embracing the present towns of Sheffield, Egremont, Mount Washington, Great Barrington, Alford, a considerable part of Lee, and the larger part of Stockbridge and West Stockbridge. The Indians made certain reservations of land, and received in consideration £460 in money, three barrels of cider, and thirty quarts of rum. The tract was known, until its later division into townships, as the "Upper and Lower Housatonic Townships." Here, in what is now the township of Sheffield, was begun the first civilized settlement in the county, though there had been a few Dutch traders among the Indians. The first settler was Matthew Noble, who came on from Westfield in the autumn of 1725. He spent one winter here entirely alone, or with no other companions than the Indians. Returning to Westfield in the spring, he started in June, 1726, to resume his residence on the banks of the Housatonic, taking with him his daughter, only sixteen years of age. She rode on horseback, taking her bed upon the horse with her, and lodged one night in the wilderness while making the passage. Thus was begun the first settlement in Berkshire county.

During that year settlers came in to the number of about sixty, and from that time forward the new settlement slowly increased. In 1734-35 was begun the mission among the Indians, spoken of on page 69, giving a new impetus to immigration. But it was not long before the first French, or Cape Breton war came on, in 1744, bringing with it the constant dread of Indian and French invasion, which, together with quarrels over land-titles caused the young settlements to languish for many years. But during this time the territory was crossed and re-crossed by British soldiers, many of whom, struck by the beauty of the country, subsequently became settlers, as did also many of those who were stationed at the forts built in North Adams, Williamstown, and Lanesboro. But the memorable battle on the Plains of Abraham, September 13, 1759, when Quebec capitulated, and the subsequent peace treaty of 1763, when all of Canada was ceded to Great Britain, did away with the menace of a foreign and a savage foe, and settlers from Connecticut and the earlier settled parts of Massachusetts began to pour in, so that in 1791, when the first U. S. census was taken, the county had a population of 30,291 souls, equaling nearly half its present population.

REVOLUTIONARY WAR.

Scarcely had the pioneers settled down to the avocations of peace, when the tyranny of Great Britain began to be felt, terminating in the war of the Revolution. We will not rehearse the causes which brought this great event about, but simply glance at their results as shown in Berkshire county. In 1774, a county convention was called, meeting at Stockbridge on the 6th and 7th of July. At this convention, or "Congress" as it was then called, the several towns were represented by delegates, as follows: Adams, Eliel Todd; Alford, Ebenezer Barrett, Deodote Ingersoll and William Brunson; Becket, Nathaniel Kingsley, Peter Porter, and Jonathan Wadsworth; Egremont, Ephraim Fitch, Capt. Timothy Kellogg and Samuel Culver; Great Barrington, Mark Hopkins, Dr. William Whiting and Truman Wheeler; Hancock, Capt. Asa Douglass; Lenox, Caleb Hyde, Capt. Edward Gray, Lemuel Collins, Jno. Patterson and William Walker; Lanesboro, Gideon Wheeler, Peter Curtis and Francis Gittau; New Marlboro, Elihu Wright, Jabez Ward, Noah Church, Zenas Wheeler and Ephraim Gittau; Peru, Nathan Fisk; Pittsfield, Jno. Brown, James Eason and Jno. Strong; Richmond, Capt. Elisha Brown, Lieut. David Rosseter and Nathaniel Wilson; Sheffield, Jno. Ashley, Capt. Nathaniel Austin, Silas Kellogg, Theodore Sedgwick, Capt. William Day, William Bacon and Dr. Lemuel Barnard; Stockbridge, Timothy Edwards, Jahleel Woobridge, Samuel Brown, Jr., Thomas Williams, and Dr. Erastus Sergeant; Tyringham, Giles Jackson, Benjamin Warner and

Ezekiel Herrick ; West Stockbridge, Elisha Hooper and Benjamin Lewis ; Washington, William Spencer and Moses Ashley ; and Williamstown, Robert Hawkins, Elisha Biker and Jacob Marsh, making fifty-eight delegates in all. These gentlemen drew up the following set of resolutions and forwarded them to the " Committee of Correspondence," at Boston :—

" Whereas, The Parliament of Great Britain have, of late, undertaken to give and grant away our money, without our knowlege or consent ; and in order to compel us to a servile submission to the above measures, have proceeded to block up the harbor of Boston ; also, have, or are about to vacate the charter, and repeal certain laws of this Province, heretofore enacted by the General Court, and confirmed to us by the king and his predecessors. Therefore, as a means to obtain a speedy redress of the above grievances, We do solemnly and in good faith covenant and engage with each other :

" 1st, That we will not import, purchase, or consume, or suffer any person for, by, or under us, to import, purchase, or consume, in any manner whatever, any goods, wares, or manufactures, which shall arrive in America from Great Britain, from and after the first day of October next, or such other time as shall be agreed upon by the American Congress ; nor any goods which shall be ordered from thence and after this day, until our charter and constitutional rights shall be restored ; or until it shall be determined by the major part of our brethren in this and the neighboring colonies, that a non-importation agreement will not have a tendency to effect the desired end, and until it shall be apparent that a non-importation or non-consumption agreement will not be entered into by the majority of this and the neighboring colonies, except such articles as the said General Congress of North America shall advise to import and consume :

" 2d, We do further covenant and agree, that we will observe the most strict obedience to all constitutional laws and authority ; and will at all times exert ourselves to the utmost for the discouragement of all licentiousness, and suppressing all disorderly mobs and riots :

" 3d, We will exert ourselves as far in us lies, in promoting peace, love, and unanimity among each other ; and for that end, we engage to avoid all unnecessary lawsuits whatever.

" 4th. As a strict and proper adherence to the non-importation and non-consumption agreement will, if not seasonably provided against, involve us in many difficulties and inconveniences, we do promise and agree, that we will take the most prudent care for the raising of sheep, and for the manufacturing all such clothes as shall be most useful and necessary ; and, also, for the raising of flax, and the manufacturing of linen ; further, that we will by every prudent method endeavor to guard against all those inconveniences which might otherwise arise from the foregoing agreement :

" 5th, That if any person shall refuse to sign this, or a similar covenant, or after having sixed it, shall not adhere to the real intent and meaning thereof, he or they shall be treated by us with all the neglect they shall justly deserve, particularly by omitting all commercial dealings with them.

" 6th, That of this, or a similar covenant, shall, after the first day of August next, be offered to any trader or shop-keeper in this county, or he or they shall refuse to sign the same for the space of forty-eight hours, that we will from thenceforth purchase no article of British manufacture, or East India goods, from him or them, until such time as he or they shall sign this or a similar covenant."

Soon after this convention was held, two regiments of "minute men" were raised by voluntary enlistments ; one in the middle and northern part of the county, under Col. John Patterson, of Lenox, afterwards General Patterson, and the other in the southern part, under Col. John Fellows, of Sheffield, afterwards General Fellows. Both of these regiments marched to Boston soon after the battle of Lexington, where they were re-organized and enlarged. In addition to these regiments, also, many other soldiers went out from the county, for longer or shorter terms of enlistment, while in 1780, by an act passed by the general court on December 2d of that year, 222 men were raised here for the service, to serve "three years, or until the close of the war, which were distributed among the several towns as follows: Sheffield, twenty-two; Great Barrington, eleven; Egremont, seven; Alford, three; Stockbridge, twelve; West Stockbridge, seven; Tyringham, ten; New Marlboro, twelve; Sandisfield, twelve; Becket, five; London (part of Otis), three; Richmond, thirteen; Lenox, ten; Pittsfield, fifteen; Ashuelot Equivalent (Dalton), three; Washington, four; Lee, seven; Lanesboro, fifteen; New Ashford, two; Williamstown, thirteen; Hancock, seven; Partridgefield (now parts of Peru and Hinsdale), six; Windsor, eight; and Adams, fifteen. The Stockbridge Indians also furnished a company, commanded by Capt. Abraham Nimham, one of their own tribe.

But our space forbids an extended notice of the part that Berkshire soldiers took in the events during those days that "tried men's souls." Suffice it to say, then, that her brave sons bore an honorable part at Bunker Hill, at Boston, at Bennington, in the expedition of Arnold through the wilds of Maine, in the taking of Ticonderoga, and in the co-operation of Montgomery, by the way of Lake Champlain, Montreal and St. Lawrence, with Arnold under the frowning walls of Quebec. And as a fitting reward the county had the pleasure of acting the part of host to General Burgoyne and his conquered army, for one night at least, while they were passing over the great highway leading from Albany to Boston.

WAR OF 1812.

For a period of nearly thirty years, except the troubles attending the Shays Rebellion, which has already been spoken of, peace was enjoyed. During this time forests had disappeared and villages and highly cultivated farms taken their places, mills and factories had sprung into existence, while Berkshire county, from a pioneer settlement, had stepped well forward in the ranks of her sister counties. But England, notwithstanding the lesson she had received, and all the years that had intervened, seemed not to appreciate the fact that her American colony had grown to an independent nation; and though in March, 1782, Burke and Fox had raised their voices in the British parliament, and the House of Commons had formally declared that it "would consider as public enemies all those who should advise a further prosecution of the war with America," England still persisted in acts of tyranny until they became unendurable. Accordingly, on the 18th of June, 1812, an act was passed in our House of Representatives, by a vote of seventy-nine to forty-nine, and in the Senate by a majority of nineteen to thirteen, declaring war against Great Britain. The message of the President contained these as the principal reasons: "The impressment of American seamen by the British, the blockade of her enemies' ports, in consequence of which American commerce had been plundered in every sea, etc."

During the two years that this war raged, Berkshire, as in days of old, sent out many of her sons; but no important event pertaining to the war occurred here, except, perhaps, we consider as such the purchase of fourteen acres of land at Pittsfield, by the U. S. Government, on which to erect barracks and a hospital for the troops. In the autumn of 1814 Governor Strong issued a call for troops, when an entire regiment of infantry was raised in this county. One of New Marlboro's sons, Major-General Whiton, was distinguished as holding that high office. His aids were Col. Henry W. Dwight, of Stockbridge, and Colonel Sloane, of Lanesboro.

WAR OF THE UNION.

"Immortal names! O noble ones!
 A nation's heart will throb
 For ye who fell in manly prime,
 For freedom and for God;
 And woman's eye grow dim with tears,
 And bows its head
 Before thy deeds of valor done,
 New England's honored dead."

For nearly half a century after the war of 1812, peace brooded over the green hills and fertile valleys of the old Bay State. Youths had grown to manhood and to old age, and now, as gray-haired grandsires, they trotted the children upon their knees and rehearsed to them the tales they loved best to hear—tales of the battles fought and won. Prosperity asserted itself in the hum of busy machinery, telling of the increase of manufacturing interests, in the silver threads that were branching in all directions, proclaiming the route of the iron-horse as it conveyed to prosperous marts the harvest's surplus. Each morn the sun rose on a prosperous, happy, contented people; but alas! as its rays wreathed with a glad smile the mountain summits on the morn of April 12th, 1861, it awakened no answering smile in the hearts of the people. The first shot on Sumpter had frightened away the angel Peace, and grim War usurped her place.

Side by side with her sister states, Massachusetts endured the weary marches and bore the brunt of battles, and side by side their sons sleep the long sleep—some 'neath the sun-kissed plains of the willful South, some rocked in the bosom of the broad Atlantic, "held in the hollow of His hand," while others have been borne to rest among their kindred by sympathizing friends, who, year by year, to muffled drum-beat, wend their way to their consecrated tombs to deck their "couch of dreamless sleep" with beautiful spring flowers—a national tribute to the memory of

The Bay State, aside from her treasure, furnished 159,254 men, being a surplus of 13,492 over all calls. Of this number, according to the returns made by the selectmen of the various towns in 1866, Berkshire county furnished 5,356, which was about the quota required. This number, however, could not have included the surplus to which the several towns were entitled, as every town furnished its full quota under every call by the President, and all except Mount Washington and Tyringham had a surplus to their credit at the end of the war. The aggregate expenditure of all the towns in the county amounted to $597,652.55, to which should be added $262,049 61, the amount raised for state aid to soldiers' families during the war, and which was reimbursed by the commonwealth, and the grand total raised will be $859,702.16. The following table shows the amount of money, excess of men, and number of commissioned officers furnished by each town :—

FORTY-NINTH REGIMENT, Infantry, mustered in for nine months, had a total of 966 men, twenty-one of whom were killed in action, and eighty-four died of wounds or disease. This regiment was raised entirely in Berkshire county, there being only three of its members from other counties. Pittsfield contributed 140, Great Barrington eighty-two, Sheffield seventy-five, Adams seventy-four, Lee fifty five, New Marlboro forty-one, and most of the other towns their just proportions. These men were the very flower of the county, averaging about twenty-five years in age. The old 49th upheld well the credit of Berkshire county and of the old Bay State on many a sanguinary field, among which is mentioned, with commendable pride, that of May 27, 1863, when of her 233 men who volunteered to lead the forlorn hope and storm the outposts of Port Hudson, in less than three quarters of an hour eighty fell, killed or wounded. Over the tidings from this fitly-called "Slaughtersfield," could many a Berkshire farmer, had he the Roman fortitude, exclaim,—

"Thanks to the gods my boy has done his duty.
Welcome my Son. There sit him down my friends,
Full in my sight, that I may view at leisure
The bloody corse and count the glorious wounds:
Who would not be this youth? What pity 'tis
That we can die but once to save our country."

GAZETTEER OF TOWNS.

ADAMS lies in the northern part of the country, in $42^{\circ} 37'$ north latitude, and in longitude east from Washington,* $3^{\circ} 53'$, bounded north by North Adams, east by Savoy and a small part of Florida, south by Cheshire and a small part of Savoy, and west by small parts of Cheshire, New Ashford and Williamstown. The town was named in honor of the patriot Samuel Adams, and was originally in the form of a parallelogram, seven miles long and five miles broad, remaining thus until it was divided a few years since, the northern part being formed into the town of North Adams. As this division occurred so recently, however, we shall for the present consider the towns as one, the old town of Adams, as their early history is coincident.

These combined townships then, were originally known as East Hoosac, the tract being explored and surveyed by a committee appointed by the general court, in 1749, they being instructed to lay out a township six miles square. This order, for some reason, they did not obey, but made the tract seven miles by five, or having an area of 22,400 acres. From this a small part was taken towards forming the town of Cheshire, March 14, 1793, other than which no changes were made until the division of the town. In the year following that in which the survey was made, in 1750, Ephraim Williams secured a grant of 200 acres, under condition that he should "reserve ten acres for a fort, and build a grist and saw-mill, and keep them in repair for twenty years." The reservation of ten acres was located in the north-western part of the town. On June 2, 1762, the general court sold at auction nine townships in the northwestern part of the county, among which East Hoosac was No. 1. It was purchased by Nathan Jones, he paying therefor £3,200. Soon after his purchase he admitted as joint proprietors Col. Elisha Jones and John Murray.

The proprietors, in October of the same year, employed a surveyor to lay out forty-eight settling lots of 100 acres each. A line was drawn through the length of the town, dividing the best of the land into two equal parts, and on each side of this line a range of lots was laid out. Each lot was 160 rods long from east to west, abating from the breadth of each lot enough to bring the range of twenty-four lots within the north and south limits of the town. These forty-eight settling lots, occupying the bottom of the valley through its whole length, comprised the heart of the township. Four years after, or in 1764, Israel Jones, then a resident of the town, was authorized to survey a further number of lots, not exceeding twenty, of 100 acres each, and as agent of the proprietors to admit sixty settlers, this number being fixed upon in order to fulfil the conditions voted by the general court, that "when the number of settlers shall have amounted to sixty, they shall build a meeting-house and settle a learned protestant minister." The proprietors would naturally be anxious to obtain this number, as the building of a church and settlement of a minister would prove a great impetus in drawing other settlers, thus enhancing the value of land. The rest of the township was divided into 200 acre lots, in 1768, and distributed among the proprietors according to their shares in the property of the town. Ten years later, October 15, 1778, East Hoosac was incorporated as the township of Adams, named, as we have said, in honor of Samuel Adams, who subsequently became Governor of the State. April 16, 1878, the town was divided, the line passing midway between the northern and southern boundaries, north of which the territory was incorporated into the township of North Adams, and the southern part retaining the old name of Adams, and is thus the Adams of which we write.

The surface of Adams is broken and mountainous, being noted for its picturesque scenery, having within its limits the highest point of land in Massachusetts, old Greylock, towering to an altitude of 3,505 feet. Hoosac river enters the town from the South, flowing a northerly course through the entire length of the township, twisting its serpentine course through a rich valley of great beauty, to the east and west of which rises hill upon hill and mountain upon mountain, here turned in graceful curves, and there broken into sharp angles by crag and precipice. Within this beautiful valley are located nearly all of the inhabitants, within it is conducted the manufactures of the town, and crossing and recrossing the Hoosac, like threads of silver, extend the rails of the Pittsfield & North Adams railroad, over which is conducted the towns' harvest surplus and the result of her toil in the factory and shop. The mountains of which Greylock peak forms a part, are now known as the Greylock group, though they were formerly, and are still to a certain extent, called as a whole, Saddle Mountain. This very unromantic title, however, is fast giving way to the poetic and smooth-sounding Greylock, given from the poetic fancy that the peak, when whitened by the snows or frosts of autumn and spring, the body being clothed in dark forests, presents the appearance of the grey and straggling locks of an old man. The sides of the mountain are covered with a thick growth of maple, beach, birch and cherry, while its summit affords to the observer a most magnificent and enchanting prospect, of which Mr. W. Gladden speaks as follows :—

“ Down at its feet lies the valley of the Hoosac, nearly three thousand feet below. Pittsfield, with its beautiful lakes, and many smaller villages, are seen in the valleys and on the adjacent slopes. Southwestward the eye sweeps over the top of the Taconics, away to the Catskills, beyond the Hudson; northwestward the peaks of the Adirondacks, in Northern New York, are plainly visible; in the north the sturdy ridges of the Green Mountains file away in grand outline; on the east Monadnock and Wachusett renew their stately greeting, and Tom and Holyoke look up from their beautiful valley; southward Mount Everett stands sentinel at the portal of Berkshire, through which the Housatonic flows. And all this grand circuit is filled with mountains; range beyond range, peak above peak, they stretch away on every side, a boundless expanse of mountain-summits. Standing here and taking in with your eye all that is contained within the vague boundaries of the horizon, you receive the grandest if not the very first impression you ever had of distance, of immensity, and of illimitable force.”

Between Greylock and the other mountain summits, just over the line in Williamstown, lies “the Hopper,” a chasm more than a thousand feet in depth whose four wooded sides, seen from above, appear to converge at a point below.

“The Bellow’s Pipe” is a narrow gorge between Greylock and the peaks on the east, through which the northwest gales sometimes sweep with fearful violence. The soil of the valley is rich and deep, and here are located some excellent farms, while the hillsides afford some fine grazing land. The rocks entering into the geological structure of the territory are talcose and mica-slate and limestone.

In 1880, when the last census was taken, Adams had a population of 5,591, though she now has, owing to increase in manufacturing interests, about 3,000 more, while the report of the State Board of Education for 1883, shows the town to have employed twenty-eight teachers during the year, five of whom were males, and to have sustained one high school, having forty-four pupils, while the aggregate attendance upon all the schools was 1,581. The annual report of the school committee for 1884 shows the town to have 1,602 children of school age, the average membership in school, being 1,136, and the average attendance 1,056.

ADAMS is a handsome post village nestled at the foot of old Greylock, on the Pittsfield & North Adams R. R., and extending on both sides of the Hoosac river. Here are collected factories, mechanic shops, rows of business blocks, dwellings and churches, forming a neat, prosperous and vigorous New England village. North and south of it, strung along the Hoosac like beads on a thread, are other prosperous, manufacturing villages, so that the valley is almost a continuous village through the whole length of the town, for it must be remembered that nearly the whole population of the township is gathered in this narrow valley.

ARNOLDSVILLE is the southermost village, extending nearly to the Cheshire line.

MAPLE GROVE is a bright manufacturing community, lying between Arnoldsville and Adams village.

RENFREW is another enterprising little village, where are located the Renfrew mills.

HOWLANDS comes next, a village yet in its infancy, though possessing a wonderfully sturdy growth, where are located the extensive works of the American Zylonite Company.

The American Zylonite Co.—Paper, camphor and alcohol, combined and treated chemically, make zylonite, and from zylonite in turn are made almost numberless kinds of goods, which have heretofore been produced from shell, bone, ivory, hard rubber, celluloid and metal, celluloid being so similar a combination and closely allied to zylonite in both material and manufacture, that cross suits at law are either pending or have recently been decided in the matter of infringement, injunctions, etc., between the zylonite and celluloid companies. These works are located midway between the villages of North Adams and Adams, at the pretty and prosperous village of Howlands, which no longer than three years ago had neither name or habitation. Ground was broken for the erection of manufacturing buildings and for the residences of employees, the result already attained being a handsomely located hamlet with plenty of room for growth to a comely village.

Like all new enterprises, in this instance introducing not only an entire new line of manufactured goods, but a new process of manufacture, the first steps of progress were slow; but the outcome gives evidence that they were surely taken, and that the work of building factories and residences, making streets and sidewalks, securing help, constructing machinery, etc., has been successfully carried out.

In the summer of 1883 the first manufactured goods of the company were put upon the market, the early installments offered to the trade creating such a demand that the entire force of the establishment is kept busy in filling orders for goods, and the larger part of the works is kept running both night and day.

As we said at the outset, paper, camphor, and alcohol are the materials from which zylonite is made, paper being the basis and principal feature of the stock used in this system of manufacture. This must needs be made from pure rag stock, and be as nearly without spot or blemish as the greatest care in the selection of stock and details of the manufacture of paper can make it. This paper is manufactured at the Greylock mills of the L. L. Brown Paper Co., at Adams, being made expressly to order and delivered in rolls. The first process of manufacture into zylonite is the cutting of the paper into strips, about an inch wide and two feet long, the paper being embossed while passing through the machine. The embossing is found necessary to prevent the paper from matting together, as it would be liable to do in sheets in the following process of manufacture:

The paper strips are placed in iron vessels, when strong acids are applied, and by means of chemical action the paper is again resolved into pulp. Then by means of processes peculiar to the company and which cover all the secrets, if secrets there are, in the manufacturing details, the important features of which are the introduction and combination of camphor and alcohol to the pulp, making the preparation entirely insoluble. At this stage of procedure, the mass partakes of the nature of cellulose, when coloring matter is introduced, and the combined preparation is passed continuously between heavy and highly polished rollers, not unlike paper-mill calender rolls in appearance, or perhaps more like the machinery generally used for grinding rubber. It is then molded into slabs of four or five feet in length, two feet in width and three or four inches in thickness, after a certain length of time, and when in proper condition, the slabs are placed on the bed of a machine in which they are shaved to any desired thickness. At this stage, the shaved sheets are as clear as crystal and transparent as glass, presenting nothing to the eye when looking through them, but the shade or color, which may have been added at the proper time.

Celluloid, having first been made from gun cotton, was necessarily an explosive compound, and the idea has quite generally attained that both zyl-nite and celluloid are dangerously explosive substances. Zylonite is not explosive in the least degree; but it is inflammable, and will burn readily and freely, as will paper in its crude or any of its more finished conditions, Zylonite being just as liable to destruction by fire as paper is found to be, and more so. The particulars we give, as to what zylonite is, viz.: paper, camphor and alcohol, cover all the published information that is to be had on the subject, as both Webster and Worcester are silent on the subject, and will continue so until revised editions are printed.

The American Zylonite Co. was incorporated in 1881, with a capital of $750,000.00, the officers of the company being Emil Kipper, of Adams, president; S. W. Ingalls, of North Adams, treasurer. The New York office of the company is at 361 and 363 Broadway. The company employs 150 hands. Later on, in 1883, was incorporated the Zylonite Comb and Brush Co., with a capital of $100,000.00, which now employs 175 hands in the manufacture of zylonite combs, brushes, and mirrors of all kinds. The officers are W. L. Brown, of North Adams, president; B. E. Kingman, of New York, treasurer; and C. A. Denny, of New York, secretary. Still later, or early in 1884, was incorporated the Zylonite Novelty Co., with a capital of $100,000.00, for the manufacture of zylonite shoe-horns, glove-stretchers, pen-holders, checks, handles of all kinds, toilet boxes, martingale rings, etc., etc., giving employment to about fifty hands. The officers are W. L. Brown, of North Adams, president, and B. E. Kingman, of New York, treasurer. The business of these companies is constantly increasing, necessitating the erection of new buildings, etc., promising within five years to become the largest manufacturing establishments in Berkshire county.

The Renfrew Manufacturing Co., whose works are located at Renfrew, was incorporated in 1867, its present officers being L. L. Brown, president; James C. Chalmers, secretary; and James Renfrew, Jr., agent; a capital of $1,400,000.00 being employed. The company manufactures gingham, yarns, turkey-red damask table cloths, and fancy dress goods, employing about 2,500 operatives. The mills are operated by both steam and water-power.

The Adams Steam Grist Mills, located on Hoosac street, Adams, were built by Messrs. Butler & Fairchild, in 1869. In 1871 the property came into the hands of H. A. Butler & Co., and in 1874, Mr. M. C. Richmond, of this firm, became sole owner, and still conducts the business. The mills have two runs of stones, with the capacity for grinding 600 bushels of grain per day.

Henry J. Arnold & Son's steam saw and planing-mills, located on Spring st., was established in 1878. Mr. Arnold gives employment to fifty hands in the manufacture of lumber, boxes and barrels, turning out about 3,000,000 feet of lumber per annum.

Allen Iron Works located on Mill street, operated by both steam and water-power, were built by James A. Allen, in 1871. Mr. Allen manufactures patent grate bars, filters for paper-mills, sugar refineries, bleacheries and dye works, beamers, skein spoolers, bobbin winders, chain warpers, dye machines, and chain-splitting machines, all of which are his own inventions and his specialties in manufacture. He has also invented a new steam-heating apparatus, which is considered of great value for heating factories, churches and dwellings. He gives employment to about twenty-five hands.

The Greylock Woolen Mills, located at Maple Grove, on the Hoosack river, were erected in 1864, by Messrs. Peter Blackinton and B. F. Phillips. The present firm is B. F. Phillips & Son, who manufacture cassimeres, ladies' dress goods and shawls. The mills are operated by both steam and water-power, are furnished with seven sets of machinery, and give employment to 160 operatives.

James B. Dean's grist-mill and cotton-batting factory are located on road 14 cor 26 and 27, on Peck's brook. The grist-mill grinds meal and feed, and cotton batting is made from waste material gotten at cotton factories. Mr. Dean employs six hands.

The Maple Grove Warp Mills, located at Maple Grove, Adams & Co., proprietors, have 4,100 spindles and employ 125 hands in the manufacture of cotton warp. The mills were built by Adams & Seeley, in 1848.

The Plunkett Manufacturing Co.—The mills occupied by this heavy company were built by Stephen L. Arnold & Co., in 1846, going into operation July 4th of that year, manufacturing cotton cloth. Upon the death of Stephen L. Arnold, the concern was left entirely to his partner, Daniel Arnold, and then came an unsuccessful period of several years. It then became the property of O. Anold & Co., and then, several years later, came another change of proprietors, and finally, in 1881, it was taken by the present company. The officers of the concern are J. R. Anthony, president; W. B. Plunkett, treasurer; and Charles T. Plunkett, manager. They have 5,200 spindles and 120 fancy looms, producing bleached dress goods.

W. C. Plunkett & Sons.—This firm, composed of William B. and Charles T. Plunkett, carry on an extensive business in the manufacture of white and colored cotton warps and yarns, operating 14,200 spindles.

The Pump Log Factory.—This old factory was located on Tophet brook, about three-quarters of a mile east of the village. It was built by Daniel and John Anthony, in 1822, 40 by 30 feet, three and one-half stories in height, for the manufacture of cotton yarn. The water was thrown upon a wheel twenty-six feet in diameter, on a level with the third story. The weaving was all done in the families of the surrounding neighborhood. About seven years later Cyrus and Jacob Peck leased the factory, changing it to a machine shop for the manufacture of cotton and woolen machinery. About 1831 it was again changed, to a factory for manufacturing satinets, operated by Isaac U. Hoxie, who continued until 1834 or '35, when the factory was closed.

Turner's Factory.—This building was erected in 1814, by Gersham, Caleb, George and Sewell Turner, standing where the machine shop now stands, near the Stone Mill of the Renfrew Manuf. Co.

Although the two towns were then one, the sketch of old Fort Massachusetts and the Indian history pervading its story properly belong with the history of North Adams, to the sketch of which town the reader is referred. But in the following remarks relative to the early settlement of the territory, it must be remembered that we speak of the two towns as a whole, or as though no division had ever been made.

Among the early settlers of the town, not including a few soldiers who lingered near the fort, were Abial Smith and his sons Gideon and Jacob, John Kilborn and John McNeal, of Litchfield, Conn.; Reuben Hinman and Jonathan Smith, of Woodbury; and Messrs. Parker, Cook and Leavenworth, of Wallingford. These settlers, however, with others who located with them, did not remain long, most of them selling their lands to purchasers from Rhode Island, many of whom were Quakers. Others, not of that order, soon followed from the same State, until nearly the whole town was occupied by Rhode Islanders. October 15, 1778, the town was incorporated, the first town meeting being held March 8, 1779, when Capt. Philip Mason, Capt. Israel Jones, and Capt. Reuben Hinman were elected selectmen. The principal points of settlement were at what are now the villages of North Adams and Adams, forming the nuclei about which these villages were built. The grist and saw-mill required by the grant to Ephraim Williams, were built at what is now North Adams village, and a grist-mill was built about the same time at Adams village, or as it is generally known, South Adams. The following biographical sketches, however, are of only such as settled in what is now the township of Adams:—

Benjamin Farmer came to Adams, from Dartmouth, R. I., about 1787, settling as a pioneer farmer, where he resided until his death. His son William, born in Dartmouth in 1775, was twelve years old when he came to Adams with his father, and resided on the old homestead during the remainder of his life. He married Martha Chase, of his native town, who bore him eleven children, who lived to attain a mature age, and all married, except one daughter who remained at home and ministered to the wants of her parents until they died. Only one of this large family, Mrs. Ann Eliza Fessenden, now resides in the town.

Job Anthony, born at Taunton, Mass., in 1797, came to Adams in 1816, commencing an apprenticeship with Joseph Shove, tanner, with whom he remained three years. He then entered into a contract to support Hattel Kelly, a bachelor, and his maiden sister, for the use of a small tan-yard and a farm of fifty acres. This he continued to do until the death of Mr. Kelly, when he purchased the property to which he has added from time to time. Here he has continued to live, up to the present time. Mr. Anthony is of Quaker extraction, and early identified himself with that society here, being now the only surviving member thereof. At the dismissal of the society, in 1828, caused by the doctrines of Elias Hicks, Mr. Anthony took strong grounds against these sentiments, and is now decidedly orthodox. In his thirty-first year he married Hannah Harkness, who died in 1861. This union was blessed with the birth of two sons and a daughter, viz.: Susan (Mrs. Andrews Hall), living on Myrtle street; Job Kelly Anthony, merchant, of the firm of Anthony & Burlingame, at Maple Grove; and Edmund, a farmer, residing on the homestead. During his whole course as a business man, involving transactions of considerable amount, Mr. Anthony has never broken a contract nor failed to meet an obligation.

John Fisk, from Cheshire, came to Adams at an early date, locating on the farm his grandson, John H. Fisk, now occupies, where he remained till his death. He built the house thereon, which is still in a good state of preservation, in 1797. He married Hannah Smith, who bore him four children, none of whom are living. His son Daniel succeeded him on the homestead. Daniel was twice married and reared six children, four of whom are now living, viz.: Daniel W., in Wisconsin; Ann Eliza (Mrs. Henry Bliss), in Adams village; John H., as before mentioned; and Charles E., an invalid, occupying, with his mother, a part of the homestead.

Hiram H., son of Jerred Clark, was born in Williamstown, in November, 1820. He spent his youth much as other farmer's sons, in work on the farm and in attending the common school of his neighborhood, until fourteen years of age. He then was engaged to work in the cotton mills of Dr. Brayton, where the woolen mills of Deweyville are now located. In 1836 he engaged with James E. Marshall, a cotton manufacturer, of North Adams. In 1846 he engaged with Messrs. Pollock & Hathaway, where he remained two years, then bought out Mr. Hathaway's interest, the firm being known as William Pollock & Co., and was continued until 1863, when Mr. Clark withdrew and formed a partnership with George W. and John S. Adams, manufacturing cotton warp, under the firm name of Adams & Clark. This firm continued four years, when Mr. Clark purchased an interest in the Renfrew Manufacturing Co., holding the position of superintendent. Here he remained till 1871, when he sold out his interest and moved to Alabama, to superintend a manufactory of cotton checks and plaids, remaining there until the autumn of 1883, when he returned to Adams, and is now superintendent of the mills of the Plunkett Manufacturing Co. at Maple Grove.

David Anthony, from Rhode Island, came to Adams, as near as can be ascertained, about the time of the breaking out of the Revolution, locating in the southern part of the town, on the West road, near the Cheshire line. At the time of the battle of Bennington, while the men turned out with such arms as they could procure—guns, pitchforks, etc.,—and hastened forward to the scene of war, Mrs. Anthony collected her pewter ware and other valuables, placed them in her large brass kettle, and buried the whole in the cellar of their log house. Mr. Anthony remained where he first located until the division of the Friend's society, about 1827, when he went to live with his orthodox brother, in Greenfield, N. Y., where he died. His four sons were Elihu, John, Humphrey and David. Elhu and John, early in life, went to Greenfield, N. Y. Elihu was a farmer, blacksmith and Quaker preacher, John a farmer. Humphrey was a farmer and blacksmith, but owned fifteen shares of stock in the South Adams Cotton and Woolen Company, and was the Company's agent one year. He married Hannah, youngest daughter of Joshua Lapham, and attained the great age of ninety-six years, his wife dying at the age of sixty-six. Their children were Daniel, Susan, Hannah, John, Joshua, Abram, Ira, Ann Eliza and Humphrey. Daniel, a man of high talents and fine education, was a manufacturer, and built, with his brother John, the Pump Log Factory, and was the prime mover in organizing the first academy in town. He left Adams about 1827, and died in Rochester, about 1857. He married Susan Reed, a daughter of one of the early settlers, and reared six children, two of whom attained a national reputation, viz. : Miss Susan B. Anthony, and Col. Daniel R. Anthony, of Leavenworth fame. John was at one time a manufacturer here, but finally went West, and became an extensive land owner. Joshua was a farmer near the old homestead, and was killed by lightning about 1835. Abram has been a manufacturer, first at Maple Grove, with his brother John, next with his brother-in-law, Israel U. Hoxie ; he then gave his attention to farming, owned 600 acres, continuing a farmer several years, when he built a saw-mill and grist-mill, at Renfrew, and finally sold out to William Pollock, in 186-. He still owns valuable land in the vicinity of Renfrew Mills, along the Hoosac. Ira died in boyhood. Ann Eliza married Mr. Dickinson, and is now a widow, residing in Chicago. Humphrey resides in town, a wealthy farmer.

Joshua Lapham came to Adams sometime previous to 1781, and was one of the organizers of Friends society, and one of its first members. He was a farmer, and located about half a mile north of Bowen's corners. His sons nearly all went west, were enterprising and energetic men. None of the name, however, are now in town.

Stoel E. Dean was born in New Ashford, April 18, 1809, and came to Adams with his father, a tanner, when twenty years of age. He was a partner with his father a few years, and in 1841 he left Adams and engaged with his brother in the tanning business at Pittsfield, where he remained nine years. In 1850 he returned to Adams and formed a partnership with B. F. Phillips, under the firm name of Dean & Phillips, for the manufacture of woolen goods. This firm continued about three years, when he rented the factory to Messrs. B. F. Phillips and Peter Blackinton, but soon obtained an interest in the firm. This continued until about 1857, when Abram La Monte entered the firm, and later Messrs. Phillips and Blackinton retired, Mr. Dean and Mr. LaMonte continuing the business alone until the factory was destroyed by fire. The building was soon after replaced and occupied by the Richmond & Upton Paper Co., in which Mr. Dean had an interest. The factory was finally sold to William C. Plunkett, and is now used by his sons in the manufacture of cotton warp. Since then Mr. Dean has retired from active business. He was in early life a Democrat, but in 1844, believing the principle of Free Soil correct, he left the party, and at the organization of the Republican party he identified himself with it, and was elected to the State legislature in the autumn of 1860.

Horace M. Holmes, M. D., was born in Waterville, Vt., November 2, 1830. He received his education at Bakersfield Academy, and then went to Warsaw, Ill., in May, 1848, where he successfully engaged in teaching about a year and a half. He then, after teaching a short time in Alexandria, Mo., returned East, commencing the study of medicine with the late Profs. H. H. and T. Childs, of Pittsfield, also attending lectures at the old Berkshire Medical college, from which he graduated in 1852. He immediately commenced practice in Cambridge, Vt., remaining only a short time, however, when he located in Adams in 1853, forming a partnership with the late Dr. George C. Lawrence, which lasted one year, since which time he has practiced alone. During his first year here he was elected school committee, serving two years. In politics, Dr. Holmes is a firm Republican, and in the autumn of 1878 was elected to represent the Second Berkshire District, serving on the committee on public health, and was re-elected the following year, serving on the same committee. He has since, however, given his whole attention to his large practice.

Liscom Philips, M. D., was born in Ashfield, Mass., in 1777, studied medicine with Dr. Bryant, of Cummington, father of William Cullen Bryant, and commenced practice in Savoy soon after graduating. He remained there until 1812, when he removed to Adams, where he remained in practice until his death, in 1821. He married Nancy Paddleford, of Taunton, who bore him seven children, all of whom, except three, removed from the town at an early age. Henry P. Phillips took his father's profession, attended Williams college, and graduated from the old Berkshire Medical college, and commenced practice with his father-in-law, Dr. Tyler, in Lanesboro. Two years after he settled in Adams, remained till 1840, then removed to North Adams, where he remained in successful practice until his death, in November, 1881. Julia A. Phillips became the wife of Stoel E. Dean, in 1834. Benjamin F. Phillips, now occupying the homestead, on Park street, was born therein in 1817. He commenced work in the wool-carding mills of William Jenks, at the age of fourteen, remaining in this manufacture until 1850, when he became a partner with Stoel E. Dean. In 1853 Mr. Phillips and Peter Blackinton rented the mills of Mr. Dean, and in 1857 Messrs. Dean and LaMont were admitted, the firm name being Blackinton, Phillips & Co., which was continued till 1860, when Blackinton and Phillips withdrew and commenced the manufacture of woolen goods at Maple Grove. In 1864 they built the present Greylock woolen mill, and in 1866 they divided their property, Mr. Phillips obtaining Greylock mills, which he now operates in company with his son Albert L., manufacturing cassimeres, ladies' dress-goods and shawls.

Zebedee Dean, born in Rehoboth, Mass., in 1782, moved to Cheshire about 1800, and learned the blacksmith trade of his step-father, Ephraim Farmington. After learning his trade, he bought out his father and carried on the blacksmithing business and farming until about 1860, when he gave up blacksmithing and sold his farm, but lived in the house until his death, in 1867, aged eighty-five years and six months. Three children are living, D. J., James B., and Albert G.

D. J. Dean, born in Cheshire, in 1816, worked on the farm till fifteen years old, then went into the store of Russell Brown, continued there until the dissolution of Brown & Plunkett, in 1841, then came to Adams, entering the employ of Mr. Brown, as business manager of his mill and store. He continued with Mr. Brown till the latter's death, in 1851, when, after settling the deceased's estate, he bought an interest in the mercantile business, with David Richmond, continuing with him three years, then bought his interest and continued the business until 1883. He then, on account of age and failing health, sold out to E. J. Noble. He was a member of the House of Representatives in 1848 and 1876; member of the Senate in 1879; town assessor for twenty-five years; selectman one or two years; director of the First National Bank seventeen or eighteen years; and vice-president and trustee of the South Adams Savings Bank from its commencement, in 1869, to the present time.

Russell Brown, born in Cheshire, in 1782, worked at farming until about 1803-04, then commenced mercantile business, at Cheshire, which he continued successfully until 1845-46. He was a member of both branches of the legislature several times. About 1820-25 he bought an interest in the Adams South Village Cotton and Woolen Mfg. Co., at Adams, and by buying in the shares was principal owner in 1825-26. In 1831-32 he sold an interest in the mill to William C. Plunkett, who, in 1832-33, built the "Stone Mill," for the manufacture of print cloths, under the firm name of Brown & Plunkett, who continued together till 1841, when they dissolved, Mr. Brown taking the lower or Stone Mill, and Mr. Plunkett the upper or Brick Mill. Mr. Brown continued manufacturing until his death, in 1851, aged sixty-nine years, ending a long, successful and honorable business life. He died without issue.

Gen. William C. Plunkett, who died at Adams, Saturday, January 19, 1884, ending a well spent and useful life of eighty-four years, was the last of three brothers—William C., Charles H., of Hinsdale, and Thomas F., of Pittsfield—who have left their mark in the business, social and political life of Berkshire. Mr. Plunkett was born in a log cabin at Lenox, but managed by economy to obtain a practical academic training, which fitted him for a school teacher, and enabled him to obtain a situation in Lanesboro, to which place his family had removed from Lenox. About the year 1830 he moved to Adams, and although his capital then consisted of only $270.00, it was the foundation for large manufacturing interests with which he was identified up to the time of his death. He made cotton and woolen goods, and the Plunkett Manufacturing Company and the Greylock Mills attest his enterprise and industry. His two sons, William B. and Charles T., were associated with him for a number of years, owning a controlling interest in four or five mills. Mr. Plunkett acquired his military title in old military days, and although having held the high offices of lieutenant-governor, executive councillor, senator and representative to the general court, there was no honor he more highly prized than that of moderator over the deliberations of his fellow citizens in town meetings. He was a progressive man in every respect, and good schools and school-houses were always advocated by him. Gen. Plunkett held many offices of trust in the State. He was lieutenant-governor with Gov. Emory Washburn, of Worcester, in 1854, a member of the senate in 1840, and several times represented his district in the lower branch of the legislature, the last time in 1872-73. He served in the executive council with both Governors Rice and Long, and was a member of the constitutional convention in 1853. He is particularly missed by the Congregational church and Sunday school, having been one of the most prominent members of the church since its formation in 1840, its most liberal supporter and a deacon almost constantly. He had also been superintendent of the Sunday school for forty-two consecutive years.

Edmund Jenks, from Smithfield, R. I., located, in 1778, about a mile and a quarter east of Adams. He reared a large family of six sons and three daughters, the sons being named Charles, Samuel, William, Thomas, George and Edmund, Jr. They all upheld well the good reputation of the family as farmers, mechanics, manufacturers, doctors and in political life. They located in different parts of the county and have left many descendants.

Zacheus Hathaway, born at Freetown, Mass., in 1751, married Eleanor Upton, of Berkley, and came to Adams in 1791, locating on road 12, where they reared a family of eight children. Edward, the fifth child, remained on the old homestead, married Abigail Power, of Hudson, N. Y., and reared four children. Of these, Rufus B. and Lydia P. are living, occupying the old home farm.

During the Revolutionary period the inhabitants of Adams maintained prompt co-operation with the government. Numerous votes stand on record, authorizing assessments to defray the expenses of the part they were taking in the contest. They raised large sums at a time. At one meeting it was "voted to give nine month's men ten dollars a month in grain,—wheat at 6s., per bushel, rye at 4s., corn at 3s., and one hundred continental dollars before they marched."

The Baptist church of Adams, located on Commercial street, was organized by James Mason, Daniel Smith and others, in 1826, Rev. Mr. Sweet being the first pastor. Their church building, which is still in use, was erected in 1835; it is a frame structure capable of seating 300 persons, and, including grounds, etc., is valued at $2,500.00. The society now has 216 members, with C. W. Anable, D. D., pastor.

The First Congregational church of South Adams was organized by Rev. Stillman Pratt, with two members, January 1, 1840, Mr. Pratt being also the first settled minister, installed in 1845. In 1843 the society erected a house of worship which did service until 1868, when the present handsome wood structure was erected, which will comfortably seat 600 persons, and is valued, including grounds, at $30,000 00, its original cost being $25,000.00. The society has about 300 members, with Rev. Edward Hungerford, pastor. We quote from a copy of the New York Observer, of 1883, the following paragraph relative to this church, from the pen of S. E. Bridgeman:—

“We were much interested in the reminiscences of the town of Adams as given by Gen. C. W. Plunkett, a county octogenarian. When he went to that town half a century ago, the Sabbath was openly profaned, stores were kept open, farmers plowed their fields, boys played ball in the streets, factories were ‘raised,’ and even the pastor of the single church carried his grist to mill on Sunday! When an earnest Baptist minister came into the village and preached against the desecration of the Sabbath, by the people digging ditches and grinding corn, the public sentiment was so strong as to compel him to leave. Dr. Alden, of Williamstown, and Prof. Hopkins, his associate, seeing the ungodliness of their neighbors, sent out the cry: ‘Who will go to Adams?’ Rev. Stillman replied, ‘I’ll go,’ and he went, often preaching to an audience of six. In 1840 the church was organized, with two members. In two months the original church had diminished one half, but that half being a woman it could not die, and to-day it has a membership of nearly 300, and a Sabbath School of over 250.

St. Paul’s Universalist Parish was organized by E. F. Jenks and thirty-two others, March 28, 1844, Almond W. Mason being the first pastor. The society soon after built a small brick church, which did service until 1871, when the present commodious structure was erected, which will comfortably accommodate 350 persons and is valued, including grounds, at $25,000.00. The present pastor of the society is Rev. W. S. Woodbridge.

St. Mark’s church of Adams, Protestant Episcopal, was originally organized in 1867, and re-organized in 1872, their church building being erected in 1881. This is a neat stone structure, capable of seating, including chapel, 400 persons, valued at $32,000.00, about its original cost. The parish now has sixty-three members, with Rev. Herbert Smythe, rector.

The Seven Dolors of the B. V. M., Roman Catholic church, was organized by its first pastor, Rev. C. Crevier, with 400 members, in 1871, and in 1875 their church building was erected, which is valued at $6,000.00. The society now has 1,700 members, with Rev. J. B. Charbonneau, pastor.

St. Charles Borromeo, Roman Catholic church, located on Park street, has 2,000 members, with Rev. Dennis C. Moran, assisted by Rev. James F. Maher, pastor.

ALFFORD lies in the southwestern part of the county, in lat. 42° 15' and long. 3° 36', bounded on the northeast by West Stockbridge, on the east by West Stockbridge and Great Barrington, south by Egremont and west by Hillsdale and Austerlitz, N. Y. The township is extremely irregular in outline, being about five miles in length and nearly three in width, and containing about 11,000 acres of territory, which was made up of several tracts of land, as follows: A tract purchased of the Stockbridge Indians in 1756, known as the "Shawenon Purchase," bordering on Egremont, the northern boundary line of which town was finally established February 6, 1790; the "Greenland Grant," supposed to have been granted to David Ingersoll, of Great Barrington, 652 rods long and 210 wide on the north line, 266 on the south; and an addition of 712 rods in length to the south-end of this latter tract, made February 18, 1819, and a small strip from New York, that fell into the town when the boundary line between New York and Massachusetts was established. The township was incorporated February 16, 1773.

The surface of the town is rough and mountainous, especially in the western part, where the scenery is unusually wild and romantic. The principal elevation is Tom Ball mountain, in the northeastern part, from whose summit a large extent of beautifully broken and variegated landscape is visible. The streams are numerous, clear and sparkling. Seekonk river flows a southerly course through a beautiful and fertile valley in the central part of the town, furnishing several good mill privileges. Burnham brook, its principal tributary, enters it from the west. Green river, a very beautiful stream has its source among the highlands of the southwestern part of the town, whence it flows through a charming valley, and meandering through Egremont and Great Barrington, it unites with the Housatonic. This stream has the honor of having inspired the pen of William Cullen Bryant to breathe the fine descriptive poem, commencing,—

"When breezes are soft, and skies are fair,
I steal an hour from study and care,
And hie me away to the woodland scene,
Where wanders the stream with waters of green,
As if the bright fringe of herbs on its brink
Had given their stain to the wave they drink:
And they whose meadows it murmurs through
Have named the stream from its own fair hue."

And it is a fact that the stream was named from the color of its waters the green cast probably being attributable to the clay washed from its banks, and not to "the bright fringe of herbs on its brink."

The soil, except the rocky and barren tracts of the mountains, is generally good, especially in the valleys of the several streams. In the northern part of the territory it is quite gravelly, while in other localities it is a loam with an intermixture of clay. The geological formation is Lauzon schist and Levis limestone. Galena iron pyrites and hematite are found, while in the northeastern part are valuable quarries of marble. Upon the farm of J. P. Ballard, on road 15, is a bed of hematite which was opened in 1865, when about 200 tons of ore were mined; but the company, for some reason, failed, and the ore was left upon the ground. In 1872 the property came into Ballard's hands, who recently leased the mine to Brown & George, who have begun active operations again, with prospects of success in the enterprise. The marble is of the clouded variety, and of good quality. That which was used in the construction of the old city hall, at New York, was taken from the farm now owned by Mary J. Reed. H. S. Fitch, on road 4, is operating quarries that were opened in 1845. There were formerly other quarries in operation, and in 1865 a company, known as the Berkshire Marble Co., erected mills for sawing the marble, near Mr. Fitch's quarry, but after a few years the company failed and the work was abandoned.

In 1880 Alford had a population of 348. In 1883 the town employed three male and three female teachers in her public schools. There were 60 pupils attending school, while the entire amount raised for school purposes during the year was $492.62.

ALFORD (p. o.), the metropolis of the township, is a hamlet located in the southeastern part of the town, on the Seekonk river.

C. F. Stoddard's grist and saw-mill, located on r 17, is operated by water-power and cuts 30,000 feet of lumber per year and does custom grinding.

It is not known precisely when the settlement of the town was begun, though it was not far from the year 1750. The early settlers mostly came from Connecticut, among whom were Dea. Eleazer Barrett, Ebenezer Barrett, Dea. Robert Johnson, John and Simeon Hurlbut, and the Sperry, Wilcox, Kelsey, Hamlin and Baker families. Later there came families by the name of Brunson, Fenton, Munger and Warner. In 1773 the population had increased to about what the town now has, and in 1791 it had 577 inhabitants, 229 more than it had in 1880. On February 16, 1773, the town was incorporated, and named, it is supposed, in honor of John Alford, founder of the Alford professorship in Harvard University. The first town-meeting was held on the 4th of the following March, when the following officers were elected: David Ingersoll, moderator; John Hurlbut, town clerk; Deodat Ingersoll, John Hurlbut, William Bronson, Daniel Kelsey and Eleazer Barrett, selectmen; William Bronson, treasurer; Stephen Kelsey and Sylvanus Wilcox, constables and collectors; John Morris, James McLellan and Daniel Griffin, church wardens; Daniel Griffin, Jabez Olmstead, Daniel Ticknor and Robert Johnson, highway surveyors; Reuben Kelsey, Daniel Griffin, William Bronson and James Baker, fence viewers; Ezra Creppen and Deodat Ingersoll, deer reeves; Nathaniel Daly, Jabez Olmstead and Joshua Hurlbut, hog reeves; and Noah Hopkins, sealer of leather and tythingman. It was also voted at this meeting "that William Bronson's house be the work-house."

The first mill erected in the town was a grist-mill, and stood where Stephen Smith's cider-mill now is, on Seekonk river. The following is a copy of the builder's agreement to perform the work:—

"This indenture witnesseth that Jonathan Hughs, Dan Burns, Joseph Jones and Ebenezer Barrett, all of Great Barrington, in the county of Berkshire and Province of Massachusetts Bay, yeomen, have jointly and severally agreed, and do by these presents jointly and severally agree, to and with one another on the following articles, and in manner and form following, viz: That the said Jonathan, Dan, Joseph and Ebenezer shall begin, build and finish one good and convenient saw-mill in said Great Barrington [now Alford], on Seekonk river, in lot twenty-third, west division, by the 20th day of May next ; and the said Jonathan, Dan, Joseph and Ebenezer do likewise agree as aforesaid that at the place aforesaid they begin, build and finish a good and convenient grist-mill by the 20th day of October next ; and in performing the several articles aforesaid, the said Jonathan, Dan, Joseph and Ebenezer are severally to do an equal part of the labor, to provide an equal proportion of iron and all other necessary materials to complete the same, according to the true intent and meaning of this agreement. Dated, 15th day of March, in the fourth year of the reign of George III. of Great Britain, etc., King, etc., Annoque Dom., 1769."

At the iron ore deposits in the western part of the town, there was erected at an early date a forge for smelting the ore. It was built by John Whitten, and stood upon the farm now owned by E. K. Williams, on road 17. For some reason the employees and neighbors became possessed with the idea that the community was invested with witches, and that one of them haunted Mr. Whitten, as revenge for his not loaning her a horse on a certain occasion, and that she would cause the dam that gave him his water-power to break as often as he should repair it. As the dam really did, for some reason, cause him a great deal of trouble, the story gained general credence, and the business was given up and the forge abandoned.

Near the forge was also erected a saw-mill, by a Mr. Spurr, one of the original proprietors of what was known as the "Spurr grant," which is supposed to have been the first saw-mill erected in the town. On this farm there now stands an old house which sheltered Commodore Perry and a portion of his men while on their way to Sacketts Harbor, it being then the property of a certain George Darby.

Upon the farm now owned by B. E. Stoddard, on road 15, occurred the birth of the first male child born in the town, Abel, son of Stephen Kelsey.

Located on road 1, the property of G. W. Stickles, is the oldest house in the township. It was built by Abithy Fowler, in 1765. The building is a large two-story structure, finished in a style not common to buildings of that day, the siding to the main or "upright" part being composed of boards thirty inches in width. Mr. Fowler came to Alford a poor man, but subsequently amassed considerable wealth, and this building was in its day considered a very imposing mansion.

Capt. Elisha Tobey, from Sharon, Conn., was an early settler. He purchased of John Bronson the farm now owned by his grandson, Elisha L. Tobey, and also much additional land, amounting in all to 500 acres, which he divided among his sons. Jonathan, one of his seven children married, for his first wife, a Miss Hatch, who bore him two children ; for his second wife, Polly Dyer, and for his third wife, Anna Hill, who bore him three children, Harriet, William, and Elisha L. The latter is the only one now living. He occupies the old homestead, as mentioned above, the third in line to inherit its acres.

Eleazer Barrett was born in England in 1704, and came to this country while still quite young, locating first in Salisbury, Conn., and subsequently, in 1760, came to Alford, locating on road 12. Eleazer, Jr., born in 1733, came here with his father, and subsequently married Sarah Church, who bore him eight children. She died in 1779, and in 1780 he married Orpha Bush, who died in 1823, aged ninety years. His son Daniel, born in 1778, married Cornelia Hollenbeck, who bore him ten children, six of whom are now living, viz.: Mary H., wife of James Baker, of Richmond; Timothy P. and Emma D., in Michigan; Howard L., in Kansas; Eleazer, in La Porte, Ind.; and Charlotte M., wife of Elisha L. Tobey, of this town.

Cornelius, son of Samuel Williams, was an early settler of Alford. He was born in 1750, and in 1772 he came to this town, from Hartford, Conn., and made the first settlement on the farm now owned by his son Elijah K., building, in 1784, the house that now stands thereon. He married, for his first wife, Anna Kelsey; for his second, Mrs. Thankful (Sackett) Nash, who bore him five sons; and for his third wife he married Sarah, daughter of Elijah Kellogg, a direct descendant of Lieut. Ephraim Kellogg, who was one of the early settlers of Hadley, Mass. The fruit of this latter union was six children, two of whom, Elijah K., of this town, aged eighty-two years, and Cornelius, of Egremont, aged seventy-nine years, are living. Elijah K. married Orret, daughter of David Wheeler, of Egremont, who bore him three children, of whom only one, Samuel C., survives, and with whom Elijah resides.

Josiah Curtis, from Sharon, Conn., came to Alford in 1806, and purchased of Pelex Dewey the farm now owned by his grandsons, Robert M. and George R. Curtis. Ashbel H., son of Josiah, who was twelve years of age when his parents came here, married Phoebe L., daughter of Robert Miller, of Franklin, Delaware county, N. Y., who bore him six children, three of whom, Robert M., George R. and Elisha, are living.

Elisha Stoddard came to Alford, from Woodbury, Conn., in 1803, and purchased the farm now owned by Dr. Richard Beebe. This family trace their ancestry back to 1060, in a cousin knight of William the Conqueror, and who went to England in the year mentioned, from Normandy, with William. The first of the family in this country was Anthony, who immigrated to Boston in 1639. Elisha married Mary Crane, November 22, 1791, and reared eight children, only two of whom, William and Augustus R., are living. William, born July 21, 1801, married Elizabeth Emigh and has reared five children. He has been representative in the State legislature two terms, 1842 and 1860.

Abner Kellogg was an early settler, locating upon the farm now owned by Elihu Church. His son kept one of the first stores in town, where E. M. Gates now resides. It is said that the two men hung at Lenox in 1787, for burglary committed in Lanesboro during the excitement attending Shays rebellion, also broke into Mr. Kellogg's cellar, but appropriated nothing but bread.

Stephen Barnum came to this town from Danbury, Conn., in 1796. He purchased of Sylvanus Wilcox the farm now owned by his grandson, E. R. Barnum, where he reared a family of nine children.

Jeremiah D. Hatch came to Alford from Kent, Conn., about 1800, and purchase the farm now owned by E. M. Gates.

Isaac Tuttle, from Woodbury, Conn., came to Alford in 1796, locating upon a part of the farm now owned by H. S. Jacobs. He married Olive Hann, who bore him five children, only two of whom, Michael H., of Alford, and Joanna M. Chittendon, of Lansing, N. Y., are living.

James Baker, an early settler, located upon the farm now owned by W. C. Hinman, about 1761. Upon this farm is an old burial ground, the grave stones of which bear record of as early a date as 1774.

Sanford Fitch, from Salisbury, Conn., came to Alford in 1797, purchased the farm now owned by Mrs. Mary J. Reed, and in 1799 moved his family here. His first wife, Abigail Landon, bore him three sons, only one of whom, Frederick, is living. For his second wife he married Abisher Lewis, of West Stockbridge, who bore him three children, Horace S., Nancy J. Milligan, and Sarah A. Fitch, all of whom are living.

William, Daniel and Benjamin Ticknor, from Sharon, Conn., came to Alford in 1764. William and Daniel located upon the farm now owned by Thomas Cruikshank. Daniel reared two sons, Daniel, Jr., and Elijah, and two daughters. Daniel, Jr., married Anna Chadwick, of Lyme, Conn., who bore him eight children, only one of whom, Ezra C., is living. Ezra C. has served three terms in the State legislature, and has been a justice of the peace over forty years. He resides at Alford Center with his only child, Henry, at the age of eighty-one years.

Hubbard Hurlbut, one of the early settlers, had a pottery in operation for a time where John H. Tuttle's dwelling now stands.

The first church in the town was probably not established until 1780. It was Congregational, and its pastor, who must have been settled about the time the church was organized, was Rev. Joseph Avery. The disturbances that occurred at the time of the Shay's Rebellion created trouble between the pastor and his people, and he was dismissed, it is supposed in 1787. His church languished for a time and then became extinct. Several other societies have been organized, but the only church building here now is what is known as the Union meeting-house. Rev. Jay Dana, residing on road 4, is pastor of the Congregational society.

BECKET lies in the eastern part of the county, in lat $42^{\circ}17'$ and long. $3^{\circ}52'$, bounded north by Washington, northeast by Hampshire county, east by Hampden county, south by Otis, and west by Tyringham, Lee and Washington, thus occupying about the district of territory that formed, under the name of "No. 4," one of the line of four townships established by the general court in 1735. These townships reached from the Connecticut to the Housatonic valley, and were conveyed to the government by the Stockbridge Indians. During this year "No. 4" was granted by the general court to Joseph Brigham and fifty-nine others, its charter limits originally enclosing thirty-six square miles, or a district six miles square; but owing to the waste land by ponds, it is said, these limits were somewhat enlarged, to eight miles by four miles and two hundred and ten rods. Various changes have since taken place, however, so that the outlines of the town are now very irregular, viz.: In 1783 that part of the town lying northeast of the west branch of Agawan or Westfield river was severed to go towards making up the territory of the present town of Middlefield, in Hampshire county; in 1798 a tract lying between this town and Blandford, and that part of Otis which was then called Loudon, was annexed to Becket on the south; and in 1810 another tract was annexed, from that part of Otis which was formerly called Bethlehem, so that the town now has an area of about 26,000 acres.

The surface of the town is hilly, broken and rocky, and diversified by numerous streams and ponds, or lakelets. While these features afford a picturesque landscape scene, they greatly retard cultivation of the soil and render much of the land unimprovable. The soil is usually hard and cold, containing very little clay or sand, though when well-cultivated it yields moderate crops of rye and corn, wheat being out of the question. The excellent pasturage lands the hills and vales afford, however, compensate in a great measure for the lack of grain-bearing soil. The natural growth of timber is that common to the vicinity, excepting, perhaps, walnut, chestnut and white-oak. Of the elevations, Benton hill, in the northern part of the town, is a commanding eminence; Becket Station, in the northern part, has an elevation of 2,194 feet above sea-level; while Wadsworth hill, in the central part, is the water-shed of the Westfield and Farmington rivers. The streams are numerous, but small and rapid, affording rather poor mill privileges. Among the several beautiful sheets of clear water are Center Lake, covering an area of 163 acres; Rudd pond, ninety-six acres; and Yokun pond, 118 acres. The climate is clear and bracing, and exceedingly cold in the winter, though quite healthful, withal, the longevity of the town's inhabitants being marked.

Geologically, rocks of several formations appear, though gneiss and granite prevail almost universally, excepting, perhaps, a few beds of limestone in the eastern and northern parts. A fine granite quarry was opened here in 1879, by Brown & Cheney, which is now known as the Snow-Flake Granite Quarry of Becket. It is now the property of Francis S. Gross, of Lee, who takes from it a granite of fine texture, susceptible of a high polish, and which has already found its way into many states of the Union.

In 1880 Becket had a population of 1,123. In 1883 the town employed, during the year, one male and ten female teachers, at an average salary of $29.00 per month for male and $20.00 for females. There were 117 school children in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $1,105.23.

NORTH BECKET (Becket p. o.), a handsome post villiage and station on the Boston & Albany railroad, has two churches (Cong. and Baptist), four stores, one hotel, four basket shops, a blacksmith shop, grist-mill, and about fifty dwellings.

BECKET CENTER postoffice is located in the central part of the town.

A few individuals came into the town with the intention of commencing a settlement as early as 1740, locating in the southeastern part, on Walker brook, where they erected a saw-mill, etc.; but they were soon obliged to relinquish their endeavors, through fear of hostile Indians, and it was not until fifteen years subsequent, in 1755, that the settlement was renewed. For a time Jonathan Walker and his wife were the only inhabitants, and during their first winter here, it is recorded, Mr. Walker cut his foot badly, so that he stood greatly in need of assistance. The nearest neighbors being in Blandford, a distance of several miles through an unbroken wilderness, Mrs. Walker was at a loss how to obtain the needed aid, as she did not deem it safe to leave the wounded man alone while she made the journey. As a forlorn hope, then, she resolved upon taking the bloody bandages from her husband's wounds, and tying them about the neck of their horse, start him off towards Blandford. This she did, with great success, for the animal arrived at Blandford with his message of blood, procuring the desired assistance. Through such and kindred perils and hardships did our forefathers pass, laying deep the foundations of our present comfort and prosperity.

One of the earliest tragic accidents in the history of the town was the accidental shooting of Micah Higley. He and James Rudd were hunting deer; during the progress of the hunt they became separated, and Mr. Rudd, supposing he saw a deer, hastily fired his weapon, killing his companion instantly. It is said that the accident so overwhelmed him with sorrow as to nearly lead to insanity. A parallel case is also noted by a grave stone now standing in the center of the town, bearing the following inscription:—

LUKE VIETS, WHO WAS SHOT, SUPPOSED FOR A DEER, AND DIED IN BECKET,
OCTOBER 21, 1757,
IN THE 15TH YEAR OF HIS AGE.

When the trying times of the Revolutionary period came upon the people, Becket evinced her patriotic spirit and remained true to her country, choosing and instructing her delegates to the provincial congress, and voting her quota of men and supplies. Some of the citizens it seems, however, needed a certain disciplining before they could be induced to strike off the shackles of Royalty. In 1777 the selectmen of the town called a meeting, whence they reported the names of certain individuals whom they charged with being

"dangerous to the public peace and safety." At a subsequent meeting, when seven men took the oath of allegiance, these persons presented a long and humble petition, acknowledging their error, asking forgiveness, and pledging themselves to do all in their power for the "American cause." During the late war, also, Becket showed her patriotism, sending out 110 men, nine of whom, it is recorded, lost their lives in the service.

The early settlers were mostly from Connecticut, and bore the names of Birchard, Goss, King, Kingsley, Messenger, Wadsworth, Wait and Walker. The first birth was that of Jabez Wadsworth, in December, 1755, who died here in April, 1826. On the 21st of June, 1765, ten years after the settlement was begun, the town was incorporated, and on the 15th of the following month it was duly organized, the first town-meeting being held on that day, when Nathaniel Kingsley was chosen moderator and clerk; Nathaniel Kingsley, James Birchard and Eldad Taylor, selectmen; James Birchard, treasurer; and Jonathan Walker, constable. Of these gentlemen, who formed the original executive in the municipal government, Mr. Birchard was the last survivor. He died July 27, 1828, having lived a useful life of ninety years.

James Harris, the subject of this sketch, was born in the State of Rhode Island, about 1760, and emigrated to this town immediately after the close of the Revolution. As was the condition of nearly all who participated in that extraordinary contest on the part of the colonists, he came out of it poor, and with a fortitude and perseverance rarely developed in men, accompanied with sterling judgment, succeeded in a few years in converting the forest into a fruitful field. Many years were allotted to him to enjoy the benefits derived in part from his services as a soldier, which embraced the whole period of the war, he having died about 1845. He was emphatically a man of daring, always ready and willing to embark in any enterprise connected with the interest and welfare of his country. Aside from his firmness and iron will, he exercised much of benevolence, although ill-timed and often misplaced. Truth with him was a word of potent meaning, and to its mild teachings he yielded implicit obedience. The following incident related by himself, and corroborated by history, fully illustrates the leading characteristic of the man. At an early period of the war the Continental forces suffered a severe loss in the capture by the British of Gen. Lee, and war councils were frequent to devise ways and means for his restoration to his companions in arms. It was clear that the rule of exchange could not be applied to accomplish the object; for at this time no general officer of the British army was in the possession of the Americans. Stratagem alone could accomplish the object. This was hazardous, especially when the duty required was that of a spy, and although officers in command may sanction experiments of the kind, rarely recommend and never order such undertakings. Gen. Green, who commanded in Rhode Island, feeling deeply the loss sustained by the American cause in the absence of Lee, suggested to Col. Barton, a brave and meritorious officer of his corps, the idea of making the British General Prescott a prisoner of war by stratagem, to which Barton readily acceded and tendered his services to head the expedition, on condition that he should be allowed the privilege of selecting the men to accompany him from the line of the army. This was as readily granted, and in a short time the arrangements were complete, and Barton, with seven men only, were ready for the march. Night came with its gloom and darkness, through which this little valient band could clearly fancy the rays of hope portentiously lighted up. A boat is at hand, and with muffled oars, they leave their friends for the Island, and presently find themselves between two British frigates lying near at anchor, and comprising a part of the fleet under the command of Sir William Howe. Although the hailing words were distinctly heard from ship to ship, yet in silence did the boat pass along unobserved to the point of its destination. They land, and expeditiously make their way to the quarters of Prescott. A solitary sentinel is discovered, and from a consciousness of the security of the place is entrapped, then gagged, and conducted to the General's quarters by his stealthy enemy. The stone house is assaulted, and Barton with his brave followers enter and find missing the object of the search, and in the stead thereof the lady of the General and her maid in waiting. "Where is Gen. Prescott?" shouted Col. Barton, and with the greatest self-possession the lady responded, "Gone to the camp, Sir." Then boys, fire the house, was instantly thundered forth by the chivalric Barton, at which order Gen. Prescott came forth from his hiding place in an adjoining closet, and surrendered himself a prisoner of war. The party now hastened back to their boat, having thus far succeeded in the object of their mission, leaving Lady Prescott at her leisure to communicate the intelligence of the seizure of her husband to the British camp, which at the time was but one-half mile distant, and contained more than four thousand men. Having reached the boat in safety, but one further obstacle appeared formadable, and that was to re-pass the frigates, which was done ere the alarm guns had broken the stillness of the night, and the captors and the captured had gained a firm and safe footing on the main shore of Rhode Island. Harris being the last to leave the stone house after the lights were extinguished, sought for some trifling memento of that night's transaction, and sweeping his hand across a table secured what he supposed to be a pewter mug, but on examination the next morning, found it to be the silver pitcher of Gen. Prescott, which he retained in his possession till near the close of life, when he presented it to his son, Judge Harris, of Amherst, Ohio. His granddaughter, Mrs. Nathaniel W. Harris, resides on Main street.

Abel Cheeseman came to Becket from Connecticut about 1770, and settled near the center of the town. He was drafted as a three month's minute man, and was at the battle of Bunker Hill. Having served his time he enlisted again, was in the battle of Stillwater, and was present at the surrender of Burgoyne. He died here in 1825. Two of his six children are now living. A grandson, Sidney H., resides in Becket.

Oliver, Nathan, Asa and Amaziah Snow, four brothers, with their cousin, Sylvanus, came to Becket, from Ashford, Conn., about 1770. Nathan is now represented by a daughter, Mrs. Letitia Davis, and her daughter, Mrs. Orlando S. Higley. Asa is represented by his grandchildren, Mrs. S. C. Snow, Miss H. C. Snow and William H. Snow. Sylvanus is represented by his great-grandchildren, Frederick and Clara, and his great-great-granddaughter, Miss Blanche Perkins.

Timothy Snow came to Becket some time previous to 1770, locating on the place where his grandson, Frederick, now resides. Timothy married Joanna Kingsley and reared a large family.

Joseph Higley came to Becket from Simsbury, Conn., about 1776. He had a family of four children, none of whom are living. A grandson, Orlando S., and a great-grandson, William E., now reside in Becket.

Abner and David Ames, brothers, came to Becket from Voluntown, Conn., in 1777, each locating on road 14. Abner has a grandson, Joel, and a great-granddaughter, Mrs. Isabel D. Taylor, now living in Becket, on road 25.

John Messenger came to Becket from Norwich, Conn., about 1780, locating in the northern part of the town. He married five times, reared fifteen children, and his death, at the age of ninety, was caused by a fall from an apple tree, which he was trimming. He was an old Revolutionary soldier. A son, William E., resides on High street.

Moses Barnes came from Brookfield about 1794, and bought a piece of land on the line between Becket and Middlefield, building on the Middlefield portion; but being burned out in 1800, he built on the Becket part of the farm. He had ten children, of whom three sons, Silas, Wright and Almon, reside in town. A grandson, Sidney, is depot-master in Becket.

Samuel Dearing came from Belchertown, Mass., in 1800, locating in the southwest part of the town. He reared four children. The only descendants now in town are Mrs. J. A. Hunt and children, who reside on the old homestead.

Ebenezer Huntington, from Lebanon, Conn., came to Becket about 1800. He was a clothier and located in the southeastern part of the town. He had a family of eleven children, of whom William S., the present town clerk, is the only resident of the place.

Joseph Mecum was a resident of Becket from about the beginning of this century until his death, in October, 1883, at the age of eighty-six years. His son, Joseph L., resides on road 3.

Gains Carter came from Wolcott, Conn., in 1803. He reared four children, only two of whom are now living, Stephen W. and Mary, on the homestead. Stephen W. has been selectman for thirty-seven years, represented the town in the State legislature in 1848, and the same year was a delegate to choose presidential electors.

Richard Church came to Becket, from Chester in 1815, locating in the northwestern part of the town. Of fourteen children only three are now living, of whom Richard, resides on road 5.

J. W. Wheeler, a tanner, came from Sterling, Worcester county, in 1847, and in company with ex-Governor Claflin, bought out Mr. Barnard's tannery, building, a few years later, two other large tanneries. In 1865 Mr. Wheeler sold his interest and bought about 20,000 acres of timber land in New York. He has one son, a clerk in Boston.

Michael McNerney emigrated from Ireland to America in 1849, settling, soon after, on a small farm in the southern part of Becket. He has now about 300 acres of land. Mr. McNerney had a son John, killed in the battle of the Wilderness. He was a member of the 37th Regt., Mass. Vols.

Elias Ballou, grandson of Elias Ballou, who came from Rhode Island to Peru in 1782, in company with Sanford White, ran a grist-mill in Becket for several years, but has retired from active business, and his son, Monroe E., now owns the mill.

James N. Cross is of Scotch descent, his grandfather having come to America in Burgoyne's army, when but a lad of about eighteen. Amos G., great-grandson of David, is proprietor of the Claflin House.

Joshua Shaw removed from Palmer about 1788, coming to Otis by the aid of marked trees, and built a log house in the northern part of that town. Only two of his eight children are now living—Joshua Shaw, Jr., who resides on the old homestead, and Mrs. Sarah Hokum, of Portland, Me. Joshua Shaw Jr., has a son, George H., a farmer in Great Barrington, and a daughter, Julia E., living at the homestead in Becket.

First Congregational church of Becket, located at Becket Center, was organized by Rev. Messrs. Smith and Martin, with five members, December 28, 1758, and Rev. Ebenezer Martin was ordained as its first pastor, February 23, 1759, remaining with the society until October 12, 1764. Their first house of worship was erected in 1762, and did service until 1800, when a new building was erected, being dedicated on the 19th of November of that year. This building was superseded by the present structure in 1849, being dedicated June 19, 1850. Its original cost was about $3,000.00, though it is now valued at only about $1,000.00, and is capable of comfortably accomodating 250 persons. The society now has thirty-four members, with no regular pastor.

The Second Congregational church, located at North Becket, was organized by Edward C. Snow and others, to the number of fifty-five, who were dismissed from the First church for this purpose, September 25, 1849. They immediately erected a church building, which was dedicated November 21, 1850. It will seat 200 persons, and is valued at $3,000.00. The society now has sixty members, with no regular pastor.

CHESHIRE lies in the northern-central part of the county, in lat. 42° 33' and long. 3° 51', bounded north by Adams and New Ashford, east by Savoy, Windsor and Dalton, south by Windsor, Dalton and Lanesboro and west by Lanesboro and New Ashford. It has an area of about 18,000 acres, enclosed within an outline more irregular than that of any other town in the county, its boundary line having twenty-five angles—obtuse right, and acute, all degrees. It is said that in laying out the town, the western line was drawn with reference to the religious views of the settlers, taking the farms of the Baptist families into Cheshire, and leaving the Presbyterians in Lanesboro, thus giving that boundary much the appearance of a rail fence. The town was incorporated March 14, 1793, being made up from several minor tracts, as follows: What is now the northeastern part of the town was a tract called New Providence, about 1,400 rods in length from east to west, and 600 in width from north to south, which was originally a grant to Colonel Joab Stafford, Joseph Bennett, and Governor Cook, of Rhode Island, and was named in honor of Providence. With this grant was taken a tract of about 600 by 600 rods from Windsor, a tract 1,400 rods in length and averaging 800 in width from Lanesboro, and a tract about 400 by 400 rods from New Ashford, forming them all into a new township by the name of Cheshire. February 26, 1794, however, a small part of the territory taken from Windsor was re-annexed to that town, and February 6, 1798, another small tract was taken from New Ashford.

The surface of the town is sufficiently diversified by hill and mountain to form a pleasing landscape, yet it is not so broken but that it is, in general, good farming and grazing land. Hoosac river flows a northerly course through a rich and fertile valley in the central part of the town. On either side of this valley rise gentle hill slopes and mountain crests, affording many excellent dairy farms, for which the town has many years been justly celebrated. Rounds Rocks, one of these heights, was chosen as a station during the trigonometrical survey of the State a few years since. Among the Hoosac's affluents, which come dancing down from the higher lands, are Dry brook, South brook and West brook, affording some excellent mill-sites, and also bringing constant enrichments to the arable soil of the valley. Through this valley, also passes the Pittsfield & Adams railroad.

The geological formation is made up of limestone, quartz and gneiss rocks. In the eastern part are found bods of serpentine, and iron ore in the central part. The iron manufacture will be spoken of later, and the celebrated quartz glass sand produced has already been mentioned, on page 30.

In 1880 Cheshire had a population of 1,537. In 1883 the town employed two male and nine female teachers, to whom was paid an aggregate monthly salary of $47.28 to males and $23.75 to females. There were 229 school children in the town, while the entire amount raised during the year for school purposes was $2,800.00.

In 1881 it was taken by the present proprietor, John S. Adams, who employs about forty-two hands. “In 1813, Cheshire was, from its firm adherence to Madison's administration, made a rendezvous for British prisoners. In 1793, John Hancock had ninety-nine votes for governor, and all others but three. From that day to 1843, a period of fifty years, the people were nearly unanimous in their support of Democratic principles, in the popular understanding of that term. Jefferson was a great favorite with the people of Cheshire, and to show their regard to him, and their approval of his policy, they made for him a mammoth cheese, which was sent to Washington, and there, January 1, 1802, presented to him, by Rev. John Leland, as a New Year's gift. The mode of its manufacture was the following: On a given day, the dairy women of the town sent their curds to one place; but the quantity thus collected was too great to be pressed at once, even in a cider mill, so that three additional cheeses were made, weighing seventy pounds each. The big cheese weighed 1,450 pounds."

They served through the war and were honorably discharged at the same time. His commissions on parchment, signed by Jefferson and Madison, are now in the possession of E. D. Foster, his oldest son, who resides in Cheshire. His youngest son, the late Daniel B. Foster, was first lieutenant in company C, 49th regiment Massachusetts Volunteers, and served in the war of the rebellion.

Rev. John Leland, for many years pastor of the Baptist church, was a man of mark in his time. He took an active interest in all the public affairs of the town. He was a member of the legislature in 1811, and labored powerfully against the provisions of the 3d article of the Bill of Rights, contending that legislatures had no power to bind the consciences of men. He was a ready orator, as well as writer, and composed his own epitaph, as follows:—

HERE LIES THE BODY
JOHN LELAND,
WHO LABORED 68 YEARS TO PROMOTE PIETY, AND VINDICATE THE CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS RIGHTS OF ALL MEN.

The Baptist church of Cheshire was organized by Rufus Mason and others, May 30, 1769, having about seventy members. The first pastor, Rev. Peter Werden, held the office from 1770 until his death, February 21, 1808. Their first church building was erected in 1794, and did service until 1849, when the present building was erected. It will seat 300 persons and is valued, including grounds, at $8,000.00, its original cost being $5,000.00.

The Methodist Episcopal church of Cheshire was organized by Rev. John Cadwell, with twelve members, in February, 1844, Rev. John F. Crowl being installed as the first pastor. Their church building, which will comfortably accommodate 200 persons, was erected in 1848-49. It is valued, including grounds, at $3,000.00. The society now has fifty-five members, with Rev. —Hobbs, pastor.

CLARKSBURG lies in the extreme northern part of the county, in lat. $42^{\circ} 48'$ and long. $3^{\circ} 53'$, bounded north by Bennington county, Vermont, east by Florida, south by North Adams and west by Williamstown. It was formed from an unincorporated gore of land lying north of North Adams, which formed parts of Bernardston's grant and Bullock's grant. Rev. John W. Yeomans, in the History of Berkshire, speaks of the formation of the town as follows:—

acres, to extend it around Bernardston's grant. He intended to reach to the line of Vermont; but not knowing precisely where it was, and careful not to loose any part of his grant by going unto that State, he stopped a mile short of the line, and proceeded westward four or five miles along the north line of Bernardston's grant and Adams [now North Adams]. The part of Bullock's grant which lies north of this grant and town, and west of Monroe [the portion 'west of Monroe' now forms a part of Florida] together with the gore which separates it from Williamstown and Vermont, now constitutes Clarksburg."

The town was incorporated March 2, 1798, receiving its name in honor of the numerous family of Clarks then residing in the town, though it was the intention of the petitioners for the act of incorporation to have it named Hudson, after a man of that name who, it is said, felled the first tree in the town, and in honor of whom Hudson's brook derives its name. The name Hudson was inserted in the petition, and, it is said, the petitioners never knew by what authority or by whom it was altered in the petition. The act of incorporation describes the boundaries of the town as follows:—

"Beginning at the northeast corner of Williamstown, and thence running east on the line between this commonwealth and the State of Vermont, seven miles; thence south to the line of Bernardston's grant about two and one-half miles; thence west on said line to the east line of Adams; thence north on said line to the northeast corner of Adams; thence on the north line of Adams to the east line of Williamstown; thence north on said line to the first mentioned boundary."

According to these bounds the town area was 10,400 acres, which amount was somewhat diminished May 2d, 1848, when it was shorn of a portion of the eastern part of its territory, which was annexed to Florida.

The surface of the territory is uneven and mountainous, Hoosac mountain lying on its eastern border and Bald mountain on its western. The latter elevation, sometimes also called Clarksburg mountain, attains an altitude of 2,272 feet, affording an excellent view of Greylock and other mountains, and of the surrounding country. It was also an important station in the trigonometrical survey of the State. The principal streams are the west branch of Hoosac river, Hudson's brook, Beaver creek, and Hunterfield and Wheeler brooks, all of which, except Beaver creek, flow a southerly course. Several good mill-sites are afforded by the streams. The soil is generally hard and stony, as a large amount of the territory lies upon the mountains we have mentioned, though it sustains some valuable oak, chestnut, spruce and hemlock timber. Between the mountains the soil is more arable, affording some excellent grazing land, and also a fair amount that produces wheat, rye, oats and potatoes to advantage.

The rocks that enter into its geological structure are granite, mica-slate, quartz and limestone. Iron ore is said to exist in the southeastern part of the town.

In 1880 Clarksburg had a population of 724. In 1883 the town employed one male and six female teachers in its public schools, to whom was paid an average salary of $28.00 to the male and $25.67 per month to the females. There were 148 school children in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $742.59.

BRIGGSVILLE, a post village located in the southern part of the town, has one store, a woolen-mill and about twelve dwellings.

Briggs Bro.'s woolen mill, located at Briggsville, was built in 1866. It has thirty broad and six quarter looms, and manufactures about 350,000 yards of fancy cassimeres per year, giving employment to 135 hands.

Joel C. Hoskins's steam saw-mill, located on Hudson's brook, on road 1, is supplied with circular and band saws and shingle machine. Mr. Hoskins manufactures about 500,000 feet of lumber and 500,000 shingles per annum, and also deals largely in railroad ties and telegraph poles.

The Berkshire File Works, located on road 8, owned by H. F. Hurd, were originally established at North Adams, in 1872, by R. R. Andrews. Mr. Hurd employs five men in the manufacture of files, superintending the business himself.

C. W. Gallup's saw and grist-mill, located on road 6, grinds about 6,000 bushels of grain and cuts 250,000 feet of lumber per annum.

R. G. Hall's turning works, located on road 12, were established by him in 1861, where he has since been engaged in the manufacture of wagon spokes and wagon stock.

The settlement of the town was commenced in 1769, by Capt. Matthew Ketchum, his son Matthew, and his cousins Epenetus, Daniel and Samuel, all from Long Island. Four brothers came to this locality, from Rhode Island, previous to 1773, and the town derived its name from them. Eventually one left and went to Rochester N. Y., two returned to Rhode Island, and one, Nicholas, remained in Clarksburg till his death in 1803. He raised a large family of children, one of whom, Samuel, was born here in 1773, and lived here till a few months before his death, which occurred at North Adams in 1830. He had eight children, who all lived to maturity, and two still remain; a son, Reuben, lives in Lanesboro, on road 7, and a daughter, Mrs. Emily Cook, in Halifax, Vt. Laban, son of Joseph, and grandson of Nicholas, is a resident of this town.

Daniel Aldrich was also an early settler, and died here at the age of eighty-three years, having during his life here built a saw and grist-mill on road 4, and also established a glass factory. Asahel Aldrich, residing on road 4, is a son of Daniel.

George F. Kilburn came from Stamford, Vt., in 1866, locating where he now resides, on road 1. He has held the office of collector one year and of selectman two years.

DALTON lies just north of the central part the county, in lat. $42^{\circ} 28'$ and long. $3^{\circ} 52'$, bounded north by Cheshire, east by Windsor and Hinsdale, south by Hinsdale and Washington, and west by Cheshire, Lanesboro and Pittsfield. It was originally known as "Ashuelot Equivalent," for the reason that it was granted to Oliver Partridge and others, of Hatfield as an equivalent for a township granted them on the Ashuelot river, which now forms a part of the township of Winchester, N. H., and which was subsequently found to belong to New Hampshire. In 1784, March 20th, the township was incorporated, under the name it now bears, given in honor of Hon. Tristram Dalton, then speaker of the House of Representatives. In 1795 about 5,000 acres from Windsor were added to the territory of the town, while in 1804 the area was diminished by a tract 2,500 acres in extent which was annexed to Hinsdale. This left Dalton's territory nine miles in length from northeast to southwest, with an average width of less than two and one half miles, covering an area of about 13,000.

The surface of the town is in general rough and broken, especially so in the northern and southern parts. Through its central part, from northeast to southwest extends a beautiful valley, through which flows a branch of the Housatonic. This stream, while lending a charm to its surrounding scenic beauties, also affords many excellent mill privileges. This fact was not lost sight of by Zenas Crane when he came among the Berkshire hills, in 1799, prospecting for an eligible site for the establishment of the first paper-mill in western Massachusetts, and which, together with the springs of exceptionally pure water he found in the evironing hills, led him to locate that site in Dalton. Since then this narrow valley has gained a world wide celebrity for the fine paper it produces. The finest point of view, though there are many, is that afforded from the summit of Day mountain, an eminence having an altitude of about 700 feet above the surrounding country, and lying about a mile south of Dalton village. "On the south, at the foot the hill, runs the old road from Pittsfield to Hinsdale, over which Burgoyne's army was marched prisoners on their way to Boston. To the north in the distance lies Greylock, towering like a monarch above his fellows, with hills rolling below like vast ocean billows. At one's feet the quiet little village—too busy in its thriving, ever grinding paper-mills, and whirring and combing cotton and woolen mills, to make much stir of business outside the factory walls—nestles its hamlet along the well used waters of the Housatonic, every drop of which must help to whirl its turbines as often as the surveyor's level indicates a suitable fall. On the northeast, the bare walls of Windsor, with beyond a glimpse of Hampshire's summits; next comes the church of Peru hill, from whose divided ridge waters flow into the Connecticut on one side and the Housatonic on the other. At one's feet on the east, Hinsdale, with its factories; next beyond, Washington. On the west is the beautiful valley, broad enough and especially adapted by Nature for her Queen, with room for 50,000 people, each home surrounded by a park. In it lies Pittsfield, the city of parks, shown in all its glory, with its necklace of diamond lakelets, and the whole in an emerald setting of mountains."

There is much good farming land in the town, and many highly cultivated farms, though the township ranks as a manufacturing rather than a farming community. Its principal rocks are gneiss and limestone.

In 1880 Dalton had a population of 2,052. In 1882 it employed fifteen female teachers in its public schools, at an average salary of $31.83 per month. There were 396 school children in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $4,000 00.

DALTON is a handsome post village located in the central part of the town, on the Housatonic river, and is also a station on the Boston & Albany railroad. It has three churches, (Congregational, Methodist Episcopal and Roman Catholic), a town-house, two hotels, three dry goods stores, two drug stores, millinery store, printing office, flour and feed stores, four paper-mills, two woolen mills, box factory, blacksmith shop, harness shop, two libraries and two public schools. As the village extends nearly or quite to the Pittsfield line, its central and western parts are each locally known by separate names, taken from the extensive manufactories situated in each locality, viz.: Carsonville, to the locality about the Carson & Brown mills, and Cranesville to the neighborhood environing the Crane mills.

HENRY WISWALL, ZENAS CRANE,
JOHN WILLARD.

Worcester, Feb. 8, 1801.

The above advertisement, appearing in the Pittsfield Sun, was the first public intimation of the contemplated establishment of paper manufacturing in Berkshire county, and was the result of a journey made by Zenas Crane in 1799, who had come from the employment of General Burbank, at Wor-chester, in search of a location to build. The mill was put into operation in the spring of 1801, and produced for the first few years about twenty tons of paper per annum, or just about the quantity that is made weekly by the Crane mills at Dalton at the present time. This increase is commendable both to the pioneer, Zenas Crane, and to his descendants, to the good judgment exercised in selecting a locality so well adapted to the business, and also to the enterprise and skill that has steadily enlarged and improved the business, bringing it up to its present high position.

In 1845 the pioneer, Zenas Crane, died, having three years before, in 1842, transferred his property and business to his two sons, Zenas Marshall and James B., who now carry on an extensive business in new mills, as Crane & Co., associated with them, as the managing member of the firm, being W. Murray Crane, son of Z. Marshall Crane. In their mills, known as the "Pioneer" mill and the "Government" mill, are made the bank-note paper used by the national banks and the paper used by the United States government for legal tenders and bonds, also paper for the currency and bonds of other governments. They also make, in great excellence, Parchment, Drawing and Tracing papers, Parchment deed, antique letter, artificial parchment, "onion skin," "bullet patch," map, and other papers. These are the highest priced papers made in this country, and, as can be inferred from the purposes for which they are used, must possess great strength and wearing qualities. It is said that a sheet of their paper placed in a modern testing machine will show a greater strength than any other fine paper made.

In 1865, Zenas Crane, Jr., son of Z. Marshall Crane, and grandson of the pioneer, rented and afterwards bought the stone mill, situated about one-eighth of a mile below the Pioneer mill, and formerly known as the Ashuelot Woolen Mill. It had been converted into a paper-mill a few years prior to this, and run by Crane & Wilson, but at this time was idle. Zenas Crane, Jr., ran this mill from 1865 till 1877, when it was destroyed by fire, and was rebuilt at once on a much larger scale by himself and his brother, W. Murray Crane. It is now one of the best equipped mills in this country, and, as our accompanying engraving shows, is also a handsome structure. The mill is devoted to the manufacture of ladies' fine stationery, and was the only mill in this country to branch out into this line. The beautiful envelopes and note paper made here in a great variety of tints and sizes have become famous all over the United States.

The new tints, of which there are now many, began to make their appearance in Lyons silks, and were soon applied to stationery by foreign paper-makers. When Mr. Zenas Crane, Jr., was in Europe, he visited some of the finest paper-mills and got some acquaintance with the stationery trade. He saw that there was to be a great future for these tinted goods among the purchasers of the best stationery in this country, and he at once began the manufacture of them in their mill, and the result is a product here that challenges a comparison with any goods in this line that the world can produce. The tints are wonders of delicacy, clearness and subdued tone. A few years ago our fashionable people would use no stationery but imported goods. The American styles and makes did not come up to what they required. Messrs. Z. Crane, Jr., & Brother, set to work to prove that as good or better goods could be made in this country as abroad. How well they have succeeded is shown from the fact that the foreign goods are now scarcely quoted in the market, while "Crane's goods" are staple stock with every dealer of any pretensions. This firm has done much during the past two or three years to produce a taste for dead-finish papers, and to-day their brands of "Grecian Antique," "Parchment Vellum," and "Distaff" are as popular as their finest "satin finish" goods. The names to each of their brands are copyrighted, and also their boxes, each of which bears their well known trademark of the "Fireside Crane."

Z. Crane, Jr., & Brother have, within two years, established a library for the use of their employés, and the neighborhood. A handsome building, somewhat in the old English style of architecture, was built near the mill and surrounded by lawns and shade trees on each side. The library contains about 500 volumes, to which are to be added each year fifty or more volumes. The reading-room has all the magazines, illustrated papers and leading newspapers of this part of the country and the county newspapers.

The senior member of this firm, Hon. Zenas Crane, Jr., is a member of Gov. Robinson's Executive Council, having been elected to it last fall by the counties of Berkshire, Hampshire and Hampden. His father occupied the same position with Gov. Andrew, and his grandfather with Gov. Edward Everett. A prominent Trade Paper says: "The Crane family is a family of paper manufacturers and has been engaged in the industry from its early establishment in this country. The family living to-day occupies a prominent place in the manufacture of the best papers of the world and bear the same relation to the paper manufacture of the United States that the Montgolfiers do to that of France."

The Carson & Brown Co.—The "Old Berkshire Mill" owned by this company occupies the site where the old pioneer firm built their first mill, and where they made about twenty tons of paper per annum until 1807. Wiswall & Carson succeeded them, continuing until 1810. Since that year the mill has been rebuilt several times, burned once but soon lifted from its ashes, and has been principally managed and owned by the Carson family, except for a short time when the Powers Paper Co., afterwards the Powers & Brown Paper Co., (L. J. Powers, of Springfield, and Charles O. Brown, of Dalton,) owned it. It has grown from a one-vat hand mill located in the woods, to a grand structure containing seven engines, making two tons of first-class paper per day. David Carson, who came to Dalton about the year 1800, was one of the original hand paper makers, and his sons, Thomas G., William W. and David J., were brought up to the business, and were considered among the best of their trade in the country. The father, after retiring, removed to Pittsfield, where he died in 1858, aged seventy-five years, being at the time of his death president of the Pittsfield Bank. Charles O. Brown is now president of the company, and John D. Carson, treasurer.

The Byron Weston Paper Mills.—The old Defiance Mill was built by David Carson in 1821, and sold by him to Henry Chamberlin in 1840, by whom it was operated, or rented to others, until 1863, having in the meantime, however, been burned out and immediately reconstructed. In 1863 it was bought by Hon. Byron Weston, who has greatly enlarged it, and is now turning out his celebrated record and ledger papers. This mill was originally a one-vat, one engine mill, making "twenty posts" of 126 sheets, or about five reams of paper a day, while its capacity is now over two tons. Most of the younger Chamberlins, John, Albert and Ezekiel, learned the paper business in this mill, and it has often been said that the spring water was so good that the mill made good paper regardless of the management. In 1855 Capt. A. S. Chamberlin built a paper-mill on the privilege in the center of Dalton village, and known as the oldest mill power in town, formerly occupied by the "water-mill," so called because the grist-mill upon it was run by water-power under the toll system. This mill was owned and operated by Chamberlin & Mitchell and James Wilson until 1867, when it was purchased by the late Gen. W. F. Bartlett and Capt. Edwin Moodie, commander of a Cunard steamer. Col. Walter Cutting subsequently bought Captain Moodie's interest, and the mill was run by Bartlett & Cutting until 1875, when it was destroyed by fire. The ruins were purchased by Byron Weston, who has built on its site a seven engine mill, which is running as a rag department for his seven engine Defiance Mill near by. He thus has fourteen engines, employs 200 hands, and turns out about four tons of paper per day. His paper is used for county and state records, and for all purposes where great strength and ability for standing age are required. Mr. Weston has also succeeded in sinking here one of the most celebrated artesian wells in New England. About January 20, 1884, while boring at the depth of 200 feet, he obtained a flowing well of 400 gallons per minute of pure, soft water. Previous to this, while boring at the depth of 500 feet, he obtained a flowing well of 150 gallons per minute.

West & Glennon's woolen mill.—In 1865 W. J. Hawkins, of Pittsfield, and Charles E. West and Christopher Glennon, under the firm name of Hawkins, West & Glennon, having concentrated two privileges on the old Weston place, erected a three story wooden building, 100 x 50 feet, with attendant dye-houses, and commenced the manufacture of the Windsor Falls repellants and fancy cassimeres, and prosperously operated the factory until August 25, 1873, when it, the adjoining building and two dwellings were entirely destroyed by fire. Thirty days after the fire their new factory was in process of erection and was completed in less than six months, a brick structure 130 x 50 feet and three stories high. On the death of Mr. Hawkins, in July, 1878, the remaining partners continued the business. The firm has undergone some changes during 1884, and is now known as the Windsor Falls Company. The mill is supplied with six cards and forty-six broad looms, and have turned out about 500,000 yards per annum.

C. J. Kittredge & Co.'s woolen mills were built in 1867. The company are engaged in manufacturing cassimeres and all-wool doeskins, turning out about 150,000 yards per year. Both steam and water are used as motive power.

The Renfrew cotton yarn manufactory, of Dalton, was originally built by S. G. Birmingham, for a woolen-mill, about 1864. Four or five years later it was destroyed by fire, and rebuilt by the insurance company who carried its risk, and about 1870 it was sold to the Renfrew Manufacturing Co., of Adams, who run it in the manufacture of cotton yarn.

David C. Smith's grist and saw-mill, located on road 25, was built by him in 1849. He grinds about 125 car-loads of grain annually.

Smith Bros'. saw-mill, located in the northern part of the town, on road 5 was built in 1860, upon the site of a mill built by Abner and David C. Smith in 1846, and which was destroyed by fire in 1860. The mill cuts about 200,000 feet of lumber per annum.

William C. Burr's saw-mill, located in the northern part of the town, was originally established about 1843, by Samuel I. Parker. It cuts about 100,000 feet of lumber per annum.

The settlement of the town was commenced by Dr. Perez Marsh, Daniel Frost and Nathaniel Kellogg, in 1755. Soon afterwards, Joseph Chamberlin moved into the southern part of the town, locating near the Pittsfield line. About 1770, William Cady, Josiah Lawrence and Abijah Parks moved into the eastern part of the town, and Mr. Lawrence subsequently built the first grist-mill. The town was incorporated March 20, 1784, and from that time immigration was more rapid, so that in 1791, when the first census was taken, there were 554 inhabitants.

The first town meeting was held on the 19th of April, 1784, nineteen days after the town was incorporated, when William Williams, Eliphalet Chamberlin, Ephraim Cleveland, Solomon Storey and Nathan Webb were elected selectmen; William Williams, town clerk and treasurer; and Eliphalet Chamberlin, Josiah Lawrence and William Williams, assessors. Among the votes also, passed at this meeting were the following:—

“Voted, That the swine may run at large in this town the present year, they being yoked and ringed according to law.”

“Voted, That Deacon Williams have leave to inoculate his family for the small-pox on lot No. 46 in this town.”

The original town-house was built about 1840. In 1870 the present commodious building, was erected upon the site occupied by the old building, costing 3,000.00.

Dr. Perez Marsh was the son of Capt. Joel Marsh, and was born at Hadley, October 25, 1729, and graduated from Harvard in 1784. He was a physician and surgeon's mate in the Regiment of Col. Ephraim Williams the younger, when he was killed at Lake George, in 1755. Immediately after, he came to Ashuelot Equivalent. He was appointed justice of the peace, June 24, 1761, a special justice of the court of common pleas, June 6, 1765, and a standing justice of said court, to succeed Gen. Dwight, September 6, 1768. He was a man of intelligence and character, though these appointments were probably due quite as much to the fact that he was a grandson of Samuel Porter and son-in-law of Israel Williams. He died at Dalton, May 20, 1784, leaving two sons and several daughters. The daughters married in Pittsfield and some of their descendants now reside there. The late Henry Marsh, Esq., of Dalton, was his grandson. The epitaph upon the slab that marks his grave, reads as follows:—

William Cleveland immigrated to Dalton at an early day, from Massachusetts Bay, making his way a part of the distance by the aid of marked trees. He located on road 5, where Alvah K. Cleveland now resides, being the first to settle upon that farm. A sample of the pioneer life he led is shown in the fact that his wife spun and wove the flax which William had raised on his farm, after which he carried it on his back to Kinderhook, N. Y., a distance of fifty miles, and exchanged it for their first cow. He married Mrs. Sarah Tozer, rearing eight children. He was a Revolutionary soldier. Alvah, son of William, who succeeded him upon the farm, married Hannah Kittredge, of Dalton, who bore him five children, one son, William K., marrying Elizabeth W. Mitchell, of Windsor, by whom he had three children, William D., Nellie M., and Alvah K. William D. resides in Wyoming Territory; Alvah married Amy E. Neate, of Pittsfield, and has two children, residing upon the homestead settled by his great-grandfather, where Nettie also resides. The old homestead dwelling was used for a hotel by Alvah Cleveland for many years.

Thomas and Josiah Lawrence, brothers, were among the first settlers in Dalton, coming from Plainfield, Conn., about 1778. Thomas, who was born in 1748, was the first to locate on the farm now occupied by T. A. and C. B. Lawrence, on road 20, and died in Dalton, July 26, 1825, at the age of seventy-seven. His youngest son, Daniel, married Nancy Burchard, of this town, and reared thirteen children, of whom three, Thomas A., who married Sarah Otis, of this town, and reared three children, Clara A., Sarah B., and Mary E.; Martha now Mrs. Hyde, of Waterbury, Conn.; and Charles B., who married Lydia A. Johnson, survive, Charles and Thomas residing upon the old homestead.

Amos Smith immigrated to this town from Connecticut, at an early date, and located on road 5, where the widow of Sullivan Smith now resides. His son, Abner, was born in 1781, married Mary Driscoll, and reared seven children, of whom five, David C., Dr. Abner M., of Pittsfield, Eliza, Amos, and James D. survive. Amos, residing on road 5 in Dalton, married Julia R. Flint, of this town, who bore him two children, Edith and Belle L. David C. married Permelia Comstock, of Stockbridge, Mass., by whom he had four children, among whom are Ensign M., who married Lucy A. Branch, and has two children, and now resides in Texarkana, Ark.; David, of Pittsfield, who married Milla E. Hale, of this town, and has one child, Anna P.; and Robert A., who married Lucia M. Owen, of Lee, Mass., and has two children, and resides on North street. James D., brother of David C., married Rachel E. Gleason, of this town, rearing two children, and resides on North street.

Zenas Crane, the pioneer in the paper industry of Western Massachusetts, was born in Canton, Mass., May 9, 1777. In the spring of 1801 he came to Dalton and built the original paper mill, where Carson & Brown now are. He had previously visited the locality, in 1799, and traveled over the mountains and streams on horseback, in search of a suitable mill-site, and what is of more importance in making fine papers—suitable spring water. In 1809, in company with Martin Chamberlin, he built the mill where his sons now are. He died in 1845. In 1842 his two sons, Zenas M. and James B., became sole proprietors, and the business has been continued without interruption until the present time. In 1879 they purchased what is now known as the "Government mill," built just over the Pittsfield line by the late Hon. Thomas Colt, and which is now run on bank note and bond papers for the United States government. At their other, the "Pioneer mill," in Dalton, they also make bank note and bond papers, which are used by several foreign governments, and by the trade generally. W. Murray Crane, son of Zenas M., became a partner in the business about 1879.

Justin Cole, a Revolutionary soldier from Hatfield, Mass., was one of those who made an early settlement in Dalton, locating upon the farm now occupied by D. J. Pratt.

Dea. William Williams, who came to this town at an early date from Hatfield, Conn., was appointed a trustee of Williams college in 1797, and in 1800 was senator in the State legislature. He died March 1, 1808, at the age of seventy-four.

James Barden removed to Dalton, from Uxbridge, Mass., and made the first settlement upon the farm now owned by Joel W. Barden, on road 4, in 1784. He married Tryphenia White, who bore him ten children. Joel, son of James, was twice married, rearing by his first wife, Mary Ensign, five children, namely: Jamelia, Almira, Lovell M., Jasper W., and Mary W.; and by his second wife, Lydia Wright—who is now, at the age of 96, the oldest person in town—five children, as follows: Joel W., John W., Amelia C., James W., and Clarissa W. Joel was first married to Mary E. Parker, after whose death he married Lydia F. Messenger who bore him four children—Bertha E., and Blanche A., twins, and Angie E., and James E. The homestead, where Joel resides, has been in the family for about a century.

EGREMONT lies in the southwestern part of the county, in lat. $42^{\circ} 10'$ and long. $3^{\circ} 35'$, bounded north by Alford, east by Great Barrington and Sheffield, south by Sheffield and Mount Washington, and west by Columbia county, N. Y. Dr. Holland, in his History of Western Massachusetts, speaks of the original grants that covered the present territory of the township as follows:—

"The Indian reservation, made at the time of the purchase of the lower Housatonic township, extended through the present town of Egremont. A considerable part of this was leased by the chiefs of the Stockbridge tribe to Andrew Karner, October 20, 1740; and, in 1756, a portion of the reservation was purchased of the Indians, and this tract became known as the 'Shawenon Purchase.' It was 'bounded east on Sheffield, south on Indian land, west on the land lately laid to Robert Noble and others, called Nobletown, and to extend north as far as said Nobletown, to the northeast corner of said town; to run east over to the Stockbridge west line.' This tract of land, for the consideration of £20, was conveyed to Ebenezer Baldwin, Aaron Loomis, Josiah Phelps, Benjamin Tremain, Samuel Colver, Samuel Welch, David Winchell and several others. Nobletown was west of the dividing line between Massachusetts and New York, being at the present time a part of the town of Hillsdale. In October, 1756, another tract of land, afterwards known as the Spoor Grant, was conveyed by the Indians to Isaac and Cornelius Spoor, and others. Karner's lease passed from hand to hand until it was lost sight of. At last, between thirty and forty years ago [written in 1857], it came into the possession of William F. Gragg, of Augusta, N. Y., who laid claim to the land which it covered. In 1826, however, the occupants paid him $400.00 for his right, and thus adjusted the claim."

Mr. S. B. Goodale, in a manuscript history of the town, tells another of Indian grants, substantially as follows: A tract of land containing story 1,200 acres, extending from the present village of South Egremont westerly to the mountain, a chestnut tree standing formerly in the little inclosed yard in front of the Mt. Everett House being the northern boundary, was sold or leased by the Indians to one of their tribe named John Van Guilder, and his brother-in-law, Andrew Karner, each having 600 acres. At the same time, also, was sold a like tract lying in Sheffield, to Messrs. Vosburgh and Gordon. John Van Guilder was a strong Indian boy, who, having found a home with a Dutch family living just over the line in New York, took the name of his foster father, though his real name was Konkapot. Previous to the purchase mentioned he rejoined his tribe and married the daughter of a white settler named Karner, and on the removal of the Indians from Stockbridge they made the above mentioned transfer. Van Guilder's half-breed descendants were at one time numerous in the town, though the majority of them removed to Granville, N. Y. The last of them here was a State pauper, named Reuben Winchell, who died in 1850.

In 1836 an agent of the Stockbridge tribe appeared here, claiming the property that had been leased to Karner, agreeing to settle the matter, however, for $1,000.00; but two years later he accepted $400.00 in settlement of the claim. The tract delivered to the Indian, Van Guilder, seems to have been given under a warrantee deed, hence the title of the owners was good.

But be these matters as they may, the Indian grants, together with other lands, were incorporated as a district of Sheffield, February 13, 1760, under the name of Egremont. The new district was invested with all the powers, immunities, and privileges accorded the townships of the province, except the right of sending a representative to the general court, this right being held in common with Sheffield. The privilege of sending its own representative was not accorded until some years after. Why the name Egremont was chosen is not definitely known. Some assert that it was given in honor of Lord Egremont, of England, by some emigrant or emigrants from that Lord's borough; others, that it was so named in honor of Charles Wyndham, Earl of Egremont, who, in 1671, was made secretary of state; while still another, though improbable version, is that the district being originally a part of Great Barrington and Sheffield, was by natural agreement set off as a separate district, hence the name Agreement, finally corrupted into Egremont.

Since its incorporation Egremont has had its boundaries changed so often that it is now extremely irregular in outline, bearing no resemblance to its original proportions. The boundary line between it and Alford was not finally established until February 6, 1790, and the 22d of the same month parts of Sheffield were annexed to the town; on June 17, 1817, a part of Mt. Washington was annexed; and February 16, 1824, other parts of Sheffield were annexed, and the boundary line between the two towns was finally established in 1869, so that the town now has an area of about 16,000 acres.

The surface of the town is extremely varied and irregular, the western and southern portions extending up upon the eastern slope of the Toconic mountains, rough and craggy; while portions of the eastern section are level and productive, with an undulating territory lying between them, sinking, however, in the central part of the town, into an extensive swamp. The soil in most parts of the town is productive and adapted to grain raising, while some localities afford excellent grazing lands. Green river, having its source in New York, winds through the northern part of the town, and Karner river through the southern section, both flowing an easterly course. Winchell pond, covering an area of about 140 acres, lies in the northern part of the town, and Marsh pond, covering an area of seventy-two acres, lies in the central part. Marble quarries have been opened in the northern part of the town, by Henry Tobey and David Olmstead, which yield a marble of good quality and of considerable extent.

The geological formation is principally Levis limestone, underlying most of the eastern section, while the other portions are made up mostly of mica, talcose and argillaceous slate.

In 1880 Egremont had a population of 875. In 1883, the town employed one male and five female teachers in her public schools, to whom was paid an average monthly salary of $40.00 to the males and $35.33 to the females. It had 103 school children, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $1,046.66.

EGREMONT is a post village located in the eastern part of the town.

NORTH EGREMONT, a post village, is located in northern part of the town.

Dalzell & Co.'s carriage hardware works.—In 1845 David Dalzell came to Egremont, from Hudson, N. Y., and purchased the carriage business of Major Karner, located where the present works now are, at South Egremont. In 1850 he added to the works the manufacture of fine carriage axles. In 1868 he took into partnership with him his two sons, David, Jr., and William C., and in 1876 added the manufacture of the Dalzell & Ives patent, wrought-iron case-hardened axle boxes, increasing the business to large proportions. In 1878 David, Jr., died, and in 1879 his death was followed by that of his father, thus leaving the business entirely in the hands of William C., who, in October, 1880, took Roscoe C. Taft as a partner. The firm now employs sixty men, turning out 12,000 sets of axles and 12,000 sets of axle boxes per annum.

Benjamin's cork sole factory.—In 1879 Arthur A. Benjamin, then twenty-five years of age, established the business of manufacturing cork insoles, at South Egremont, only making about fifteen dozen pairs per day. He now employs sixty hands, uses 600 yards of cotton-flannel and 400 of enameled cloth making 500 dozen pairs of soles per day.

The permanent settlement of the town was commenced about 1730, though it is said that Andrew and Robert Karner, from Rhinebeck, N. Y., and John, Isaac and Jacob Spoor, from some other part of that State, came in at an earlier date, supposing they were locating on territory belonging to New York. Between 1730 and 1756 the settlement increased rapidly, the following named being among the early arrivals: Nicholas Karner, Jacob Karner, Cornelius Spoor, Ebenezer Baldwin, Aaron Loomis, Josiah Phelps, John Perry, Timothy Hopkins, Elias Hopkins, Nehemiah Messenger, Benjamin Tonman, Samuel Colver, Samuel Younglove, William Webb, Jonathan Welch, Samuel Welch, Robert Joyner, Gideon Church, Ebenezer Smith, Aaron Sheldon, Israel Taylor, William Roberts, Joseph Hicks, Edward Bailey, Abraham Andrews and John Fuller. In March, 1760, the first district meeting was held, when Samuel Winchell was chosen clerk, and Jonah Westover, Timothy Kellogg and Isaac Spoor, were elected selectmen.

Isaac Fuller, from Tuxbridge, Conn., came to Egremont about 1735, and built a small house near the brook just east of the old Tuller burial ground. His land, however, was then included in that of the town of Sheffield, and was a part of the old Indian tract purchased by a Mr. Vosburgh. During the French and Indian war, Mr. Tuller acted as wagoner in transporting provisions and supplies across the country into Canada, making, it is said, some money thereby. After the war he returned to Egremont and built the brick house now owned by James A. Gardner, from brick he manufactured on his own farm. This is the oldest house in the town, having been built in 1761. Mr. Tuller died in 1797, aged eighty-five years. John Tuller, 2d, built the hotel at North Egremont.

Ebenezer Baldwin was an early settler, making the first settlement on the farm now owned by Henry Burget. James Baldwin was born on the old homestead, on what is now known as Baldwin hill, in 1759. He married three times, first when quite young, and reared five sons, Ephraim, Benjamin, Jonathan, Stephen and Cyrus, and two daughters. Ephraim inherited a quality of great executive ability from his father, and was made a colonel during the war of 1812. In 1829 he was elected representative, being returned the following term. In 1831 he was appointed a justice of the peace, holding the office fourteen years, and in 1842 he was appointed postmaster at North Egremont, which position he held eight years. Col. Baldwin married Dimmis Karner, February 23, 1815, who survived him, his death occurring June 1, 1863. They reared six children, only four of whom attained a mature age, and only two, Levik, of California, and Mrs. Julia F. Rounds, of Egremont, are living. Stephen married Elizabeth Smith and reared one son, Stephen, Jr., who now resides on road 4. Benjamin married Maria Crippen for his first wife, by whom he had six children, five of whom, Joel, Fanny, Franklin, William and Maria, are living; his second wife was Mary Joyner, who bore him three children, Albert H., Edwin A., and Thodore S. Jonathan Baldwin married Esther Church, of Great Barrington, who bore him nine children, six of whom, Cyrus, Emeline, Andrew J., Mason, Theodore and Lydia, are living.

Nicholas Race, from Scotland, was an early settler, locating on the farm now owned by David Millard. Isaac N., son of Nicholas, was born here in 1771, married a daughter of Seneca Tuller, and reared six children, two of whom, Seneca T., of Egremont, and Rovilla T. Kinney, of Canaan Four Corners, N. Y., are living.

Joseph Kline came to Egremont, from New York State, with his father, John C., in 1802, he being at that time only six years of age. He became the husband of Sabra, daughter of Levi Karner, and in 1827 purchased the farm now owned by his son, Joseph A., where he reared seven children, five of whom, Levi K., Dimmis A. (Mrs. Stephen Baldwin), Almira A. (Mrs. John B. Taylor), Joseph A. and Lydia J., wife of George C. Parson, of California, are living.

The First Congregational church of South Egremont.—In 1767 the inhabitants erected a church building and made an effort to establish a church, but the object was not accomplished until February 20, 1770, when a Congregational society was organized, and on the 28th of that month Rev. Eliphalet Steele was installed as pastor. Mr. Steele remained with the people, in entire harmony, until the time of the Shays Rebellion, when, many of his parishioners being among the malcontents, they became his enemies, from the fact that he did not sympathize with them. Some of them entered his house at night, and, after inflicting sundry personal indignities upon him, stole his watch and several articles of clothing. The disturbing elements thus introduced never became thoroughly reconciled, though Mr. Steele remained with the society until April 29, 1794, when he was dismissed. From this time the society gradually diminished in size and strength until it finally became extinct. In 1816, however, a new society was formed, which still exists. It was organized by Rev. Aaron Kinne, with thirteen members, Rev. Gardner Hayden being the first pastor. The old church building stood upon a slightly eminence in the center of the township, about a mile from the present building, which is in the heart of Egremont village. This building erected in 1833, at a cost of $2,500.00, will comfortably seat 300 persons, and is now valued, including grounds, at about its original cost. The society now has 120 members, with Rev. Parris P. Farwell, pastor.

The Baptist church, located at North Egremont, was organized in 1787 and incorporated in 1808. Their house of worship, erected in 1817, will seat 400 persons, and is valued at $2,000.00. Rev. Jeduthan Gray was the first pastor. The society now has fifty-six members, with no regular pastor at present writing.

FLORIDA lies in the extreme northeastern corner of the county, in lat. $42^{\circ} 40'$, and long. $3^{\circ} 59'$. It is very irregular in outline, having Vermont, and Monroe, Franklin county, on the north, Rowe and Charlemont, from which it is divided by Deerfield river, on the east, Savoy, from which it is partly separated by Cold river, on the south, and North Adams and Clarksburg on the west. It was incorporated as a town, June 15, 1805, the northern point being previously taken by Bernardston, in compensation for the loss sustained by a town of that name in running the line between Massachusetts and Vermont. The tract was for many years known as "Bernardston's grant." Bullock's grant and King's grant, so-called, each contributed towards forming the present town's territory. On May 2, 1848, a part of Clarksburg was annexed to the town.

Florida lies upon the summit of the Green Mountain range, and contains some of the finest mountain scenery in the State, and is also noted for being tunnelled its entire width, from east to west, by the celebrated Hoosac tunnel, (see page 56). Hoosac Mountain, which extends nearly the whole length of the town, rises to a height of 1,448 feet above Deerfield river, and affords some magnificent views, of which the following extract from the pen of Mr. Washington Gladden gives a vivid picture:—

"On this bleak, rough mountain-top lies all that is inhabitable of the town of Florida. There are a few good grazing farms; but grain has a slim chance between the late and the early frosts. The winter's are long and fierce. During the Revolutionary war, a body of troops attempted to make the passage of this mountain in mid-winter, and nearly perished with cold and hunger. Passing on the left a dilapidated old tavern, where none but a stranger will be likely to get taken in, and on the right, as we ascend the western crest, a smooth surface of rock, with furrows chiselled in it, by primitive ice bergs, then suddenly bursts upon us a scene whose splendor makes abundant compensation for the dreariness of the three miles just passed.

"In the center of the picture rises Greylock, king of mountains: about him are the group of lesser peaks that make his court. On the north, Mount Adams, a spur of the Green Mountain range, closes the scene. Between this and the Greylock group, the beautiful curves of the Taconic range fill the western horizon. From the north flows down, through the valley that separates the mountain on which we stand, from Mount Adams, the north branch of the Hoosac river; from the south, through the village of South Adams, and the valley that lies between us and Greylock, comes the other branch of the river, and 1,500 feet below us lies the village of North Adams, packed in among its ravines, and climbing the slopes on every side; and here the two branches of the Hoosac unite, and flow on westward through the other valley that divides Greylock from Mount Adams. Williamstown lies at the foot of the Taconic hills, just behind the spur of Mount Adams. The straight line of the Pittsfield and North Adams railroad cuts the southern valley in twain; the Troy and Boston railroad bisects the western valley; and the twin spires of little Stamford, in Vermont, brighten the valley on the north. These three deep valleys, with the village at their point of confluence and the lordly mountain-walls that shut them in, give us a picture whose beauty will not be eclipsed by any scene that New England can show us. If it should fall to your lot, good reader, as it fell to the lot of one ('whether in the body or out of the body I cannot tell') to stand upon the rock that overhangs the road by which we are descending, while the sun, hiding behind amber clouds in the west, touches the western slope of the old mountain there in the center with the most delicate pink and purple hues; while the shadows gather in the hollows of its eastern side, and the sweet breath of a summer evening steals over the green meadows where the little river winds among its alder bushes,—if this should be your felicity, you will say, and reverently too, 'It is good to be here: let us make tabernacles, and abide; for surely there shall never rest upon our souls a purer benediction.'"

Cold river, with its tributaries, flows a southerly course through nearly the whole length of the town, and forming a part of its southern boundary. The underlying rock is calcareous gneiss and the Quebec group, containing a vein of serpentine marble.

In 1880 Florida had a population of 459. In 1883, the town employed eight female teachers in its public schools, at an average monthly salary of $23.00. The town then had ninety-nine school children and raised $831.54 for school purposes.

FLORIDA is a postoffice located in the central part of the town.

HOOSAC TUNNEL (p. o.) is a hamlet located at the eastern mouth of the "Great Bore."

The settlement of the town was begun by Dr. Daniel Nelson, from Stamford, Conn., in 1783. Previous to 1795 he was joined by Paul Knowlton, from Shrewsbury, Sylvanus Clark, from Southampton, Nathan Drury, from Shelburne, Jesse King, from Deerfield, and Stephen Staples, from Adams, and soon after this the settlement was quite numerously reinforced.

Aside from the Revolutionary incident of the American troops passing the mountain, occupying three weeks in the journey, it is also related that four Irish deserters from Burgoyne's army supported themselves here for several years, mostly by hunting and fishing.

Dr. Daniel Nelson came on horseback to Florida from Long Meadow, and settled on Deerfield river, in the southeastern part of the town, where he subsequently had quite an extended practice. He is the only one of the first settlers now represented here, having a grandson, Wallace E. Nelson, residing on the old homestead. Dr. Nelson tended the toll-gate on the turnpike across the mountain for forty years.

Sylvanus Clark, one of the early settlers, removed from Southampton in 1785, and located on the place now owned by Noah Clark. Of a family of three sons and three daughters, none are now living, but Sylvanus has two sons, grandsons of Sylvanus, now residing in the place.

Samuel Phillips, who settled in the northern part of Florida about 1800, reared a family of six children, only one, Anson Mayhew Phillips, of Shelburne Falls, still surviving. There are but two representatives of the family in town, Consider R. and Samuel A., sons of Samuel Ripley.

Ebenezer Bradley, of Rowe, came to Florida, about 1804. He had born to him a family of six children, the only one now living being Beda Bradley, who lives with her nephew, Ira Bradley, upon the old homestead cleared by his grandfather. In early times the family lived in a log house, and the howling of wolves was frequently heard.

Daniel Burnett came to Florida, from Ashfield, about the year 1805. But two of a family of eleven children are now living, and only one, Isaac, resides in Florida, living upon the old homestead. Daniel Burnett, Jr., represented by Horace W., married Miss Electa Loomis, who taught the first school, about 1800, in a barn.

Nathan Kemp came to Florida, from Shelburne, in 1806 or '07, when the country was but thinly settled, locating on the farm now owned by his grandson, Nathan W. Kemp. He reared a family of seven children, but the only representatives now in town are Nathan W., Mrs. Gideon, his mother, and an aunt, Mrs. Kendall Kemp.

Thomas Tower, born in Ashfield, February 8, 1783, came to Florida in 1807, and located in the southeastern part, on the place where Ephraim now resides. Of a family of two sons and two daughters, only one son, Ephraim, and a daughter, Mrs. Clarissa Whitcomb, now reside in town. Ephraim has had a family of three children, one son, Austin, residing upon the old homestead with his father. Three brothers of Thomas Tower also located in Florida, two of whom are still represented in town—William by two sons, Sedate, and Dennis, and one daughter, Mrs. Kemp; and Martin by three sons, Miles, Minor and Sidney.

Ebenezer Thatcher, from Conway, came here in January, 1807, locating in the southern part of the town. He reared a family of six sons and three daughters, nearly all of whom settled here, but of whom only one, Sumner, now resides here. Sumner has two sons and four daughters now living, two of whom, Sereno S. and Amelia M., reside in Florida. Sereno lives on the place cleared by his father. Two brothers of Sumner are also represented here—one, Jerry, by his two sons, Marcus, and Ebenezer; Leonard, by one daughter, Mrs. Sedate Tower.

William White removed from Templeton, his native place, to Athol, and finally, after making several settlements, located in Florida, about 1822. He had born to him two sons and three daughters, the two sons, William and Nathan, settling in Florida. William reared six children, two of whom, George W., and Mrs. Lorenzo Whitcomb, now reside in town. Nathan, who lives on the old homestead, has been twice married, having one son, Ernest C., by his first wife.

The Baptist church, located at Florida village, was organized in 1810, with twenty-six members. Their first church building was erected in 1824, and the present structure in 1861. The church building cost $3,000.00, will accommodate about 175 persons, and is now valued, including grounds, at $4,000.00. The society now has seventy-three members, with Rev. George L. Reeberg, pastor.

GREAT BARRINGTON lies in the southwestern part of the county, in lat. $42^{\circ} 12'$ and long. $3^{\circ} 40'$, bounded north by Stockbridge, West Stockbridge and Lee, east by Tyringham Monterey and New Marlboro, south by Sheffield and New Marlboro, and west by Alford and Egremont. This town formed a part of the territory granted as the "Upper and Lower Housatonic Township," the history of which transaction has already been mentioned in the County Chapter. The Upper Township was surveyed by Timothy Dwight, of Northampton, in October, 1736. It had been encroached upon the survey of the new "Indian Town" (Stockbridge), so that it seems that the boundary of the whole township was as follows: "Beginning at the north western corner of Sheffield, the line ran east 9° south, 1,902 rods, then north 40° east, over the Beartown mountain, 2,256 rods, to a point which falls on the farm of David and John Baker, in Cape street, so-called, in the present town of Lee. It then ran west, 9° north, crossing the southern slope of Rattlesnake mountain and Stockbridge mountain, 3,150 rods to the supposed line of New York; then south, 11° west, 1,950 rods, to the point first mentioned; containing 31,360 acres, the area of seven miles square. The part taken up by the Indian Town was on the north of the township, 770 rods in breadth, extending from the supposed line of New York, six miles, or 1,920 rods east. This contained 9,240 acres, so that what belonged to the Upper Housatonic Township in 1736, was 22,120 acres." In 1743 this tract was incorporated as the North Parish of Sheffield,—sometimes called Upper Sheffield, and during that period was included in and formed a part of the town of Sheffield. But June 30, 1761, it was incorporated as a separate township, under the name of Great Barrington, so named in honor of Lord Barrington, of England, "the first of the name and peerage of Barrington." Its prefix "Great" was obtained, it is said, from the following circumstance: "The divisional line between Massachusetts and Rhode Island was unsettled and in controversy. The town of Barrington, now in Rhode Island, lay near the disputed line, and had been, in some degree, subject to the jurisdiction of Massachusetts; but as it was uncertain whether, by adjustment of the line, Barrington would fall within Massachusetts or Rhode Island, and to obviate the possible impropriety of having two towns of the same name in the province, it was determined that the new town should be called Great Barrington."

In its outline the town is of irregular form though its average length and breadth are nearly the same,—a little less than seven miles. The whole area of the town, as near as the roughness of its boundary lines and the inaccuracies of their recorded surveys permit of computation, is 28,621 acres, or a little less than forty-five square miles. February 16, 1778 a considerable tract of land was taken from the northwesterly part of the town and included in Alford. This section was 652 rods in length, north and south, with a width of 210 rods at its northern and 266 rods at its southern end; again, February 18, 1819, another piece, south of and adjoining the above described tract, was separated from this town and annexed to Alford, making with the first piece a strip of 712 rods in length, and 296 rods in width at its southern end. In the northeastern section, that part of the Upper township known as the Hoplands, was taken from this town and included in the town of Lee at the time of its incorporation, October 21, 1777. By the setting off to Alford, Great Barrington lost 1,075 acres of its territory, which was still further reduced about 4,700 acres by the annexation of the Hoplands to Lee. By these changes the whole reduction of area since the incorporation of the town has been nearly 5,800 acres. In January, 1761, a small tract, including the dwelling and part of the lands of Garrett Burghardt, was, on his own petition, set off from Egremont and attached to Sheffield, and on the incorporation of Great Barrington, a few months later, fell within the limits of this town. This change caused the jog or irregularity in the west line of the town near the late residence of Jacob Burghardt, deceased. On the south, the divisional line between this town and Sheffield, which is now commonly considered a straight line, was formerly the north of the Indian Reservation, and in the legislative act of the 13th of January, 1742, investing the—afterwards—North Parish, of Sheffield, with parish privileges, is thus described: "Beginning at the most northwesterly corner of the Indian land, in the west line of the town of Sheffield, running easterly on said Indian land till it comes to a beech tree marked, near the mouth of Green river, then turning something northerly, and leaving to Sheffield a small piece of meadow, or intervale of said Indian land till it comes to range the line and beech tree on the easterly side of said meadow, or intervale, and then to continue said line till it intersects the east line of Sheffield Propriety." By this line as described,—which afterwards became the south line of Great Barrington,—the "clear meadow," reserved by the Indians, was left to the town of Sheffield, but in later years the crook in this line has been disregarded, and, without any known legislative enactment, by common consent of both towns, this line has been perambulated, surveyed and recorded as a straight line, thus leaving the clear meadow within the limits of Great Barrington.

The surface of the town is broken and uneven, yet affording sufficient level, arable land to have it rank as a fine agricultural town. In the northeasterly part Bear mountain extends southeasterly from Stockbridge and Lee in to Monterey, cutting off from the main body of the town the school district of Beartown, and rendering it inaccessible by public highways except through the adjoining towns of Stockbridge and Lee, or Monterey. To the westward of Bear mountain, and directly at its base, lies the locality known as Muddy Brook, a secluded farming district—extending from the top of Three-mile hill northerly to the Stockbridge line—through which flows the stream that gives name to the locality. To the westward of the central part of Muddy brook valley the monument mountain rises, reaching northerly into Stockbridge and spreading westerly with spurs and offshoots to the Housatonic river, which washes its base at the village of Housatonic, in the extreme northerly part of the town; from its southern base a long range of hills extends southerly along the western border of the Muddy brook valley to Three-mile hill, and there unites with the Warner mountain, a spur of East Mountain. Immediately east of Great Barrington village, the East mountain, or, as it is sometimes called, the Great mountain, rises to an elevation several hundred feet, having its northern terminus in a singularly prominent pile of rocks, about one-third of a mile east of the "Great Bridge," from which it extends, with a gradually widening base, easterly, beyond Three-mile hill into New Marlboro, and southerly into Sheffield. Opposite to, and east of the southern part of the village, lies the Little mountain, apparently thrown from the larger or East mountain, in some great convulsion of nature, and still reclining in the lap of the parent mountain. Between the Little and East mountains a narrow valley intervenes, through which passes one of the early highways of the town, and also the East Mountain brook, which supplies the village with water. The East mountain, below the village, recedes from the river and in the southerly part of the town throws out an arm to the westward, which extends into Sheffield, and is called June mountain. To the eastward of June mountain, between it and the East mountain, passes the road to the Soda Springs and Brush hill, and the elevated intervening valley furnishes a course for Roaring brook, which flows northerly to its confluence with the Housatonic, near the late residence of David Leavitt, deceased. In the northwesterly part of the town the mountain called Tom Ball, in West Stockbridge, and Long Pond mountain, in this town, enters the town from West Stockbridge and reaches along the Alford town line, more than two miles, to the valley of Seekonk brook. This mountain, too, has an offshoot to the eastward, called Sherlock mountain, the eastern base of which borders on Williams river. Between the Sherlock and Long Pond mountains is an elevated valley, containing good farming lands, and forming the basin of Long pond, a secluded and attractive sheet of water of about 100 acres. The principal streams of water are the Housatonic, Williams and Green rivers.

The town thus cut by mountain, hill and valley, presents in all a magnificent piece of scenery, the most attractive of its many points being Monument Mountain, extending from the northern part of the town into Stockbridge. This weird pile,

"Shaggy and wild
With mossy trees and pinnacles of flint,
And many a hanging crag," was made famous long ago by William Cullen Bryant's well-known poem, "Monument Mountain." It derives its name from a curious monument on its southern slope, raised by the Indians for some unknown purpose, which was still standing when the white men first came to this region. There are many traditions extant as to the origin of this monument. Mr. Bryant, who was familiar with the mountain, has given the popular tradition in the above mentioned beautiful poem, which states as follows: "Long before white men came, a beautiful maiden was so unfortunate as to fall in love with her cousin, —a love deemed illegal by these stern tribes. She struggled a long time with her unfortunate passion, but all in vain; at length, overcome with despair and shame, she climbed one day the dizzy height of this mountain precipice accompanied only by a friend, a playmate of her young and innocent years. On the verge of the precipice the friends sat down, and then—

"When the sun grew low,
And the hill shadows long, she threw herself
From the steep rock and perished. There was scooped
Upon the mountain's southern slope a grave,
And there they laid her in the very garb
With which the maiden decked herself for death,
And o'er the mould that covered her the tribe
Built up a simple monument—a cone
Of small loose stones. * * * *

As the legend runs, "the cone of small loose stones," was built and continued to grow by continual deposits, as each one who passed the grave cast another stone upon the heap, out of respect to the memory of her whose body rested beneath. It is said that years ago this cone was leveled by some vandal, out of curiosity, or otherwise, and that it has since been rebuilt by visitors in the same manner in which it was originally raised.

The rocks entering into the geological formation of the territory are principally of limestone formation, forming in some places ledges of excellent marble. In the western part of the town there is a ledge of talcose slate, and in the eastern part a range of quartz rock. Iron ore exists in some localities to a considerable extent.

In 1880 Great Barrington had a population of 4,653. In 1883 it employed five male and twenty-nine female teachers in its public schools, at an average monthly salary of $42.00 for males and $30.44 for females. There were 718 school children, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $8,933.61.

GREAT BARRINGTON is a handsome post village located in the central part of the town on the Housatonic river and on the Housatonic railroad. At the time of the incorporation of the town it was a straggling hamlet known as Upper Sheffield, extending from Pixley street south to the Great Bridge, and thence to the Zina Parks place, south of Merritt I. Wheeler's; but with the exception of the old David Ingersoll house, there were no dwellings between the bridge and the present Congregational church, and the few dwellings south of that point were scattered at wide intervals. Indeed, nearly all the buildings in Water street have been erected during the past fifty years. The central part, proper, of this hamlet was east of the bridge; and its not very extensive business was mostly in that vicinity. The meeting-house, standing in the west line of the upper burial ground, the mills on the river bank, erected by David Ingersoll more than twenty years before, and the notable tavern of Captain Hewitt Root, at the east end of the bridge, formed a nucleus about which a few dwellings had been congregated. Further east, at the Bung Hill corner, was another small collection of residences, a shop or two, and the smithy of Jonathan Nash. In laying out the lands on the east side of the river, through Pixley street, the settling committee appear to have had in view the site of a prospective village on the level ground in that vicinity, and gave the main road in that part of the town a width of ten rods. The establishment of the courts and the subsequent erection of the county buildings, as mentioned on page 35, gave an impulse to the growth and added to the importance of both the village and the town.

It is now a charming village of about 2,700 inhabitants, whose broad main street, numberless huge elms, fine business blocks, neat and well-kept houses, and its business activity wins for it the admiration of all. It has, aside from its business blocks and manufactories, four churches (Congregational, Methodist, Episcopal and Roman Catholic), two banks and many fine private residences. The scenic beauties in its near vicinity are marked and striking, while its drives in all directions are among the most charming to be found.

The Great Barrington Water Company.—The village has a fine water supply, furnished from a reservoir which is supplied by East Mountain brook. The reservoir was built in 1868, by the above mentioned company, which was organized that year, with a capital of $20,000.00. The present officers of the company are John L. Dodge, president; F. T. Whiting, treasurer; Billing Palmer, secretary, with their office located at the store of F. T. Whiting & Son.

The Great Barrington Gas Company.—In 1854 the Berkshire Woolen Company put up works for manufacturing gas for lighting their mills, being first used October 30th of that year. In 1855 the above mentioned company was formed, which laid pipes through Main street and introduced into the village the gas made by the woolen company. It was first used for lighting business places in October, 1855, and has since come into quite general use.

The National Mahaiwe Bank.—May 24, 1847, the Mahaiwe Bank was organized, with a capital of $100,000.00, which was subsequently increased to $200,000.00, and went into operation the following autumn. In 1865 it became a national bank. Its first officers were Wilber Curtis, president, and Henry Hooker, cashier. J. L. Dodge is now president, and F. N. Deland, cashier.

The Great Barrington Savings Bank.—This institution was incorporated February 23, 1869, and commenced business on the first of June of that year. Its first officers, elected May 8, 1869, were as follows: Egbert Hollister, president; David S. Draper, and R. N. Couch, vice-presidents; and M. Ludlow Whitlock, clerk. Egbert Hollister is now president, with Charles I. Taylor, treasurer.

The Berkshire Woolen Company.—This company, engaged in the manufacture of fancy cassimeres, was incorporated in 1836, the business having been commenced in a small way by J. C. & A. C. Russell, the year previous. The company gradually increased its manufacturing facilities by the purchase of all the immediate water-power and buildings on both sides of the river, and the erection of extensive works including the large stone factory—built in 1858–59 on the site of the old tannery—and a machine shop on the site of the old forge, on the east side of the river. The original factory of the Russells, erected in 1836, was destroyed by fire in December, 1864. Parley A. Russell is now president and treasurer of the company, and George E. Russell, secretary.

HOUSATONIC, another thriving post village, where are situated the extensive works of the Monument Mill Co., lies in the northern part of the town, on the Housatonic river. It has, aside from its factories, business places and neat residences, three churches (Congregational, Methodist and Roman Catholic,) and a good school building.

The Monument Mill Co.—This large concern was originally incorporated as the Housatonic Manufacturing Co., in 1830. That company, however, failed, and May 29, 1850, the present company was organized. The mills have sixty-eight jacquaid looms, 1,800 spindles, and give employment to 350 hands, who turn out 330,000 quilts and 2,700,000 pounds of plain, fancy and double and twist cotton warps per year. The present officers of the company are George Church, president, and John M. Seeley, agent and treasurer.

The Owen Paper Co.—In 1852 Henry L. Potter erected a paper-mill on the site of the present mill, which was destroyed by fire in March, 1855. During the following year Messrs. Owen & Hulbert purchased the property and erected a paper-mill which they operated until 1862, when the Owen Paper Co. was organized. Since that time they have erected the large mill about half a mile down the stream from the old works. The firm does a large business in the manufacture of ledger, bank note, bond, thin linen, wedding royals, and writing paper of all kinds. The stock is owned by Henry D. Cone and his wife, who was the widow of Edward H. Owen.

VAN DEUSENVILLE (Van Deusen p. o.) is a small village located midway between Great Barrington and Housatonic, on Williams river, and on the Housatonic railroad. The village has only the works of the Richmond Iron Co., a church, school-house, about twenty dwellings, etc., though it was formerly of considerable importance, having three stores, an hotel, two factories, a chair shop, a wagon shop, and a blast furnace. Isaac L. Van Deusen, to whose energy and enterprise the village was largely indebted, and whose resources were impaired in building it up, removed to Grafton, Ohio, in 1834, and died there. He was highly esteemed, represented this town four years in the general court, 1820-21, and 1827-28, and was also for several years town treasurer. The Richmond Iron Co. have extensive works for smelting ore located here, but they are not now in operation.

William R. Calkins's grist-mill, located on road 23, is operated by steam power, has two runs of stones and grinds from 100 to 150 bushels of grain per day.

B. F. Gilmore's saw-mill, located on road 25, is operated by water-power and has two lumber saws, one shingle-mill and a planing-mill. It gives employment to four men and cuts 300,000 feet of lumber and 300,000 shingles per annum.

William P. Turner's saw-mill, located on road 28, is operated by steam-power, employs four men, and cuts 1,000,000 feet of lumber per year.

Messrs. Ashley and Pomeroy, of the committee for laying out the townships, came to Housatonic in March, 1726, determined the boundary, on the river, between the two towns, and made the division of the Lower Township. It is to be presumed that some settlers were admitted into the Upper Township in that year, and it is certain, from records of the committee, that several of them had entered upon their lands previous to May 12, 1727. These settlers were molested by the Dutch people, who claimed the lands as within the jurisdiction of New York, and the progress of the settlement was for a time delayed by the settling committee, of May, 1727, issued by instruction of the lieutenant-governor, prohibiting the further laying out of lands, and prosecution of suits against the New York claimants. The records of the committee furnish but little information relative to the cause or extent of the troubles with the Dutchmen. The State of New York, claiming the Connecticut river for its eastern boundary, had granted the lands along the Housatonic, as has been stated in our County Chapter, to the Westenhook patentees, thirty years previous to the commencement of the settlement, and these patentees, or others holding under them, now contested the right of the Massachusetts settlers to the lands in both townships. [It is said that the New York men brought suits against some of the settlers and caused them to be arrested and taken to Albany for trial. These troubles retarded the settlement of the town for a number of years.

The majority of the first settlers were English, several of them from Westfield and that vicinity, while a few were Dutch from the State of New York. The earliest settlers, south of the bridge, were Coonrod Burghardt, Samuel Dewey, Samuel Dewey, Jr., Asahel Dewey, Thomas Dewey, John Granger, Samuel Harmon, Moses Ingersoll, David King, Stephen King, Israel Lawton, Joseph Noble, Thomas Piper, John Phelps, Joshua Root, Joseph Sheldon, Samuel Suydam, Lawrence Suydam, Joshua White, Samuel Younglove, Samuel Younglove, Jr. Most of these settled here from 1726 to 1730, none it is probable, coming later than 1733. Above the bridge, the forty proprietary rights in the Upper Township were, in 1742, owned by sixteen individuals, several of whom were non-residents.

The early settlers in that part of the town were Derrick Hogoboom, Hezekiah and Josiah Phelps, Joseph Pixley and his sons Jonah, Joseph, Moses and Jonathan, John Williams, Isaac Van Deusen, Jehoiakim Van Valkenburgh, John Burghardt alias De Bruer, and Hendrick Burghardt. A little later came William King, Thomas Horton, Daniel Nash and his son Jonathan, Jonathan Willard and David Ingersoll. These last named appear all to have resided here as early as 1740. To these settlers, or to the owners of proprietary rights, house lots, with meadow and upland, were laid out by the settling committee, along the valley of the river from the north line of Sheffield to the foot of Monument mountain; and a few locations were made west of the Green river, in the southerly and westerly parts of the town. But with these few exceptions the settlements were for the most part confined to the valley, and did not penetrate the more remote parts of the town until 1753, or latter.

The first town meeting was waræd by Gen. Joseph Dwight, July 18, 1761, to "meet at the meeting-house, on Wednesday, July 22d, 1761, at four o'clock, P. M. At this meeting Joseph Dwight was chosen moderator, and the following list of officers elected: Mark Hopkins, town clerk; Joseph Dwight, Timothy Hopkins and John Burghardt, selectmen and assessors; Timothy Hopkins, town treasurer; Thomas Pier, Jr., constable; Aaron Sheldon, Jonathan Pixley and William Brunson, hog reeves; Timothy Hopkins, Jonathan Nash and William Brunson, surveyors of highways; Aaron Sheldon and Israel Root, fence viewers; Timothy Hopkins, sealer of leather; William Ingersoll, Jonathan Nash and Timothy Hopkins, overseers of the workhouse; William Ingersoll and Jonathan Nash, tythingmen; and Jonathan Nash, Timothy Hopkins and William Brunson, wardens.

In 1775 the town had 961 inhabitants, and in 1790 its population had increased to 1,373. Among the prominent citizens earlier than 1810, may be mentioned the following: James Hyde, George Beckwith, Allen Henderson from New Hartford, Conn.; Samuel and Gamaliel H. Barston, from Sharon, Conn.; David and Isaac Leavenworth, Ebenezer Pope, originally from Lebanon, Conn.; Samuel Riley and Timothy Pelton. Of those between 1810 and 1820, were William Cullen Bryant, John Chatfield, Charles and Ralph Taylor, Alvenus Cone and Charles Foote. Between 1820 and 1830, John C.

and Asa C. Russell, Increase Sumner, Elijah Foster, Gilbert Munson, William M. Battell, Daniel Wilcox, Linus Manville, Washington Adams and Benjamin Peabody. Between 1830 and 1840, Noble B. Pickett, Augustine and Daniel E. Giddings, Enos Foote, George Taylor, John C. Cone, John D. Cushing, Joshua R. Lawton, Phineas Chapin, John H. Coffing, George W. Sterling, John W. Couch, Henry Loop, William S. Stevens, William and George Stanley, and Philip Barnes and many others.

Prominent amongst the men active in town affairs between 1810 and 1830, were David Wainright, Lucius King, Moses Hopkins, David Leavenworth, James A. Hyde, John Whiting, Ebenezer Pope, George H. Ives, William C. Bryant, John Seeley, Benjamin Rogers, Samuel Rosseter, Isaac L. Van Deusen, and George Beckwith. Among those most prominent between 1830 and 1850, and several of them later, were Charles W. Hopkins, David Ives, Edward P. Lawton, Augustine Giddings, Loring G. Robbins, Jacob H. VanDeusen, Charles W. Emerson and Samuel Newman.

The men furnished by Great Barrington during the late war, the troubles attending the Shays Rebellion, the Indian mission established here, the town's court history, newspaper history, etc., etc., have all been noticed in our County Chapter, to which we refer the reader for further information. In the following brief biographical notices we mention a few of the early settlers, a few of those whose deeds have identified them with the history of the town, and a few of those whom the exhaustive and well-arranged "History of Great Barrington," by Charles J. Taylor, to which we are so largely indebted, has omitted to notice.

David Humphrey, born in 1720, was one of the early settlers of Great Barrington, locating on the farm now owned by Hiram Comstock. His son Hugh, who was born December 8, 1749, married Desiah Pixley in 1776, and in 1794, purchased the farm now owned by Mark Humphrey, which farm has ever since been in the possession of the Humphrey family. David, son of Hugh, who was eight years old when his father moved upon the homestead, married Sophronia Hamlin, of Canton, Conn., and reared a family of seven children, five of whom, Mark, of this town, Isaac, of Springfield, Mass., Electa Nicholson, and David, of Nashville, Tenn., and Francis Hollister, of Kansas are still living. In 1867 Mark Humphrey, in company with George R. Ives, purchased the Woodruff property of seventy nine acres and opened Bridge street. In 1872 he purchased the right of way from the Berkshire House to the bridge of Mr. Ives, at an expense of $1,500.00, and built the first bridge across the stream at this point, at the cost of $2,408.00, proceeding at once to grade the street at the additional expense of $2,000.00, making the total expense $6,000.00. In 1880 the town voted to accept the bridge and roads, and pay Mr. Humphrey $500.00.

David Sanford, born in Medford, Conn., in 1737 came to Great Barrington about 1756, making the first settlement on the farm now owned by his great-grandson, F. T. Sanford. He married Bathsheba Ingersoll, in 1757 by whom he had ten children. David, Jr., born January 6, 1759, married Hannah Medway, rearing a family of ten children. John son of David, Jr., born May 22, 1784, married Aurora Farnham, who bore him six children, five of whom, John F., and Frederick T., of Great Barrington, Mrs. Mary L. Wilmot of New York city, Mrs. Aurora Laselle, of Florida, and David, of St. Paul, Minn., are still living.

William Pattison, born in Connecticut, came to Great Barrington before the Revolution, locating on road 6, and served in the war from this place. He married Betsey Williams, who lived only about a year. He afterwards married Wealthy A. Lawrence, by whom he had eight children, two of whom, William, of Withville, Va., and Bazy W., of this town, survive.

Phineas and Hezekiah Atwood were among the first settlers in this town. A son of Phineas, Phineas, Jr., who was born September 11, 1766, married Amy Martin in 1793, and reared a family of eight children, of whom one son, Henry, of Lancaster, N. Y., survives. Jeremiah, son of Phineas, Jr., married, in 1841, Cynthia Upham, who died in 1861. He married Mariette C. Bullard, in 1866, rearing one son, Henry B., who survives, residing on road 26. In 1824 Phineas was elected colonel of a company in the battalion of cavalry in the first brigade, 7th division. He died April 14, 1882.

Con Murray, a native of Ireland, enlisted and came to this country under Burgoyne, and was with him until the surrender, after which he came to Great Barrington, locating on the farm now owned by William Palmer.

Peregrine Comstock, from New London, was among the early settlers in this town, locating on the place now owned by Burdett Shepard. Hiram, son of Prentice, and grandson of Peregrine, born in 1805, married Eleanor Townsend, rearing a family of five children, four of whom, Perry G., Mrs. Euretta Laning, Mrs. Mary A. Van Deusen, of this town, and Mrs. Mary E. Cross, of Berkshire, N. Y., are living.

Elijah Dwight the first clerk of the court, and register of probate, was the son of Gen. Joseph Dwight, and was born at Brookfield, April 23, 1740. He held the above offices until the Revolution, and September 6, 1765, was appointed a justice of the peace and special justice of the court of common pleas. He is understood not to have sympathized very strongly with the popular leaders in the Revolutionary contest. He certainly was not an active Whig, but he was a man of the highest character and standing, and never in any respect obnoxious to his fellow citizens. He was repeatedly a representative from Great Barrington, a member of the State senate from 1788 to '93, a member of the convention which ratified the Federal constitution in 1788, and one of the justices of the court of common pleas from 1787 until his death. He died at Brookfield, June 12, 1794. It is said of him—"he was an able magistrate and a very gentle, kind-hearted, good man." He married a daughter of Dr. Thomas Williams, of Deerfield, but has now no living descendants. His home in Great Barrington was the home built by his father and is still standing.

Mark Hopkins was the youngest child of Timothy Hopkins, of Waterbury, Conn., born September 18, 1739, and graduated at Yale in 1758, in the class of Israel Stoddard. He came to Great Barrington, perhaps drawn there because it was the residence of his elder brother, Dr. Samuel Hopkins, then pastor of the church here. He was admitted to the bar at the first session of the court of common pleas (September, 1761), the first person admitted to the bar in this county. At the same time he was by the court appointed register of deeds, which office he held by successive elections to the time of his death. It is worthy of mention that he was succeeded in this office by his nephew, Moses Hopkins, Esq., in 1778, who, in his turn, was re-elected from time to time for a period of sixty years. Mr. Hopkins was also county treasurer for a number of years, Kings attorney or prosecuting officer, from an early date, and justice of the peace from 1766, after the Revolution commenced, and during the unsettled state of the government, he was appointed by the council (September 28, 1775), judge of probate for this county, but never assumed the office. He was a decided Whig at the opening of the Revolution, a member of the county convention at Stockbridge, July, 1774, and in 1776 joined the army about New York, as brigade major in the brigade commanded by Gen. John Fellows. He died in the service at White Plains, April 20, 1776. The house and office which he built and occupied in Great Barrington are still standing, though each is removed from its original location.

Isaac Seeley, who was long register of deeds here, was born in Van Deusenville, June 27, 1805. He was afforded a common school education, and soon after leaving school he became a clerk in a store at Van Deusenville, and also taught school for a time. Later he went to Worcester, Ohio, where he was a clerk in a store. Returning to Great Barrington, in 1828, he again began teaching school, and taught school for several years. About this time he became interested in politics, and in 1833 was elected a Whig member of the legislature, and in 1840 was a member of the convention at Baltimore that nominated Harrison for President. In the spring of 1844 Mr. Seeley began to keep books in the store of the Berkshire Woolen Company, and continued in that occupation until 1846, when he was elected register of deeds, of the South Berkshire district, retaining the position until his death, in 1884. He also held town offices and was postmaster a number of years. His widow and five children survive him—Miss Julia A., Mrs. Kate Gallup, Miss Alice E., and George B., of this town, and Merret, of Concord, N. H.

Clarkson T. Collins, M. D., was born in Smyrna, Chenango Co., N. Y., January 8, 1821, and died in New York City, April 10, 1881. His parents, Job. S. and Ruth Collins, were well known and highly esteemed members of the Society of Friends. They removed to Utica, N. Y., in 1835, where they continued to reside until the father's death, in 1870. Dr. Collins graduated from the medical department of the University of New York, in 1843, having also attended the city hospital. He then settled in New York city, where he soon secured a good practice. Soon after his graduation, he was appointed one of the physicians to the Eastern Dispensary, and also district physician to the New York Lying-in Asylum. In 1845, with his characteristic energy and progressive ideas, he established the New York Medical and Surgical Reporter, when medical papers and magazines were by no means so common as at the present day. Having made a special study of Gynecology, he established, in 1848, an infirmary for the treatment of female diseases and remained in charge of it until the year 1849. In that year he was compelled by repeated hemorrhages of the lungs to relinquish, for a time, his arduous professional duties. He spent four months on the Island of Madeira, and then made a tour through Spain, France and England. On his return from Europe he made a visit among the Berkshire Hills, and the climate here agreed with him so well that he decided to remove from New York city to Great Barrington, which he did, in the autumn of 1850, and continued to reside here in his villa, known as "Indiola Place," until the time of his death. During his residence of over thirty years in Berkshire county he established a large practice and won a wide reputation for medical and surgical skill. In 1851 he founded an institution, still known as the "Collins House," for the treatment of chronic diseases, and received many patients from all parts, of the country.

Dr. Collins was an early advocate of the American Medical Association, and was a delegate from New York city at its meeting in Boston, in 1849. He was also one of the earliest advocates of the New York Academy of Medicine, which was organized in 1847. He was made chairman of the Committee on Ether by the Academy when the members of his profession were divided in sentiment as to its use; that committee consisted of thirteen members, among whom were Drs. Valentine Mott, Parker, Post and other eminent men. Dr. Collins was a member of the American Medical Association, the New York State Medical Society, the Massachusetts Medical Society, and the Berkshire District Medical Society, and of the latter was twice president. He was also one of the censors and State councillors, also corresponding member of the Massachusetts Board of Health and of the Boston Gynecological Society. He devoted much time to the study of his profession and published a number of contributions to its literature. He married, in 1844, Lydia C., daughter of Charles G. Coffin, of Nantucket. In 1864 his two children, a son and daughter, died. This sad blow was followed in a few months by the death of his wife. Dr. Collins was a man of commanding presence and vigorous personality, which never failed to impress those with whom he was brought in contact, while his kind heart and genial disposition greatly endeared him to those who knew him best. He combined with a practical judgment and broad and progressive ideas, an indomitable energy and untiring perseverance that won for him an enviable place in the ranks of his profession, and enable him to exert an influence that will long be felt in the community in which he lived.

The three families settled upon adjoining farms on North Plain, prospered in their worldly affairs, and celebrated their thanksgivings together. Mr. Giddings was representative in the legislature of 1841, and held the office of justice of the peace forty-two years. Thoroughly orthodox in his religious faith, he instructed his family in the assembly's catechism, and daily acknowledged his Heavenly Father in family prayer. In 1837 the mills were converted from woolen to cotton mills, the manufacture of which was continued until 1846, when the mill and water-power was sold to Coffin & Chitendon, the power to be used in the blast furnace, after which Mr. Adams and Seeley went to Adams and purchased the water-power of the late William C. Plunkett, erecting a cotton-mill which they operated six years, when, in 1864, Mr. Seeley sold his interest to the heirs of W. The First Congregational church of Great Barrington.—In the "North Parish of Sheffield," the first meeting-house was built in 1742, and the first minister known to have officiated was Rev. Thomas Strong—afterwards settled in New Marlboro—who preached here for a time, probably as a candidate, in 1742-43. The parish committee for providing preaching secured the services of Rev. (afterwards Doctor) Samuel Hopkins, who came early in July, 1743. Mr. Hopkins, after preaching through the summer, to the acceptance of the people, was invited, by the unanimous vote of the parish proprietors, September 9, 1743, to settle here in the work of the ministry, and was accordingly ordained December 28th of that year. On the same day with the ordination of Mr. Hopkins, the church was organized with five members besides its pastor. To these, twelve were added on the 5th of February following, and seven others during the year 1744. The old church building did service until the year 1812, when another wooden structure was built; this in turn was used until 1859, when it was removed to Bridge street, and a fine stone edifice erected upon its site, at a cost of about \$22,000.00, to which was added a chapel in 1878, at a cost of \$5,470.00. HANCOCK lies in the western part of the county, in lat. $42^{\circ} 32'$, and long. $3^{\circ} 41'$, bounded north by Williamstown, east by New Ashford, Lanesboro, and Pittsfield, south by Richmond, and west by Columbia and Rensselaer counties, N. Y. It comprises a long, narrow strip of territory, about sixteen miles in length and two miles in width, hemmed in by parallel ridges of the Taconic mountains, which form almost a natural wall around it, whence its early name, Jericho, was derived. Its territory was originally obtained from the State by several minor grants, the residue being sold to the actual settlers by the general court, as follows: The first and principal grant was made in 1760, the legislature granting a tract to Asa Douglass and Timothy Douglass, of Canaan, Conn., Col. John Ashley, of Sheffield, and Josiah Dean. During the following year Charles Goodrich, of Pittsfield, obtained a grant in what is now the southern part of the town, and Dea. Samuel Brown, of Stockbridge, and a Col. Farrington received small grants in the northern part. The residue of the town was sold by the general court in 1789, to the actual settlers. This territory was called Jericho, and August 26, 1776, Jericho was incorporated as a separate township, under the name of Hancock, the name being given in honor of Hon. John Hancock, then president of the Continental Congress and afterward governor of the State, the act of incorporation reading as follows:

“WHEREAS, It has been represented to this honorable court; That the Inhabitants of a place called Jericho, in the county of Berkshire, have been taxed for several years past and have met with difficulties in assessing and collecting the same, and likewise are liable to many other inconveniences for want of being incorporated into a township; Be it therefore enacted by the Council and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same that the said plantation, bounded east on the towns of Pittsfield and Lanesboro, north on Williamstown, south on Richmond, and west on the line between this and the New York government, containing about 20,000 acres of land, be and is hereby erected into a town, by the name of Hancock, and that the inhabitants be and hereby are invested with all powers and privileges and immunities which the Inhabitants of towns within this Colony do or may enjoy, etc."

Since its erection as a township, however, Hancock has been divested of a considerable portion of its territorial limits. In 1787, when the line between New York and Massachusetts was finally established, it took from the western part of the town a valuable tier of lots of from half to three-quarters of a mile in length, throwing it into the limits of the former state. As this land was of an excellent quality, it proved a serious loss to the town. In June, 1798, the town sustained another, though minor loss, when a tract in the north-eastern part, about 241 to 389 rods wide, and from 950 to 990 long, was set off to New Ashford. Other than these changes, the territorial limits of the town are to-day as they were in 1776.

The surface of Hancock is diversified by smiling, verdant valleys, and rough mountains crags, presenting many combinations of exquisite landscape scenery, and affording points of view that are grand in the extreme, Potter mountain, on the line between Lanesboro and this town, being one point that is famous for the magnificent view it affords. Hemmed in, as we have mentioned, by its barriers of old Taconic walls, the town has, extending from Williamstown on the north to Hancock village on the south, a distance of about seven miles, a beautiful, productive, though narrow valley, where are found farms that are excelled by none in the county. South of this valley, however, for a distance of several miles, rough, mountainous rises prevail, wild and rough, and presenting such a succession of uprisings and downfallings as to even preclude the possibility of a carriage road, rendering it necessary for the inhabitants of the valley district mentioned, when visiting their southern neighbors, to step out of the town and circumnavigate the mountains by trespassing on the territory of New York. South of this, however, to the Richmond line, is a tract of excellent land again, having a soil of gravel and loam. The soil, except in the mountainous parts, is a good quality, producing good grain crops, except wheat. The mountain slopes and hill-sides abound with fine pastures, adapting the town generally better for grazing purposes than for the cultivation of the soil. The native timber is principally maple, birch, ash, butternut, bass, elm and chestnut. The town abounds with fine springs of water, and in the central part there is a small pond or lakelet, called Berry pond. About three miles south of the northern boundary, a branch of the Green river has its source, flowing north into Williamstown. Just south of this source Kinderhook creek rises, flowing a southerly and westerly course, passing through the village of Hancock into New York. There are several other minor streams, though few mill privileges are afforded. The rocks, entering into the geological formation are principally talcosc slate, except in the northern part, where is found a considerable range of limestone.

In 1880 Hancock had a population of 642. In 1883 the town employed one male and ten female teachers, to whom was paid an average monthly salary of $12.00 to males and $21.00 to females. There were 103 school children in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $800.00.

HANCOCK is a small post village located in the central part of the town.

SHAKER VILLAGE is a pleasant and interesting little hamlet, located in the southeastern part of the town, lying partly in Pittsfield. The growth of the sect here was begun in 1780, when several individuals embraced their peculiar religious views, and began to visit Mother Ann Lee and the elders at Escuania, N. Y., and in 1784 they set up a meeting-house here. Among the first to embrace the faith were John Deming, Hezekiah Osborn, Daniel, Nathan, David, Ezekiel, Hezekiah and Jeremiah Goodrich, Israel, Josiah and Joseph Talcott, and Joshua Cogswell, the latter from Pittsfield. Since then the sect here has risen from indigence to wealth. The first elders, or rulers, of the society, after it was fairly organized, were Dr. Calvin Harlon and Sarah Harrison. Their successors have been Nathaniel Deming and Carson D. Goodrich, Grove Wright and Eunice Hastings, Thomas Dawson, Albert J. Battles, and Hannah A. Agnew, the present incumbents. The principal occupation of the Shakers at the present time is farming, though there is some manufacturing, but not so much as formerly, there being a grist mill in the Pittsfield portion of the village. They devote considerable attention to breeding and growing cattle, with much success. Ira R. Lawson is their business manager. A large, circular stone barn, 270 feet in diameter, with walls twenty-one feet high and from two to three feet thick, built in 1826, is considered much of a curiosity in its way. "There is nothing to be said against the Shakers," says J. G. Holland, "except that their religion involves the sacrifice of the purest and most ennobling relations of life, and—(theoretically) the depopulation of the world."

Asa Douglass, the first of the grantees in the original grant of 1760, made the first settlement in the town, in 1762, the story of his settlement being as follows: Having been "unsuccessfully engaged in trade at Canaan, Conn., he concluded to go into a newer country, to try his fortune. Journeying northward, inquiring for a good locality in which to settle, he was directed by an Indian to this place. He liked it, sought and obtained a grant of 1,000 acres, and located his dwelling" southwest of the present village, near where the road crosses into the State of New York. Here located, also, most if not all of his seven sons. The settlement was soon after augmented by the arrival of John Clothier, Jesse Squire, Amasa and Martin Johnson, Benjamin Davis, Samuel Grippen, David Sprague, Samuel Hand, Capt. Caleb Gardner, David Vaughn, Reuben Ely, and Henry and Jonathan Hazard, most of whom were from Connecticut and Rhode Island.

In 1764, Daniel Goodrich, nephew of Charles Goodrich, who had obtained the second grant as previously mentioned, began a settlement thereon. During the following year he was joined by his father and his nine brothers, Benjamin, Samuel, Nathan, David, Ezekiel, Elizur, Hezekiah, Jeremiah and Enoch; and about the same time came Jeremiah and Hezekiah Osborne, father and son, and Israel Talcott. In this many of the settlers on this grant afterwards became Shakers.

The first child born in the town was William Douglass, grandson of Asa, the latter of whom was also a direct ancestor of Hon. Stephen A. Douglass. The first school-house was built soon after the settlement began, on the Douglass grant. The first grist and saw-mill was built by John Gardner. The first church was built in 1791.

Hon. Rodman Hazard, grandson of Jonathan Hazard, an Englishman and one of the earliest settlers, was born in 1775. Rodman was apprenticed to a tanner and currier in Lanesboro, after which he was engaged for several years as a journeyman shoemaker. He represented the town for a number of years in the State legislature, served one term in the State senate, was a member of the Governor's Council, and was in the senate at the time of the laying of the corner-stone of Bunker Hill Monument, assisting as one of the committees on that occasion. Rodman had two sons, who settled in Hancock, Rodman, Jr., and Thomas J. The widow of the latter, Mrs. Amanda C. Hazard, still resides there.

Thomas Eldridge removed from East Greenwich, R. I., in 1776, when his son Griffin was only thirteen years of age, coming in a covered wagon, drawn by a yoke of oxen and a horse. Griffin Eldridge reared a family of eight children, of whom the survivors are Mrs. Hannah White, nearly eighty-one years of age, and Lyman Eldridge, in his seventy-ninth year. Lyman has been a deacon of the Baptist church for nearly thirty-four years.

Caleb Gardner, from near Wickford, Rhode Island, located in Hancock in 1767, on the place now owned by Kirk E. Gardner, which has always been in the possession of the Gardners since. The only representatives now living in Hancock are a great-granddaughter, Sarah W. Gardner, who resides on the place adjoining the homestead, and a great-grandson, Kirk E., together with his son John D., and his daughter, Mrs. F. H. Eldridge. Caleb's son John Gardner represented Hancock in the State legislature, and Kirk E. represented the Berkshire county district in the State legislature in 1873.

Elijah Goodrich came to Hancock, from Wintbury, Conn., in 1771, locating near the school-house in Goodrich Hollow. He reared a family of twelve children, and Goodrich Hollow received its name from the fact that eight of his sons settled there. None of this family are now living, but there are two descendants, Clark B. and Solomon P. Goodrich, and their descendants now residing in town. Clark B. has three sons, Eugene C., Henry M., and Charles J., and Solomon P. has two sons, Elmer S., and Orrin H., and three daughters. Goodrich Hollow was in early days quite an enterprising place, as about 1807 there were located here a blacksmith shop, a distillery, two saw-mills, and a spinning room for spinning flax, by water-power.

William Hadsell came from Nine Partners, N. Y., about the year 1777, and located on the place where George H. now resides, which place has always been in the Hadsell family since. William reared a family of ten children, none of whom are now living, although there are descendants residing here, viz.: Mrs. Dorcas Gardner, daughter of Isaac, William and George Hadsell, and Mrs. Kirk Gardner.

Job Dawley removed to Hancock, from Rhode Island, some time previous to 1790. He had born to him a family of five sons and four daughters, none of whom are living. Silas G., a son of Rodney and a grandson of Job, represents this family here, and his brother James E. lives in Williamstown.

Abel Corey came from Rhode Island to this place in 1780, carrying his small amount of property upon his back. In 1789 he married Abigail Hall, and settled on the farm now owned by his son, Frebon. Of his family of ten children but two are now living, Mrs. Humility Saunders, of Stephentown, N. Y., and Frebon, who resides on the old homestead in Hancock.

John Gorton removed from Connecticut, and, after settling in several places, at last located in Hancock, in 1800. Of a large family, none survive; but three grandsons, Lester, Frank and Philander W., reside in town.

Rhodes Whitman, from Greenwich, R. I., came to this town about the year 1800. He had a family of three sons and three daughters born to him, none of whom are now living. There are several descendants, however, in the town, among whom are Herman H., a son of Henry, Andrew J., James R., and Daniel, sons of Benjamin, Charles and Ernest, sons of Nathaniel Whitman. Herman H. lives on the farm settled by his mother's father, Geo. Hall, about the year 1784. Herman has held nearly all the town offices.

Jason White came to Hancock, from Adams, Mass., in 1822, settling in 1833 upon the farm where his son, Daniel N., now resides. Of a family of three sons and three daughters, but two, Daniel N. White, and Mrs. Henry Lapham, now reside in Hancock. Daniel N. represented the First Berkshire district in the State legislature, in 1878.

Nathaniel Gardner came to Hancock from Rhode Island, about 1770, his wife accompanying him on horseback and carrying a young child in her arms. He located on the place now owned by his great-grandson, John J. Gardner. Of his descendents now residing in Hancock, there are his great-grandchildren, John J., and Minerva M., with his great-great-grandchildren, Don A., Willie A., Sarah A., and Norah E.

Of the part Hancock took in the Revolution, J. G. Holland, in his History of Western Massachusetts, speaks as follows:—

“The first town meeting was held August 21, 1776, at the house of Esquire Douglass. Born thus with the Revolutionary period, the town, in its action, was worthy alike of its natal year, and its name. Early in its meetings it ‘voted that a committee be appointed to procure such evidence as may be obtained against all persons charged by the inhabitants of this town as being inimically disposed towards this, or any of the United States.' The people voted that Tories should not be permitted to remain in the town, and that any one coming into the town to live should bring a certificate from the town he had left that 'since the year 1775, his conduct has been friendly to these American States.' Asa Douglass took a very active part in the Revolution, and declared that he would sooner see his sons fall, than witness the defeat of the cause of liberty. His son Capt. William Douglass, Capt. Bills, Lieut. James Smith, and several others from Hancock were in the battle of Bennington, the guns of which were heard by their wives and families at home. Whitman Vaughn, Clark Gardner, and a Mr. Sweet fell in that battle. During the day the wife and daughter of Lieut. James Smith walked the high mountain at the northeast of the town, listening to the far-off roar, and full of anxious solicitude for the husband and father. As night approached, the wife felt a presentiment of her husband's safety, and his speedy return; and, hastening down the mountain, said, 'Molly, put the kettle on, and prepare supper, for Jamie is coming home to-night and will soon be here.' 'Jamie' certainly soon came in, having received a furlough for only one night."

HINSDALE is a mountainous town in the eastern-central part of the county, in lat. $42^{\circ} 26'$ and long. $3^{\circ} 54'$, bounded north by Dalton and Windsor, east by Peru, south by Washington, and west by Washington and Dalton. It was a part of the old town of Partridgefield, which was originally township No. 2, and was sold at auction in Boston to Elisha Jones, June 2, 1762, for £1,460. Subsequently, Oliver Partridge, of Hatfield, became a joint owner, and July 4, 1771, the town was incorporated, the name Partridgefield being given in honor of Oliver Partridge. In 1795 the town was divided, the western part of the territory being incorporated as the "West Parish of Partridgefield," and June 24, 1804, this "West Parish" was incorporated as the township of Hinsdale, named in honor of Rev. Theodore Hinsdale, the first settled pastor.

The surface of Hinsdale, being rough and mountainous, is more pleasing to the lover of fine mountain scenery, exhilarating breezes and crystal fountains, than to him who delights in broad acres of highly cultivated land. Still, Hinsdale, despite its rough and broken surface, and the convulsions that have upheaved its rocks and earth into the pleasing incongruities that delight the artists soul, still retains many acres of rich, productive land nestled in its valleys, while on the banks of its streams are large tracts of meadow land. A portion of this meadow land, it is said, was brought under cultivation as early as 1780, the price for laborers in clearing it being "four quarts of Turk's Island salt" per day for each able-bodied man. The soil on the uplands and hill-sides is also fertile, and affords good pasturage. The streams are the Eastern, Western and Middle branches of the Housatonic river, and afford some excellent mill privileges. The Boston & Albany railroad follows the course of the main branch of the Housatonic through the town.

The geological formation is almost entirely made up of gneiss rock. Near the center of the town there is a mineral spring of some celebrity. Brown hematite and serpentine are found, and apatite and zoisite occasionally occur.

In 1880 Hinsdale had a population of 1,595, and in 1884 had twelve public schools, employing twenty one teachers, at an aggregate salary of $2,481.80. There were 405 pupils attending public schools, while the entire cost of the schools for the year was $2,822.11, leaving a balance in the treasurer's hands of $64.49 for the year.

HINSDALE, a post village and station on the Boston & Albany railroad, is located in the western part of the town on the main branch of the Housatonic. It has three churches (Congregational, Baptist and Roman Catholic), a public library, ten stores, a grist-mill, three woolen mills, two blacksmith shops, two livery stables, a basket shop, wagon shop and about 150 dwellings.

The Public Library of Hinsdale has a fine collection of 3,300 books. The new building was located in 1866, a handsome stone, fire-proof structure, of the Gothic style. It was opened January 1, 1867. Mrs. Mary Twining, formerly a resident of Hinsdale, left $5,000.00 by will a few years ago, for founding a public library here. This was opened as a free library in 1881. The town has made annual appropriations for sustaining the library, and for adding new works. Miss Mary Barrow is the deputy librarian in charge.

The Hinsdale Mills, operated and owned by the Hinsdale Bros., of Pittsfield, (F. W. and J. H.) employ about 250 operatives in the manufacture of woolen goods—cassimers, kerseys, suitings, etc.,—having seventeen sets of cards and sixty-seven broad looms. The mills consist of two stone and one framed building, with accessory buildings for store-houses, dry-houses, tenements, etc. These gentlemen are natives of Hinsdale, and are descendants of Rev. Theodore Hinsdale, after whom the town was named.

The Plunkett Woolen Co.'s Mills, located on Water street, Hinsdale village, are also engaged in the manufacture of all kinds of woolen goods, with George T. Plunkett, manager.

Albert E. Parish's warp and yarn mills, located at Hinsdale, were built in 1882. He manufactures about 3,000 pounds per week. Across the way from Mr. Parish's mill stands a red building, used by Mr. Parish as a wool-picking house, which was the second saw-mill erected in the town.

The Tracy saw-mill, located on road 29, owned by George Tower, and leased by Curtis Bros., was burned Saturday, December 20, 1884. Its capacity was 300,000 feet of lumber per annum.

The first settlement in what is now Hinsdale was commenced about 1763, by David, Thomas and Francis Miller, from Middlebury. Francis was subsequently employed by the government to survey the boundary line between New York and Massachusetts, and also the route of the middle turnpike from Boston over the mountain to Albany. The settlement was soon after increased by the arrival of Nathan and William Torrey, from Rhode Island, Phineas, Joseph, Zaccheus and Michael Watkins, from Hopkinton, and Nathan Fisk. The latter, in 1771, built the first grist and saw-mill, in the southeastern part of the town, receiving therefor a bounty from the government, of 250 acres of land. In 1774 Nathaniel Tracy, James Wing, and Amasa and Nathaniel Frost came into the town. From this time up to 1800, the settlement was increased quite rapidly, most of the settlers coming from Connecticut. Among those of this latter period were Rev. Theodore Hinsdale and Richard Starr, who organized the Congregational church, in 1795. The first public house was opened by Rufus Tyler, about 1797. At this house Joseph Bonaparte and suite dined while passing through the town. David Miller was the first magistrate, or "a keeper of the peace" as he was called. The first lawyer was Thomas Allen, who was admitted to the bar in 1799. Dr. Abel Kittredge was the first physician. Simeon Thompson was the first child born in the town, in 1768. LANESBORO lies in the western-central part of the county, in lat. 42° 32', and long. 3° 46', bounded north by New Ashford and Cheshire, east by Cheshire and Dalton, south by Pittsfield, and west by Hancock. The erection of this territory into a township was brought about mainly as follows: In January, 1741, the general court was petitioned by Samuel Jackson and seventy-five others, residents of Framingham, Middlesex county, for a "grant of wilderness land situated on the Housatonic river, near to an Indian town." The petition was favorably considered by the committee to whom it was referred, the grants made and the grantees authorized to survey and locate "a township, of the contents of six miles square, adjoining south on Indian Town, so-called, on the Housatonic river, or as near that place as the land would allow," under the usual restrictions and reservations of such grants. Under the act thus passed the township was located and surveyed, much as it lies to-day, except the portion taken from its northeastern part, March 14, 1793, towards forming the township of Cheshire. At a meeting of the proprietors, held October 19, 1742, it was voted that the new grant should be called Richfield, until a name should be given it by the legislature. When this change occurred the name New Framingham was given it, which was retained until the incorporation of the township, June 21, 1765, when Lanesborough was substituted, since shortened by common usage to a terminal of "boro," in common with most towns ending with "ough." This name was taken, it is said, from James Lane, Viscount Lanesborough, in the peerage of Ireland.

The surface of Lanesboro is broken and uneven, presenting some exquisite scenery, and affording some of the finest views in the county. It has an altitude of from 1,200 to 2,000 feet above the sea level, thus giving a bracing, healthful atmosphere, though its winters are severe. A spur of the Hoosac mountains divides the town from Cheshire on the east, while Potter's mountain of the Taconic range, divides it from Hancock on the west. These two ranges, in a succession of hills, unite on the northern line of the town, while the south opens out into an extended and beautiful view down the valley towards Pittsfield, and to the mountains beyond. A branch of the Housatonic river rises a few rods north of the northern line of the town, flowing southerly through beautiful and luxuriant meadows, through the charming Pontoosuc lake, which is well stocked with the finny tribe, and which conveys the stream into Pittsfield, the lake lying partly in that town; in the eastern section rises the Hoosac, flowing northwardly,—one stream blending with the waters of the Hudson, near Troy, N. Y., and the other dropping into Long Island Sound. To one who delights in the wild and picturesque, Lanesboro hills afford views of which he will never tire. Prominent among these may be mentioned that from Savage mountain, Farnum hill, and Constitution hill. The latter eminence, lying near the geographical center of the town, affords a prospect wherein is spread before the beholder, as on a map, a large section of the Housatonic valley and the chains of mountains which enclose it. Of this prospect, the mellow, golden pen of Godfrey Greylock (J. E. A. Smith), remarks as follows, in his Taghconic:—

“Nestled closest in the bosom of our hills lies the little village of Lanesboro—the very fondling of nature. Thither turns never the good mother her wrinkled front; near pressing as the mountains clasp the narrow valley, you must not look among them for frowning precipices, or earthquake-rifted chasms. High into the air their summits press, but not in jagged peaks—only with the full, round swelling of loving breasts, upon which you may repose, if you will, in the gentlest of summer reveries. There is one eminence near—in patriotic gratitude they call it Constitution Hill—with such a winsome, neighborly look to it, that in our streets, miles away, it seems near as your own garden. If you have in you any yearnings at all after beauty, I am sure you cannot look upon, and not be irresistibly drawn to it, to be lifted up gently and humanly, above the baser things of earth. Lying under its druidical oaks, or seated, farther up, upon a pearl-white quartz rock, in the shade of a whispering birch, you will see below you, groves and farms, and broad, fresh meadows, with laughing lake and winding rivulets, like silver embroidery on the green banner of Erin.”

Rich in scenic beauty as it is, Lanesboro has also riches in nature's bounteous garner—the earth. The basis of its geological structure are rocks of the talcose-slate, limestone and quartz formation. The limestone, aside from its enrichments to the soil by its rapid disintegration, affords also some excellent quarries of marble, and material for the manufacture of lime; the slate portion contains deposits of iron that have yielded thousands of dollars worth of ore; and the quartz affords a valuable sand, some of which, possibly, forms a part of the window pane through which pass the rays of light that enable me to write these words, and possibly, also, through which pass the rays that enable you to read them. Among the curiosities of nature are the “Rolling rock,” in the southwestern part, and a large cave, in the western part, both of which awaken various speculations in the minds of the curious. The Rolling rock, a huge boulder, some thirty feet long, fifteen feet wide and about the same in height, is so pivoted on another rock, about three feet from the ground, that it can be easily moved, and still not be overturned, seeming to have been placed thus in the sport of some Titan, in the primeval ages. The cave, dark as Erebus, is about fifteen rods in extent. The soil of the town is generally of a good quality, consisting principally of a clay loam, though little grain is grown, grazing taking the principal attention of the farmers.

In 1880 Lanesboro had a population of 1,286. In 1883 the town employed two male and ten female teachers in its public schools, to whom was paid an average monthly salary of $32 00 to males and $24.75 to females. There were 267 school children in the town, while the whole amount raised for school purposes was 1,600.00.

LANESBORO is a post village located in the southern part of the town, in the luxuriant valley of the Housatonic.

BERKSHIRE is a post village located in the southeastern part of the town, on the Hoosac river, and is also a station on the Pittsfield & Adams railroad, which crosses this corner of the town. Here are located the works of the Berkshire Glass Co., mentioned on page 30.

Elmwood Institute, a family school for boys, located at Lanesboro, was established here by its present principal, Rev. Alfred A. Gilbert, M. A., of whom further mention is made on another page, in 1849. This school, owing to its excellent corps of teachers, and its healthful location, has been very successful. The present corps of teachers is as follows: Rev. Alfred A. Gilbert, M. A., principal, higher mathematics and languages; Rev. Benjamin W. Atwell, professor of elocution; Alfred B. Gilbert, M. S., commercial department, English; Prof. Zelotes R. Wood, vocal music, and Miss Ella Pratt, instrumental music.

The Lanesboro Iron Works, located at Lanesboro village, were established by the Pingrees, of Salem, in 1847. In 1864 they came into the possession of J. L. Colby, of Pittsfield, the present owner. When running at their full capacity, these works give employment to 175 to 200 men, manufacturing from twelve to fifteen tons of car-wheel iron per day.

The Berkshire Glass Co., whose works are located at Berkshire village, gives employment to 150 men in the manufacture of all kinds of window glass. The factory was originally established in 1853, and came into the present company's possession in 1858.

David T. Culver's grist-mill, located on road 3, has two runs of stones, is operated by water-power, and does custom work.

William B. Dewey's grist-mill and carriage shop, located on road 4, was built by himself in 1868. The grist-mill has one run of stones and does custom grinding, while in the carriage shop Mr. Dewey builds wagons and sleighs and does a general repair business.

The Lanesboro Cheese Factory, located at road 3, was built by Joshua Newton, in 1867. It turns out about 25,000 pounds of cheese per annum.

The first actual settlers of the town were Moses Brewer, Capt. Samuel Martin and a Mr. Steales, who came in during the year 1754 or 1755. Mr. Brewer was given a bounty of £8 sterling as the first settler, and Captain Martin £7 as the second settler. A fort to protect the inhabitants against the raids of savages was soon built, but notwithstanding this, during the troubles attending the French and Indian war, these settlers were driven out by a party of Indians, and only Captain Martin returned. Near the fort two Indian chiefs were killed, and both their bodies buried. This old log fort was located about fifty rods south of the south burial ground, near the present Sidney Hubbell house. The story of the two Indians killed is related to us substantially as follows: A large party of Indians were on their way to Pittsfield, from some point northwest, intending to massacre the inhabitants of that settlement, and while passing through Williamstown were discovered by two young men, who cautiously followed them. As the band passed along the valley in Lanesboro, they halted a short distance from Berkshire village, in order to reach Pittsfield at a proper time for carrying out their bloody intentions. While there, the two young men, having learned something of these intentions, cautiously advanced, and having selected two of the Indian chiefs as a mark, decided each to shoot his man,—but separated from each other before firing, in order to deceive the enemy as to their numerical strength. The plan was carried out, and one chief was instantly killed, and the other fatally injured. The young men immediately fled in different directions, reaching Williamstown in safety. This loss of their two chiefs, the story relates, caused the Indians to change their plans and abandon the contemplated massacre.

As early as 1759 there were the following heads of families in the town: Nathaniel Williams, Samuel Tyrrell, John, Ephraim, Elijah and Miles Powell, brothers, Lieut. Andrew Squier, James Loomis, Ambrose Hall, Isaac Hill, and Charles Goodrich. Between that time and 1762, the settlement was increased by the arrival of William Bradley, James Goodrich, Thaddeus Curtis, Eben Squier, Benjamin and Joseph Farnum, Peter Curtis, Samuel Darwin, Nehemiah Bull, Samuel Warren, Moses Hale, Joseph Keeler and Beriah Dudley.

The first public meeting of the settlers was held at the old fort, May 2, 1759, "notyfication having been given out by Dea. Moses pike, in the Publick prints." This meeting, however, was adjourned immediately after its organization, as likewise were various others from time to time, for the reason, the records state, "that so few were present." Some of the records of these meetings we quote, simply as curiosities:—

"Oct. 29, 1781: At a proprietors' meeting legally warned, mad coyce of Elijah Powel moderator. Voted Mr. Levi post should be our gospil minister. Voted to give him 91 pounds settlement, and 80 pounds salary yearly and his fier wood.

These extracts, as we said before, are simply curiosities of literature, and as illustrating the manner in which the public business was transacted in those early days. In 1791 the population had increased to 2,142 souls; but at the taking of the next census, in 1800, this number had decreased 1,443, owing largely, probably, to the annexation to Cheshire, in 1793.

Among the prominent men of Lanesboro of the last century, may be mentioned Nehemiah Bull, Peter Curtis, Gideon Wheeler, Wolcott Hubbell, William Bradley, Samuel W. Wheeler and Ebenezer Buck. Among those of the town, or those who resided here for a time, may be mentioned Hon. Henry Shaw, his son, Henry W. Shaw, ("Josh Billings,") who was born here in 1818, Hon. George N. Briggs, and A. L. His son Titus was born in 1791, married Elizabeth Weed in 1813, reared ten children, and died in 1872. Eight children are still (except one) living in this town—Mrs. Mary Gardner, Mrs. Hannah Burlingham, Mrs. Louisa Shepardson, Miss Helen Wood, in Lanesboro, and Mrs. Sarah Tower, in Pittsfield, while George M., who served in the war of the Rebellion, Erastus and Leman, a present selectman, also reside in Lanesboro, as well as a number of the eleven children of George M.

Stephen Mead came from Dutchess Co., N. Y., in 1775, his native place being Stamford, Ct. He settled on the same farm which has remained in the Mead family to the present date. He died in 1794 aged fifty-one. His son Stephen, who was two years of age when brought here, died in 1865, about ninety-five years old. His son Henry was born in Lanesboro, in 1793, and lived there till his death, August 9, 1860. Five of Henry's children are still living, only one, William H., in this county, who resides at the old homstead on road 11, settled by his great-grandfather.

John Pratt moved here from Taunton, Mass., about 1780, located in the north part of the town, and died there in 1831. He had six children, one dying young. His son Micah was born in Taunton in 1778, but came here with his father and lived till his death in 1862. He had five children who lived to maturity, three now living, two, Jesse C., on the original farm, George D., on road 7, and one son, Albert M., in Bryan, Ohio.

Henry Pratt, son of Micah, was born here in 1820; was graduated from Pittsfield medical college, practiced medicine for some years in Becket, and went from there to Ohio. About 1858 he returned here, and followed his profession till his death in 1877. His only son, Edward L., is now a student of the N. Y. University medical college. His widow, Anna B., resides on road 13.

Nehemiah Talcott came here from Connecticut about 1813, locating in the northern part of the town, where he followed the business of a clothier and wool carder for about fifty years, and died there about 1848. He had six children, only two, Mrs. Emeline Tower and Wm. A. Talcott, now living, both in this town.

Marshall Shepardson was born in Adams, in 1816, came here with his parents about 1820, and lived here till his death in 1862. Four of his children are still living. Enoch Nourse was born in Groton, N. H., in 1795, and came here about 1822, locating first on a farm in the north part of the town. He married Experience Parker, of Whitley, Mass., and had nine children, four of whom are now living.

Joseph Belcher was born in Stephentown, N. Y., 1818, came here about 1843, and now resides on road 13. Two of his sons served in the late war, one of whom, Frederick, died from wounds received at the battle of Port Hudson.

and in 1849 established "Elmwood Institute," of Lanesboro, which until the present time has been solely under his supervision. This school has been patronized by scholars from nearly all parts of the United States, from Canada, and from South America, some of whom are the most prominent men of this country.

Robert B. Dickie was born in Scotland in 1839, came to Berkshire county, in 1852. He enlisted in the 2d Regt. N. Y. V., and served two years in the war of the Rebellion, and was wounded four times. He was a staff officer for Generals Berry and Carr, at different periods.

Prince Bowerman moved from Falmouth to Adams about 1800, living there till 1860, when he came to Lanesboro, where he died in 1873. He left three children, two, Joshua L. and Angeline E., living here, and Samuel W., a lawyer in Pittsfield.

William Smith came to Hancock from Rhode Island previous to 1784, locating in the eastern part of the town, and lived there till his death. He had eight children. His son, William, Jr., was born here in 1784, married in 1806. In 1807 he moved to Canada, where he lived till 1836, when he returned to Lanesboro, living in this vicinity till his death in 1864. He has eight children, five now living. William B. now resides at Lanesboro, and his two sisters, Mrs. Amy Boice and Mrs. Roxy Edwards, in Pittsfield.

Benjamin Chase came from Nantucket, being one of the first settlers of North Adams. He settled in that section known as the "Notch," and there cleared a farm and had a family of children. His son William was born there, but after his marriage he moved to Cheshire and died there about 1863. He had five children, all now living. One son, Harvey, lives on road 16, in Lanesboro, and has held most of the town offices.

Captain Adonijah Royce, a brother of Josiah and Nehemiah Royce, the latter of whom settled in Vermont, was born in Woodbury, Conn., January 10, 1744. He married his first wife, Amy Brush, at New Fairfield, Conn., about 1771, and soon after settled in Lanesboro, where he became possessed of quite a large tract of land, and reared a family of nine children, all of whom married. A second wife, Deborah Barker, whom he married in Newport, R. I., January 1, 1796, was a daughter of Peckham Barker, a hatter of Newport. Three children were born to them in Lanesboro. The eldest, Dorcas, married Harry Mead. The youngest, Amos, married, July 16, 1823, Laura Rockwell, a daughter of Josiah Rockwell, a native of Danbury, Conn., who came early to Lanesboro and married Mary Hungerford. They reared a family of fourteen children, thirteen of whom were married. Amos, the youngest child of Adonijah Royce, (who died June 23, 1807,) inherited a portion of his father's home farm, and purchased the remainder, in all about 100 acres. He and his wife, Laura Rockwell, both died in 1881. Of their eight children only two are now living, Josiah A., their second son, and William S., their youngest son. Josiah married, Oct. 23, 1852, Emily E. Heath, of Sandisfield, Mass., eldest daughter of Daniel Heath; William married her sister, Mary J. Heath, and they reared three children, two sons and a daughter. Of Josiah Royce's five children only one son, Rubert S., is now living. In 1851 Josiah Royce formed a copartnership with Charles French, and they established a job printing office in Lee, Mass., and remained together nearly eleven years. In January, 1857, they commenced the publication of a weekly paper called The Valley Gleaner, which Mr. Royce edited seventeen years. In 1866 he purchased of his father the old family homestead of 100 acres, and having sold out his printing business at Lee, he moved with his family, in 1876, to his native place in Lanesboro. He greatly improved the place, which is called "Brookside Farm," remodeled and enlarged the old farmhouse, so that he accommodates during the summer months twenty or twenty-five city boarders, many of whom are attached to this beautiful town, nestled among the Berkshire Hills.

"In the struggles of the Revolution," says J. G. Holland, "the town took a decided stand in favor of Independence, and cheerfully sustained its proportion of the burdens. Peter Curtis was chosen a delegate to the Provincial Congress, held at Cambridge, February 1, 1775. April 26, 1776, it was voted to purchase 150 pounds of powder, 600 pounds of lead, fifty guns, and 1,000 flints. The position of the minister, Mr. Collins, in relation to the Revolution, was not satisfactory to the people, and a committee was appointed to confer with him. The committee listened to his explanations, and they were reported to the town, but the town voted that they were not satisfactory. The matter was finally satisfactorily adjusted. June 7, 1776, it was voted to abide by the Continental Congress, in case it should declare the colonies independent of Great Britain. Four days afterwards, money was granted to defray charges for taking care of unfriendly persons. December 12, 1777, it was voted 'to allow a sum of money to Thomas Barnum for his horse that was killed by the goard of a bull when out in an alarm.' April 23, 1778, the new constitution was unanimously rejected, and a committee of seven appointed to amend it. June 1, 1778, it was voted that John Welch was an enemy to the country, and that he be sent to Bennington, and delivered to the proper authority. It was voted at the same time that Capt. Ebenezer Newell procure the evidence against Sol. Bunhill, then in the Northampton jail, and attend the court at his trial. Bunhill had shot two of his neighbors through the head at the Bennington fight."

The Congregational church of Lanesboro.—Previous to the organization of a church society, the people received occasional ministrations from Rev. Samuel Hart, Rev. Woodbridge Little and others. But March 28, 1764, Rev. Samuel Hopkins, of Great Barrington, and Rev. Stephen West, of Stockbridge, organized the present Congregational society, consisting of eight members—five males and three females. On the 17th of the following month the first pastor, Rev. Daniel Collins, was installed, and in 1765, the first house of worship was erected. This building did service until 1828, when the present brick edifice was erected, which is now valued at about $5,000.00.

The society now has twenty-seven members, with Rev. William F. Avery, pastor.

St. Luke's Episcopal church, located at Lanesboro, was organized by Rev. Samuel Andrews, of Wallingford, Conn., in October, 1767. The first rector was Rev. Gideon Bostwick, who had charge of the church, in connection with St. James church in Great Barrington, from 1770 until his death, in June, 1793. Their first church building was a wood structure, erected in 1785. In 1836 it was superseded by the present gothic building of stone, which will comfortably seat 400 persons, and is valued, including grounds, at $5,000.00. The society now has fifty-eight members, with Rev. Charles J. Palmer, rector.

The Baptist church of Lanesboro, located at Lanesboro village, was organized by Rev. Augustus Beach, the first pastor, and neighboring ministers, February 13, 1818. For some years before a church building was erected, which was not until 1828, meetings were held in the town hall and private houses; but in 1828 the town hall was destroyed by fire, and within a few days thereafter a meeting was called to consider the question of building a church edifice. The result of this meeting was that Asahel Jordan donated the land, Bushrod Buck the brick, and Abial Platt and Henry Mead the marble for erecting the present church. The house was finished in 1828, and the society took possession of their new building free of debt. The original, or charter members of the society, twelve in number, were as follows: Deacon, Joel Redway, Laura Redway, Joel Redway, Jr., Dr. Wm. H. Tyler, Celia Tyler, Augustus Beach, Linus B. Miner, Polly Reynolds, Deborah Green, Sibyl Hill, Eunice Smith and Maria Sunderland. Gov. George N. Briggs, then a young lawyer here, was an earnest supporter of the church. Henry Shaw (Josh Billings) married a daughter of Levi Bradford, a deacon of the society. An earnest work of grace, soon after the church building was erected, resulted in many additions to the society, and seventy-five families were soon represented among its earnest supporters. Death and migration, however, has greatly reduced the interest, so that the society now numbers only seventy members, the pulpit being supplied by neighboring pastors.

LEE, a very irregularly outlined town, lies just south of the central part of the county, in lat. $42^{\circ} 17'$, and long. $3^{\circ} 47'$, bounded northeast by Washington, east by Becket, south by Tyringham and Great Barrington, and west and north by Stockbridge and Lenox. The line on the west, the dividing line between Lee and Stockbridge, is S. $7^{\circ} 30'$ W. about 1,550 rods. Great Barrington line on the south is E. 7° S. 757 rods. Tyringham line on the southwest corner has one re-entrant angle, and running from the corner made with Great Barrington, extends N. 37° E. 628 rods, to Deerhorn Corner, where it turns and extends E. 2° S. 1,072 rods. At this southeast point of the township it forms a corner with the Becket line, which runs N. $8\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ W. 376 rods. Here is met the Washington town line, which runs N. 29° W. 580 rods, then makes a sharp turn on line of lot No. 63 of the old township, S. 63° W. 246 rods, then takes the same course as first given, N. 29° W. 1,236 rods, to the uppermost corner of the town, on the east bank of the Housatonic river. From this it follows down the line of the river 1,106 rods, then across the river, enclosing a little strip between the river and a line running S. 8° W. 162 rods. Then it crosses the river again, and runs in general course W. $6\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ N. 563 rods. Here the line makes a double jog like two steps downward N. 6° E. $48\frac{1}{2}$ rods, S. $85\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ E. 52 rods, N. 10° W. $34\frac{3}{4}$ rods, S. 84° E. 122 rods, till it strikes the Stockbridge line.

The territory thus inclosed as a township was made up from portions of five different grants of land, viz. : Hopland, Watson's, Williams's, Laraby's and Glassworks. The first of these extended nearly across the southern portion of the town, including what is now six school districts—the two at South Lee, the one near the Charles Hinckley homestead, the two in Water street, and the one at East Lee. "In or about 1770," says Charles J. Taylor in his History of Great Barrington, "William Ingersoll, afterwards a leading citizen of Lee, removed from the central part of Great Barrington to the Hoplands. In February, 1770, the proprietors of the Upper Township authorized the sale of the school land in the Hoplands for the benefit of its inhabitants, and in the same year, by a vote of this town, those inhabitants were excused from the payment of ministerial, school and highway rates. The first roads in the Hoplands were established by this town in 1771, and six years later—1777—thirty persons, inhabitants of that section, were paying poll taxes in Great Barrington. But the Hoplands, isolated and remote from the central part of the town, were by nature separated from it, and at the incorporation of Lee in 1777, were made a part of that town without opposition from Great Barrington. The name of this tract was derived from the great quantity of wild hops which formerly grew upon the banks of the river which flows down from Tyringham. William Ingersoll owned about one-quarter of the tract, making a good sized farm for himself and each of his seven sons.

Watson's grant comprised a large tract originally purchased by Robert Watson, of Sheffield, (assisted by a Tory lawyer of Great Barrington, named Williams,) of the Indians in 1757, which constitutes to-day the town of Washington, and parts of the towns of Middlefield, Hinsdale, Lenox and Lee. This land, before it became incorporated into the several townships with which it is now connected, passed through a number of hands, and was known, or parts of it at least, by the successive names of Watson town, Greenock, Hartwood, and Mount Ephraim.

The Williams grant was a tract of land located in what is now the north-western corner of the town, embracing about 4,000 acres. It was granted to Col. Ephraim Williams, of Stockbridge, and six associates, January 21, 1740.

Col. Williams was the first justice appointed from among the citizens of what is now Berkshire county, in 1741, and was the father of Col. Ephraim, the founder of Williams college (see sketch on page 33).

Larabee's grant was made to John Larabee, who then had command of the single fort "Castle Williams," which was thought to afford sufficient protection to the harbor of Boston. Upon his memorial, which sets forth seventeen years of especial services, a large and dependent family, a small and inadequate compensation, the legislature, in June, 1739, voted to grant him $$175$ and 500 acres of unappropriated land of the Province. This grant, located east of the Williams grant, and duly reported to the legislature, was confirmed to Lieut. Larabee and his heirs and assigns. He seems to have been a faithful officer, for in 1762, the year following his death, a grant of $$50$ was made to his heirs, by the general court, in testimony of his faithful services.

The Glass Works grant covered the center of the town—the present village—and was made in 1754, by the general court, to John Franklin and his associates. It was designated "A Grant of Money to Encourage the Making of Potash;" and consisted of 1,000 acres of land. Certain parties seem to have been engaged at Braintree, now Quincy, in the attempt to manufacture "potash, cider, glass and cloth," in which they were pecuniarily unfortunate, and after various attempts to acquire, first monopolies and then indemnities, they seem to have obtained, in 1757, an addition to the former Glass Works grant, assistance "by way of lottery," which the general court authorized them to enjoy, and voted them the use of the Hall of Representatives, as a convenient place in which to "draw" it.

In 1777 the inhabitants of these grants and parts of grants, numbering probably, 250 souls, petitioned the general court for a charter of incorporation, and October 21st of that year the tract became an incorporated township, under the name of Lee, in honor of General Charles Lee, who was at that time a popular commander in the American army, but subsequently fell into disrepute, having proved himself to be only an adventurer of little ability. He was born in Devonhall, Cheshire, England, in 1731, and died at Philadelphia, Pa., October 2, 1782. At one time he was taken prisoner by the British and was recovered by exchange for General Prescott, in May, 1778. General Prescott was captured through stratagem, for the purpose of effecting this very exchange, an interesting sketch of which event we print on page 109.

Of the topographical features of the town Rev. Dr. Hyde wrote as follows: "The town is six miles in length and five in breadth, and presents a very diversified appearance. It forms a part of the intervalle which lies between the Taconic and Green mountain ranges. The Green mountain range, which rises to a moderate elevation, runs partly within the eastern limits of the town, presenting a very picturesque appearance. These mountains are for the most part of gentle acclivity, and are cultivated in some places quite to their summits. From the base of these mountains, the surface is rather uneven, occasionally rising into hills of considerable height, but generally descending until it reaches the plain upon the banks of the Housatonic." West of this river the land is everywhere undulating in its appearance, inclining towards the south. Beartown mountain is a large and grand pile of hills on the southeast of Stockbridge, northeast of Great Barrington, forming the northwest part of Tyringham and southwest part of Lee. Deerhorn Corner, the name given the point at the angle of the two town lines, is so called from the fact that a deer's horn was fastened here to mark the spot. Washington mountain, chiefly in Washington, extends south to Lee, and forms the eastern boundary of the Housatonic valley for several miles. East mountain extends into and from Becket on the east side of the town. The Housatonic river divides the town into two nearly equal parts. Its course is southerly when it first enters the town; but before reaching South Lee it turns sharply to the west. At this point it is 831 feet above tide water at Derby, Conn. In its passage through the town, the Housatonic receives the waters of Laurel lake, formerly called Scott's pond. The outlet of this lake empties into the river at the north end of the village. Two streams come down from Washington mountain and empty into the Housatonic near Bradley street. Through Cape street flows the outlet of Greenwater pond, in Becket, which unites in Water street with the outlet of Lake May, and Long pond, two natural reservoirs artificially increased, lying partly in Lee and partly in Tyringham. These two streams, both before and after their union, furnish power for numerous mills. Hop brook flows down from Tyringham, and was so named from the abundance of wild hops in the low land through which it flowed. Smaller streams generally bear the name of the owners of the land through which they flow, with every change of owners changing also their names.

Geologically, the mountains on the east of the town are of mica-slate. Two or three eminences of quartz rock in the valley project their ragged elevations. "Fern Cliff" has quartz rock at the base, and gneiss on the summit, in which are frequent crystals of iron pyrites. In the slaty rocks, above the quartz, are numerous tourmaline crystals; but limestone is the principal rock to be found rising from the lowland. If it will not take a polish it is not fit for use as marble, nor is it fit for cutting if it contains fibrous and bladed crystals of tremolite, such as are found southwest of Gross's quarry. In Hitchcock's Geology of Massachusetts there is a detailed description of the geological strata of the county, and a figure is given, illustrating Dr. Hitchcock's theory of the manner in which the strata have been distorted between the Hudson and the Connecticut by upheavals. Erosion next removed the softer parts and gave the present topographical outline. In Lytell's Antiquity of Man, is a sketch of the course of erratic boulders traced from Caanan, N. Y., across the range of hills southeast to the Housatonic valley. Limestone is readily obtained in various parts of the town. Much that is not valuable as building material is suitable for making lime, and the production of lime has ever been one of the industries of the town. In former times the limestone was burned in temporary kilns, and when a kiln was burned the fire was permitted to go out. Remains of these old kilns are found in all parts of the town, and as no lime is known to have been exported in early times, it is supposed that lime was burned as it was wanted by an individual or a neighborhood. About the year 1840, William L. Culver began burning lime in a patent self-feeding kiln, the fire of which is kept burning for months, the limestone being put in at the top of a chimney lined with fire-brick, and the lime taken out at the bottom as fast as it is burned. Lee lime has quite a reputation, and finds its principal market in this and the neighboring towns, much of it being used for bleaching rags in the manufacture of paper.

"Marble is the most valuable mineral in Lee as yet discovered. The supply is inexhaustible. It is easy of access, and for a generation, at least, it will be easily quarried, as some of this marble lies 120 feet above the river. The marble is of a superior quality. Prof. Hitchcock says that it is 'a pure crystalline double carbonate of magnesia and lime.' It is therefore dolomite marble, forty-eight per cent. carbonate of lime and forty-nine per cent. carbonate of magnesia. Much of it is pure white and is susceptible of a very fine polish. It will also work a perfectly square arris. This renders it a desirable material for chimney pieces, furniture, etc. Frost and heat produce little change in size and weight. It will sustain a pressure of 26,000 pounds to the square inch, while Italian marble crushes at 13,000 pounds, and most of the American marble at 12,000 pounds. By some of the severest tests to which marble can be put, by the chemist and architect, Lee marble was decided to be the best for building material, hence a congressional committee decided that this should be used for the enlargement of the capitol at Washington." Among the mineralogical specimens to be obtained may be mentioned marl, peat, micaceous limestone, mica, quartz, gray limestone, augite, bladed tremolite, radiated actinolite, dolomite and shere.

In 1880 Lee had a population of 3,939. In 1883 the town employed five male and twenty female teachers in its public schools, at an average monthly salary of $80.00 for males and $28.30 for females. There were 760 school children in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $7,650.00.

LEE is a bright, stirring, handsome post villiage located nearly in the center of the town on the Housatonic R. R. It has many handsome residences and fine business blocks lining its broad, neat, streets, forming, with its charming environs, a locality whose varied attractions are seldom surpassed. Utility, too, is blended with these charms, for here the Housatonic affords power that turns many a busy wheel in shop, factory and mill. The Housatonic has peculiar facilities here for manufacturing purposes. Goose pond, lying upon the Tyringham mountains, some 600 feet above the river, affords a natural reservoir, capable of holding in reserve sufficient water to run the mills four months, should a time of drouth render it necessary. The town is celebrated for its immense paper manufacturing industry. The history of this manufacture has lately been written up by Hon. Byron Weston of Dalton, from whom we quote as follows :—

“The manufacture of paper in the town of Lee began in the year 1806, in which year Samuel Church moved into the town from Connecticut, and built a ‘two-vat mill’ on the site now covered by one of the Hulbert Paper Company’s buildings in South Lee. Such a mill made an average of ten reams of paper per day, of course making it by hand. The process, in brief, was, to beat the rags to a pulp in engines similar to those used now ; this pulp was gathered, while mixed with water, upon sieves or wire-covered frames, one sheet to a frame, and on the frames it was dried sufficiently to be handled, then finished by pressing between hot metal plates and press paper boards. There were no calendars in use to give the paper the smooth, beautiful finish now desired. Some idea of the process made in producing quantity at the mills may be had from the fact that a “four-vat mill” of the hand era would produce about 400 pounds of paper per day. A modern four-engine mill, with the same number of employees as worked in the four-vat mill, but with modern machinery, will make 2,000 pounds of very much better goods. The price of the old hand-made paper was from forty to fifty cents a pound ; the price of our modern machine-made paper is from fifteen to twenty-five cents. Ten thousand dollars was a large capital for a four-vat hand mill ; for a modern four-engine mill forty thousand dollars is sometimes too limited a sum.

“The first North Lee mill, and the third built in the county, was put up by Luman Church, in 1808, on ground covered now by the Smith Paper Company’s ‘Eagle Mill.’ The Churches seem to have been not only pioneers in paper making, but to have been energetic ones. In 1821 Luman Church built the ‘Forest Mill’ now Harrison Garfield’s, and in 1831 the ‘Waverly Mill’ of the firm of Chaffee & Hamblin. The Churches’ connected with the business closed, however, before its prosperity and growth began, but their enterprise and faith in it gave Lee the impetus which resulted in making that town, for many years, the most important in the paper trade in this country. In 1840, it is said, one-fifth of all the paper made in the United States was manufactured at Lee.

“In 1822 John Ames, of Springfield, patented the cylinder machine which gathered the pulp on a revolving wire cylinder, taking the place of the old hand-frame or wire sieve and greatly increasing the productive capacity of the mills. Other improvements about this time, when there were three mills in Lee, were devised. The rags for the hand mills were picked up about the country by peddlers, who traded paper, pens, school books, etc., with the farmers’ wives for their rags. The process of bleaching, as now practiced was unknown. The rags were sorted and the different colors separated. Blue was supposed to be a color that could not be bleached out, and blue rags were sold to some mills where ‘tobacco paper’ was made. The tobacconists still stick to their color, but it need not be inferred that their wrapping is now, as it then was, all made from blue rags. The beating of the rags to a pulp gave rise to the story of the origin of 'foolscap,' and it was repeated seriously to the writer by an old paper maker in Lee. It was related that a half-witted youth sat upon a rock on the top of which was a shallow depression containing some water. Into this puddle the boy dropped his cap, and, with a stone, foolishly and idly pounded his linen turban into pulp. The sun dried the 'stuff,' or fiber, which had spread itself through the water upon the bottom of the puddle, and lo! it was lifted out a sheet of paper—foolscap in fact.

"In 1826, when the improvements just spoken of became accessible, another mill building era began in Lee. Messrs. Walter, Winthrop and Cutler Laffin built in that year a mill on the site of the Smith Paper Company's present 'Housatonic Mill.' It was the first in the town in which paper was made by machinery, and as the building was 100 feet long, it was considered a marvel in the lavish use of capital. The Laffins also built a mill on the Housatonic at the present location of the Columbia Mill, owned by the Smith Paper Company, and they continued prosperously in the business for ten years. During this decade, Stephen Thatcher, who recently died at Saratoga, nearly one hundred years old, built the mill now obliterated, but for years run by Mr. John Bottomley. Mr. Thatcher and the Laffins are remembered in the paper trade as being connected with the 'Navarino Excitement,' which was one of the most successful speculations in the history of the business. Mr. Thatcher began making a thick, straw-colored paper which was pressed between plates and stamped so as to resemble the present Leghorn hat material. It was sold for bonnet and hat making, and became as 'fashionable' and as universally worn as paper collars were a few years ago. It is said bonnets nicely made from this paper sold as high as five dollars each. The Laffins with their greater facilities, soon went into the speculation, giving their paper the 'Leghorn appearance' by the quicker process of running it between engraved rollers. For a time the business was very prosperous, but it had a rather short life. Perhaps a thousand Navarino bonnets were caught out at a showery picnic and the mishap ruined the fashion. Belles and beaux, matrons and maidens, who had been proud of their 'Leghorn hats,' an expensive luxury in those days, found, when the rain had wilted them and spoiled the straw-like impression, that they had been wearing only a smart Yankee's paper imitation of the costly genuine article

"The 'Bottomley Mill,' so-called, passed to its ashes through more hands than any other mill in Lee. Built in 1833 by Thatcher & Son, it became Thatcher & Ingersoll's in 1840; in 1851 it was bought by Harrison Smith and David S. May. They ran it until 1856, when May retired from the firm. In 1857 Tanner & Perkins took the mill. Then it became Toole & Bottomley's. Still later Mr. Bottomley owned it alone, and it was burned while under lease to Ferry & Wrinkle.

"The 'Pleasant Valley Mill,' just north of Lenox Furnace was built in 1835, by Leonard Church, Joseph Bassett and Thomas Sedgwick, who made printing paper for several years. Messrs. Church & Bassett sold out to Sabin & Cone, and afterwards the firm became Sedgwick & Cone. Robins & Crosby were the next owners, and following them Gibbs, Dean & Osborn were proprietors until 1857. The mill was idle for many years, or until the Smith Paper Company bought it.

“The ‘Washington Mill,’ now Harrison Garfield’s, on Water street, in Lee, was built by Foote & Bosworth in 1835. While the mill was building, Bosworth was killed by the overturning of a load of wood upon him. Joseph B. Allen, of Newton, and Leander Backus, of Lee, took up the enterprise, and ran the mill until it was sold to Benton & Garfield in 1849.

“The first mill on the Lake May stream was built in 1837, by Jared Ingersoll and Sylvester S. May. It was a one-engine mill and produced straw paper. It was burned in 1839. In 1840 Mr. E. S. May bought Mr. Ingersoll’s interest and the mill was rebuilt with two engines, running on straw paper until 1845. They then built further up the stream their middle mill, containing two engines, also running on straw paper until 1846, when it was run on wall papers. In 1847 both mills began to produce writing papers. In 1852 Benjamin Dean was added to the firm, and the ‘upper’ four-engine mill was built and run upon fine papers. Dean remained with the firm until 1854, when he retired and the late Samuel S. Rogers entered the partnership. Dean was a somewhat remarkable character. He recently died in Michigan. During the latter years of his life in Lee, his peculiarities made him a marked citizen. He had a massive head, long, flowing grey hair and whiskers, and spent his leisure hours in writing ‘poetry,’ as he called it, satirizing the bar and pulpit. He became a Free thinker and Spiritualist and was always ready for an argument. Some one said to him one day, ‘You can find a rhyme for almost any word, but it would puzzle you to concoct a rhyme for ‘Timbuctoo.’ Instantly Dean replied:—

“ ‘The missionary went to Timbuctoo
Where savages ate him and his hymn book too.’

“In 1877 the firm of May & Rogers was dissolved by the retiring of Mr. Rogers, who took the upper mill, since burned and not rebuilt. The firm of E. & S. May is the oldest active business paper manufacturing firm in the county.

“In 1838 John Baker and George Wilson built a mill on the Cape street or Greenwater stream. They ran it a short time, and it then passed into the hands of Ira VanBergen, subsequently it was owned by Platner & Smith, later by George West, who owned it when it was burned, and it has not been rebuilt. The only other paper mill ever located on this stream was built in 1844 by Sturges & Costar. They ran it three years and it was then bought by Orton Heath, who operated it a number of years and then sold it to Baird & Linn; afterwards Mr. Baird owned it alone and sold it to Patrick Owen, who ran a brief and disastrous career. The mill is idle, comparatively worthless, and is falling into ruin.

"In 1846 the mill on the Lake May stream known as the 'Upper Forest mill,' was built by Benton & Garfield. Benton & Baird (C. C. Benton & Hon. P. C. Baird) next owned it, and later Mr. Baird bought his partners interest. It was burned but rebuilt by Mr. Baird, and is now owned by him. In 1823 Bradford Couch built a mill on the Lake May stream, and it was run by him and by Couch & Clark until bought by Mr. Baird, and it is now run on collar paper. Mr. Baird was among the first to begin manufacturing paper collars, and he and his brother, George K. Baird, now a druggist, made immense numbers of them before they finally abandoned the business, Hon. P. C. Baird's factory alone sometimes turning out 100,000 collars in a day.

"In 1855 Northup & Eldridge built a mill on the site of the mill recently run by Gilmor & Sparks, the mill nearest Lake May. Northup sold out to Eldridge and later the mill passed into the hands of Tanner & Perkins, machinists. The next proprietors were Blauvelt & Gilmor; subsequently Mr. Gilmor had it alone. In this mill was made paper twine during the high price of cotton in war times. It was twisted from strips of manila paper and it was strong enough for light purposes, unless it happened to meet the supposed fate of the Navarino bonnets by getting wet. This site has been an unfortunate one, as three mills have been burned upon it. The present mill was built in 1878.

'The 'Greenwood Mill,' now owned by Benton Brothers (J. F. and C. C.), was built by Benton & Garfield in 1854. Its product is about 1,000 pounds of fine paper per day. This old firm of Benton & Garfield, organized in 1836, and continued in industry and good works until dissolved by the death of Mr. Benton in 1867, deserves more than a passing notice for its great success. Beginning with a trifling capital in money, but rich in energy, it made a great reputation and fortune. In the beginning the members of the firm and their wives worked cheerfully and heartily in the mill. When Mr. Benton died, his share of the estate amounted to a handsome fortune. Hon. Harrison Garfield is president of the Lee National Bank, has served his State in both branches of the legislature, and is the oldest active business paper maker in the county.

"In 1855 Linn & Dean built on the Lake May stream a small mill for making bank-note paper by hand. It was afterwards run by Elizur Smith and Mr. Linn; but it is now owned by Mr. Baird, who uses it in connection with his other mills. In 1862, while Mr. Linn was running the mill, it was discovered that he was making bank-note paper with the initials "C. S. A." in water marks upon it. A United States marshal suspected that the initials meant 'Confederate States of America,' a concern with which we were having some difficulty at the time, and the officer took Mr. Linn to Boston to answer for the supposed aid and comfort he was giving the enemy in making paper for them upon which to print their money. Mr. Linn was able to show that he received the order for the goods from a New York house, who also furnished him the mold or machine which made the initials water marked in the paper, and that he knew nothing about the purpose for which the paper was to be used. He was acquitted. I believe the New York firm set up that their purpose was a patriotic one, as they intended to counterfeit the Confederate money and ruin the credit of the concern by flooding their own territory with worthless notes. The patriotism may not be very apparent, but such was the excuse made. Mr. Linn is now living in New Jersey.

“The Smith Paper Company operates the ‘Valley,’ ‘Columbia,’ ‘Eagle’ and ‘Housatonic’ Mills. Sketches of all of these have been given in what I have read, except the ‘Columbia.’ This was originally built by the Lafins in 1826. Subsequently it was operated by Phelps & Field, the former the late George H. Phelps, and the latter Matthew Field, son of Dr. D. D. Field, author of a history of Berkshire county, and long a settled minister in Stockbridge. This Lee paper maker was a brother of Cyrus W., David Dudley, Stephen J., and Henry M. Field, and Cyrus W. worked in his youth in this mill for his brother Matthew. Cyrus W. was afterward in the paper business in New York, and dealt extensively with the Berkshire paper makers. He is remembered as very bright in the trades that were made of the products of the mills for the raw material. He had a habit of dropping his eyelids or closing his eyes during his bargaining, and if one eye only closed, the prospects were that the paper maker would ‘fare pretty well’ as they used to say, but if Cyrus closed both eyes, ‘then look out for him.’ He would get the best of the bargain. In 1863 this mill was bought by Mr. Smith, improved, and its capacity increased, and run until September 2, 1865, when it was burned. On the night of the fire Mr. Smith, just married, was receiving his friends, and the conflagration was made particularly memorable by that fact. News of the fire was brought to him in the midst of the festivities, but he quietly bade the feast go on. The next morning he was seen on the pile of ruins giving orders for clearing up the rubbish so that rebuilding could commence. The Smith Paper Company is composed of Elizur, Wellington, and DeWitt S. Smith, the two latter nephews of the former. The firm is the successor to Platner & Smith, which was formed in 1835 and was at one time during its continuance the largest producers of writing paper in the country, if not in the world. Besides the mills owned by them in Lee village, they had also the mill built by Baker & Wilson, in East Lee, in 1838, and rented for a time the ‘Defiance Mill,’ in Dalton. Mr. Smith was also interested in a mill at Russell, with his brother, John R. Smith, and Cyrus W. Field & Co., of New York, and they have owned the ‘Turkey Mill,’ at Tyringham. The fine paper of Platner & Smith was known all over the United States, and the firm was a power in the business. It was during the time when an English or French label was demanded on nearly everything for the best American use, and Platner & Smith made at Lee the best ‘imported’ paper on the market. The company now conducting the business makes only book, news and manila wrapping paper. They own every water privilege on the Housatonic river between Lee and Pittsfield, about ten miles. They have thirty rag engines in their mills, of from seven hundred to eight hundred pounds capacity each. They use for power eleven steam engines and twenty-seven water wheels, and their product per week is over one hundred tons. Their largest week's production was one hundred and thirty-nine tons. In connection with their mills they have two factories at Lenox Furnace for making wood pulp, and at Lee a large and thoroughly equipped machine shop."

Paper Mills of South Lee.—"The first mill built in Lee, by Mr. Church, was the second to be built in the county, the first being erected at Dalton in 1801. The Lee mill was sold by Mr. Church to the firm of Brown & Curtis, and in 1822 it was sold again to Messrs. Owen & Hulbert. As the means of the latter firm increased they enterprisingly increased their business, buying of Billings Brown his grist-mill, which they converted into a paper mill, and they purchased other mill-sites and lands for future use. They also bought the 'forge,' on the east side of the river, so as to control the entire water-power of the vicinity, and on that site erected a flouring-mill, which site is now covered by the Hulbert Paper Company's new mill. Owen & Hulbert put in a cylinder machine in 1833, a calender in 1834, and ruling machines in 1836, showing an early adoption of all improvements in their business. This firm also built the mill in Housatonic now owned by the Owen Paper Company. In 1860 the firm dissolved, Mr. Hulbert retaining the property at South Lee, and Mr. Owen taking that at Housatonic, and each associated with him a son in the business. The new firms, as stated already, took new names,—at Housatonic, the Owen Paper Company; at South Lee, the Hulbert Paper Company. The founders, Mr. Hulbert and Mr. Owen, were both born in 1794, the former in Wethersfield, and the latter in Windsor, Conn. They won a grand reputation as paper manufacturers, and as honorable, sterling citizens of their town. The water mark and stamp of "O. & H." was always a guarantee of good goods. Mr. Hulbert, devoted to his occupation, cared little or nothing for public life, his chief delights being his family and his business. He died in 1861. Mr. Owen was more pleased with public honors, and deserved them. He was a major of militia, served in both branches of the legislature and in the governor's council. He died in 1870. The two sons of Mr. Hulbert, Thomas O. and Henry C., are his successors to the name and business of the Hulbert Paper Company. Charles H. Plumb was a stockholder in this company in 1865, and remained till 1868. He is now the keeper of the old and popular hotel at Stockbridge, and a prince of good fellows. Under their management it has prospered and greatly increased. In 1872 they built one of the largest and best mills in the country. It is 373 feet long, 50 feet wide, and, including the basement and attic, four stories high. The whole product of their mills is 10,000 pounds of fine writing paper per day.

The Lee National Bank was incorporated in 1835, and June 10th of that year George Hull, of Sandisfield, was chosen president, and July 31st John Furber cashier. The capital stock was $50,000.00, which was increased at various times until it amounted to $300,000.00. In 1864 this was reduced to $210,000.00, its present capital. After four years service, Mr. Hull resigned, and since then the following presidents have served: William A. Phelps, elected in 1839; Walter Laffin, 1841; Leonard Church, 1844; Thomas Sedgwick, 1856; Harrison Garfield, 1862. The cashiers have been, after Mr. Furber, Thomas Green, chosen in 1840; Edmund D. Chapin, 1848; Edward A. Bliss, 1850; John M. Howk, 1862; John L. Kilbon, 1868; The bank is now in a prosperous condition, its officers, aside from those mentioned, being P. C. Baird, vice-president, and Frank Savage, teller.

The Lee Savings Bank was chartered March 5, 1852, and commenced business in June following. Harrison Garfield has been its president, with the exception of the first year, when William Porter was chosen. The cashiers of the national bank have served as treasurers of the savings bank. The institution now has in its charge an aggregate deposit of $570,000.00.

EAST LEE a post village located about two miles southeast of Lee village, on the Green Water river, is another bright, busy manufacturing community, where many tons of paper are made each year. Although a postoffice was established here in 1848, it was abandoned for a time, and revived again in the summer of 1884.

SOUTH LEE, is post village and station on the Housatonic R. R., strung along the Housatonic river in the southwestern part of the town.

Lee Steam Marble Works, located on road 33, were established previous to 1850, by Rice, Baird & Heebner, who opened a quarry on the Culver farm. They furnished marble for the capital extension at Washington, during the years 1852 to 1865, furnishing therefor 491,000 feet. In 1867 F. S. Gross & Bro. succeeded to the business. This firm now employs seventy-five men, is supplied with all modern improvements for quarrying, and is now furnishing marble for public buildings at Philadelphia, Pa.

East Lee Flock and Shoddy Mill, on Green Water river, was formerly a cotton mill operated by Beach & Royce. The present proprietor, George T. Bostwick rebuilt and enlarged the mill in 1883, so that it is now a fine stone structure 70 x 40 feet, and five stories in height. Mr. Bostwick is running the mill in the manufacture of flocks and shoddy.

The East Lee Machine Shops, engaged in the manufacture of paper-making machinery, was originally established by Beach & Royce. In 1840 it was purchased by Edward P. Tanner, the present manager of the concern, with his son, J. Albert, agent. The shop gives employment to thirty hands.

Theron L. Foot's grist and flouring mill, located at East Lee, have the capacity for grinding 500 bushels of grain per week.

John Dowd's machine shop, located on road 26, was established in 1850. He employs six men in the manufacture of paper-engine roll-bars, bed-plates, trimming knives, rag cutter knives, etc.

Rufus L. Thayer's saw and cider-mill, located on Reservoir Pond brook, has the capacity for manufacturing 100,000 feet of lumber and 800 barrels of cider per year.

The first settler in the town was Isaac Davis, who, in 1760, located in the southern part of the town, on the banks of Hop brook, where John P. French now lives. He died at Chenango in 1801. During the ten years from 1760 to 1770, only thirteen families came into the town, among whom were Reuben Pixley, John Coffey, Hope Davis, Aaron Benedict, George Parker, William Chanter, a Mr. Atkins, Lemuel Crocker, Asahel Dodge and Samuel Stanley. They lived in small log houses, mostly located upon the mountain sides. No roads had been made. Marked trees served to mark the pathway through the forest, and a fallen tree across the river the only bridge. In 1770 John Winnegar, of German origin, built the first grist-mill, at "Crowe Hollow." His log house, the eleventh erected in the town, was built against a perpendicular rock, which served as the back of the house and of the chimney. The latter was so constructed that the wood cut from the hill in the rear of the house could be hauled to the top of the rock and thrown down the chimney into the fire-place. About 1775 Mr. Winnegar built another grist-mill, on Cape street, where John McLaughlin's works are now located. He also built the dwelling which stands in front of them, it being now the oldest house in the town. Mr. Winnegar, while hunting deer with an Indian, got lost upon the mountain and wandered about for three days without food or fire, freezing his feet so badly that it rendered him a cripple for life.

During the years between 1770 and 1780, many valued citizens came into the town, among whom were Nathaniel and Cornelius Bassett, Jesse Gifford, Jesse Bradley, William Ingersoll, Timothy Thatcher, Oliver and Prince West, Arthur Perry, Samuel Stanley, Amos Porter, Josiah Yale, Ebenezer Jenkins, Nathan Dillingham, Job Hamblin and others. From that time until 1791 the population increased to 1,170 souls.

"Cape street" was the name given to the eastern part of the town, because many of its settlers came from Cape Cod. This section, with its narrow valley and its convenient hill-sides for the homes of the early settlers, was at first the most populous part of the town, and there it was proposed to build the first meeting-house; but Cornelius Bassett and Nathan Dillingham, in 1778, built the "Red Lion" tavern on what is now the Pease lot, which was occupied as a hotel till 1833, and remained as a landmark and memento of earlier days for some years after the more modern hostelry, built where the Memorial Hall now stands, took its place as the hotel. It was the first two-story house built in Lee, and it is said that the first store, to which Job Hamblin brought from Boston by a forty days' journey, a load of salt, was kept in its buttery. This imposing and important establishment had, of course, a centralizing tendency, and aided in drawing the population and the "meeting-house" to the present center.

The first town meeting was held at Peter Wilcox's homestead, December 22, 1777. It is supposed that the population was then about 200. In 1780 the meeting was adjourned "for eight minutes, to meet in Peter Wilcox's barn," indicating probably an increase of population which made the one room of the log house inconveniently small. The next place of meeting was at Major Dillingham's tavern, and after that, at the meeting-house for many years. Notices of town meetings were posted on the whipping-post, near the meeting-house, and at the two grist-mills. Upon the site of Wilcox's dwelling now stands the house since occupied by Mrs. Smith, mother of Elizur. At this first meeting the following officers were chosen: William Ingersoll, moderator; Prince West, town clerk; William Ingersoll, Jesse Bradley, Oliver West, Amos Porter and Prince West, selectmen; William Ingersoll, treasurer; Reuben Pixley and James Penoyer, constables; Daniel Church, Job Hamblin, John Nye and William Ingersoll, highway surveyors; Abijah Tomlinson and Samuel Stanley, tythingmen; Samuel Stanley, leather sealer; William Ingersoll, Jesse Bradley and Oliver West, committee of correspondence. The first lawyer was Alvan Coe, a native of Granville, who settled here in 1807. Gideon Thompson, a native of Goshen, Conn., was the first physician. Jedediah Crocker was the first postmaster in Lee, in 1803, and kept his office at his tavern in Cape street. The postoffice was first opened at East Lee, in 1848, L. S. Sturgess being the first postmaster. At South Lee a postoffice was established in 1826, and Thomas Hulbert was postmaster. Among the natives of Lee who have been graduated from college, are the following: Solomon Foote, M. D., Rev. Cyrus Yale, B. Hinckley, M. D., William Dillingham, Charles Dillingham, John D. Crocker, Lawrence Warner, Issac Howk, Jonathan Foote, 3d, Rev. Alvan Hyde, Joseph Hyde, William Hyde, Alexander Hyde, Solomon Foote, Jr., Rev. Barnabas Phinney, Rev. Noah Sheldon, Rev. William Bradley, Rev. Thomas Scott Bradley, Rev. Elisha P. Ingersoll, Elisha Bassett, Rev. Edward Taylor, Rev. William Porter, Rev. Charles B. Ball, Addison H. Laffin, Rev. Lavius Hyde, Asahel Foote and Rev. Stephen Peel.

The part taken by Lee in the wars, in Shays Rebellion, and its newspaper history have already been given in the county chapter.

Rev. Alvin Hyde, D. D., came to Lee early, and was their pastor for forty years, being for many years the only minister in the town. He made it a practice to visit each school four times annually. The poor in him found a generous friend. He buried the original settlers and many of their children, and married the fathers and mothers of Lee, their children and grandchildren during a period of forty years. He knew every person in town, and could call them, even the children, by name.

Jonathan Foote, grandson of Nathan, who was granted a tract of land in Connecticut by Charles II, for saving his life from the enemy, by assisting him to hide in a hollow oak, came to Lee about 1770, and took up a large tract of land. His son, Captain Alvin Foote, was born on the homestead in the year the town was incorporated.

Job Child immigrated to Lee in 1791. He married Rhoda Hatch, and had born to him a daughter, Temperance, and one son, Joseph H. Joseph, born in 1803, was married to Electa Hulet, rearing one son and two daughters, namely, Lucinda E., Almira and William D., the later residing upon the old homestead, on road 11. Lucinda E. married J. G. Davenport, and has long resided in California.

Stephen Bradley, son of Elisha Bradley, of Stockbridge, Mass., was born in 1774, and immigrated to Lee in 1799, having married Lydia Cork four years previous. Of his six sons and two daughters, one son, Ebenezer, born in 1796, is now residing in Illinois. Another son, Stephen, who was born in Lee in 1801, married Hannah Austin, of Becket, rearing two sons and four daughters. Of these, John E. is principal of the high-school at Albany, N. Y., and Edwin A. married Aggie Clark, of this town, and resides with his father on the old homestead on Bradley Hill. He is the father of three sons.

Thomas Sturges came with his brother William, to Lee, from Cape Cod, about the year 1800, Thomas engaging in the marble business, in 1810. His son Edwin, born in this town in 1807, in 1852 succeeded his father in the marble works, in which business he is still engaged at East Lee, on road 26. He married Charlotte Hewett in 1828, rearing two sons and one daughter, George, Edwin, and Frances A. Edwin was collector of taxes for many years.

Charles Hinckley, son of Benjamin and Puella (Goodspeed) Hinckley, was born in Lee in 1800, and married Harriet Bassett, who bore him five children: Charles Edgar, Evalina, (who became Mrs. Edward A. More, and died in 1883,) Frank K., residing on the homestead, John W., of Connecticut, and Harriet B., residing with her mother.

Elial, son of Timothy and Dorothy (Phelps) Thatcher, was born in Shalor Hill, in 1812, and began working at the blacksmith's trade when but fifteen years of age, which trade he has followed for more than sixty years, having learned of Amos G. and S. A. Hulbert, of Lee. He married Emily Gale, of Hadley, Mass., rearing three daughters. He resides on Main street. Emaline Phelps married James Finney.

Pliny M., son of Reuben and Amelia M. Shaylor, came to Lee in 1816, where he kept a hotel on Cape street for nineteen years. He married Hannah Owen. His son, Pliny M., Jr., born in 1830, married Josephine L. Perrin, by whom he had one daughter, Mrs. Frank Belden, and resides on road 7.

Amos G., son of Adams Hulbert, a Revolutionary soldier, was born in Weathersfield, February 7, 1799, and came to Lee with his brother, Samuel A., at the age of twenty-one years, where he engaged in the manufacture of wagons, sleighs and carriages, continuing prosperously until 1849, when he engaged in the insurance business. He has one son, Henry C., of New York, and a daughter, Mrs. Dr. Wright, of Lee.

John, son of Miles and Mary McLaughlin, and a native of Sligo, Ireland, emigrated to America in 1820, entered the machine shop of Beck & Royce, in Lee, when about fifteen years of age, working there eleven years, after which he purchased the grist and saw-mill of Jacob Winegar. In 1847 he began the manufacture of iron and paper calendar rolls. Mr. McLaughlin married Alida Westfall, of Chatham, N. Y., in 1843, rearing four children, among whom are James H., who is with his father, and Henrietta (Mrs. J. J. Wolfinger).

Eliphalet, son of Samuel Wright, and a descendant of Abel, one of the first settlers of Springfield, was born at Hinsdale, Mass., in 1818, and came to Lee when eighteen years of age, studied medicine with Dr. A. G. Welsh, graduated from the Berkshire medical college in 1841. After practicing seven years in Granville, he settled in Lee, in 1849, where he has since maintained an extensive practice.

Nicholas Spoor, son of John and Maggie (Walker) Spoor, was born in Westmoreland, N. Y., in 1800, married Dotia McKee, who bore him two sons, George N., and Albert J., and immigrated to this town in 1836. His son, George married Lydia C. Clark, rearing a son Albert M., and a daughter, Zoe Jane, now Mrs. Frank Brace. Albert M. married Maggie Howison, of Glendale, by whom he had two sons and two daughters. He is a paper maker by trade.

Thomas, son of John and Mary Norton, of Ireland, was born in 1838. He came to America and located in Lee about 1852, and died in October, 1864. He married Mary Purcell and had three sons and two daughters. Of these, John married Jennie Doyle, Michael married Mary Ryan, and Ellen became the wife of James Waddock. John and Michael are machinists by trade.

Edward J. Cassidy, who was born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1839, emigrated to America at the age of sixteen. He had worked as a paper maker in Ireland. He, with his brother Michael, operated the old Turkey mill for a few months, when it was burned. After working in the South mill several years, he became a manufacturer of furniture and an undertaker, combining the two. He married Susan C. Dunn, who bore him eight sons and two daughters. He died in 1880, leaving a wife and seven children. His widow continues the business on Main street.

Frank A. Goussett, born in Alsace, France, in 1822, emigrated at the age of thirty-two, with his wife and two children, Sebastian and Justine. He came to Washington Mountain, going from there, after two years, to Wisconsin, and from thence came to Lee, where he purchased a large farm, where he is now residing on road 27. He was the father of six children. One son, Justine, married Constant Roy, of Lenox Furnace; another, Julius B., is postmaster and merchant at East Lee.

The Congregational church, located at Lee village, was organized May 25, 1780, by Rev. Daniel Collins, of Lanesboro, with thirty members, the first settled pastor, Rev. Elisha Parmelee, being installed July 3, 1783. Their church building was erected in 1780 and did service until 1800, when another was built, used until 1758, when the present edifice was erected. It will comfortably accommodate 900 persons, cost $30,000.00, and is now valued, including grounds, at $50,000.00. The society now has 472 members, with Rev. Lyman S. Rowland, pastor.

The Methodist Episcopal church was organized by Rev. D. Starks, a circuit preacher, in 1830, by the appointment of George Benton as class-leader over a class of about thirty. In the spring of 1840, Rev. William Gothard was appointed over the new station of Lee, then established by the New York annual conference. The church was then re-organized, consisting of 195 members. Their church building, erected in 1839, was enlarged in 1849-50, and remodeled, improved, and a steeple added in 1866-67, so that it is now a neat structure capable of accommodating 500 persons, and is valued, including parsonage and grounds, at $15,000.00. The church has now 200 members, Rev. D. McCarthy being pastor, the twentieth-third in charge. The church has also an ecclesiastical society connected with it, incorporated under the laws of the commonwealth, which holds the property in trust for the use and benefit of the members of the "Methodist Episcopal church forever," the land being deeded to the trustees and their successors in office, though the "Methodist Episcopal Society" was organized, in accordance with the discipline of Methodist denomination, in January, 1839. The church building and parsonage was built by the latter society, funds being raised by general subscription, the land, also, being a nominal gift for the above purpose. The interest in the church is healthful, the finances based on solid principles, the church nor society having no standing liabilities, current balances being adjusted at the end of each year.

The Bethel Baptist church, located at Lee village, was organized September 14, 1850, by its first pastor, Rev. Amory Gale, with twenty members. Their church building, erected in 1852, will seat 600 persons, and is valued, including grounds, etc., at $12,000.00. The society now has 100 members, with Rev. John D. Pope, pastor.

St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, located at Lee village, was organized by Rev. P. Cuddihy, with 500 communicants, about 1850, Rev. Peter Eagan being the first pastor. Their church building, erected in 1855, which will seat about 750 persons, is valued, including grounds, at $20,000.00. The society has now about 1,000 communicants, with Rev. T. M. Smith, pastor.

St. George's Protestant Episcopal church, located at Lee village, was organized with the following members, in 1856: William T. Fish, B. F. Bosworth, James Levy, J. A. Weed, W. F. Davies, J. Evans, J. G. Wakefield, C. Smith, J. Holmes, J. F. Cook, S. Hellewell and C. C. Holcombe, Rev. George F. Chapman being the first pastor. The first house of worship was erected in 1857, the second in 1864, and the present one in 1879. Two of these were destroyed by fire, and afford an apt illustration of the value of proper insurance, as the latter building could not have been built had it not been for its insurance, as the parish, weakened by deaths and removals, could not otherwise have afforded a new building. It is a neat stone structure, capable of seating 300 person, and valued, including grounds, at about $9,000.00. The society now has fifty members, with Rev. Samuel Haven Hilliard, rector.

The East Lee Union Chapel was built in 1864. It is valued at $4,000.00, about its original cost.

St. Francis Roman Catholic church, located at South Lee, was organized in 1883, with 300 communicants, Rev. George Brennan being the first pastor. The church building, erected during that year, will seat 400 persons and is valued at $4,000.00. The society now has 250 members, with Rev. Father Smith, pastor.

LENOX occupies nearly a central position in the county, lying in lat. $42^{\circ} 22'$ and long. $3^{\circ} 44'$, bounded north by Pittsfield, east by Washington and Lee, south by Lee and Stockbridge and west by Stockbridge and Richmond. It originally formed a part of the territory of the last mentioned town, its early history being briefly as follows: In 1760, a company, through their agent, Samuel Brown, Jr., of Stockbridge, purchased of two chiefs of the Stockbridge Indians, named Ephraim and Yokun, a tract of land lying just north of Stockbridge, between the New York line and the Housatonic river, paying therefor £1,790. On the 2d of June, 1762, this territory was sold at auction in Boston, as township No. 8, to Josiah Dean, for £2,550, and by him was transferred, in February, 1773, to Mr. Brown and his associates for £650. The tract was divided into lots, and the future erection of two towns anticipated by a dividing line, commencing at the present southeast corner of Richmond, and running thence north 2° west to the north line of the purchase. The territory west of this line embracing about 9,000 acres, was called Mount Ephraim, and that east Yokun-town, both in honor of the sachems of whom the first purchase was made. June 20, 1765, the territory was incorporated, under the name of "Richmont," in honor of the Duke of Richmond, which was subsequently, March 3, 1785, changed to Richmond. By an act of the legislature passed February 26, 1767, the easterly portion of territory was taken to form the District of Lenox. Subsequently, however, on the division of the town, 1,700 acres of the western portion of the Yokun purchase was annexed to "Richmont." Dwight's grant, Williams's grant, and a part of Hartwood (Washington), were added in 1770, and again, January 31, 1795, and February 18, 1802, other annexations from Washington were made, while the area was again slightly changed by the final establishment of the Lee line, February 7, 1820.

Lenox received its name, as did Richmond, in honor of Charles Lenox, Duke of Richmond, an early defender in the House of Lords, of American colonial rights. The word itself, however, is of Scotch origin, said to have been derived from the section along the river Levan, which flows from Loch Lomond into the Clyde ; the section was called "Levanocs," finally corrupted into Lenox. What could be more appropriate than this adoption of a name which had its birth amid the beauties of Loch Lomond. The surface of the town is broken into gentle swells and hills, which rise in succession from the valley of the Housatonic westward to Prospect hill and Lenox and Bald mountains, whose summits overlook a large portion of Berkshire county. The principal streams are the Housatonic, flowing a southerly course along the eastern border of the town, and the Yokun river, which rises in the south-westerly part of the township, flows northeasterly nearly to the northern line, then turns southeasterly, uniting with the Housatonic. There are other streams and brooks, but of minor importance. In the southern part of the town, lying partly in Stockbridge, is a handsome sheet of water called Laurel lake, which is quite a resort for pleasure seekers.

These gentle swells, rounded hill-tops and winding valleys, unite in forming a scene that is alike charming and captivating to all, though lacking the elements of rugged grandeur so admired by some. It is a fact that the beauty of Lenox has a world-wide fame ; but it is the reposeful beauty of a charming face which possesses a classic contour of features, but lacking the sterner lines of energy and character. Indeed, it takes hold of one's senses with a mysterious spell that it is difficult to analyze, but still has, to quote from one whose long familiarity with, and undoubted love for, its charms should render an authority, "remarkable natural scenery which steadily holds the first place in the love and esteem of many constant beholders, whose tastes have been moulded or corrected by extended travel at home and abroad : scenery whose charms seem to me to exist more in an unusual combination of satisfactory quantities, and freedom from blemish, than in any specific splendor of landscape—however striking instances of the latter may here and there present themselves."

The Lenox of old was more particularly known to the world at large from the fact of its being the county seat of Berkshire, and for its climatic resemblance to the Polar regions. On these particular points did it, for decade after decade of years, rest for its recognition and laurels among the men and times of former generations. The resident county officials, being people of intelligence, character and culture, of excellent social attainments, in some instances of much literary ability and cultivation, naturally drew around them, as the years went by, people of their own position and places in the world. Among these latter, probably no one person was more instrumental in bringing this portion of Berkshire county into public notice and appreciation than was Fanny Kemble Butler. She came to these hills in her earlier and best days, and took them to her heart at once. She loved the people she found here, and saw the charms of the surrounding scenery before others had discovered and known of them. She built here a cottage for her own temporary occupancy, being among the first from abroad to do this. She rode her flying steeds to the very mountain tops, leaped the small streams of the valleys, and lingered lovingly and long with nature, heartily enjoying the wild excitement. She saw what an opportunity there was here for improvements, and was one of the first to give substantial aid to the work of beautifying and adorning the town; and while others stood listlessly and uninterestedly by, she sought out and directed attention to the natural scenic beauties of the vicinity and prophesied enthusiastically that they would all come to be widely known and fully appreciated in due time. To verify and establish how well these prophesies have been fulfilled, it only needs to take a hasty glance at the Lenox of today: wealthy New Yorkers, Philadelphians and Bostonians have here erected extensive villas, and founded a summer resort peculiar to itself, representing much aristocracy of wealth, refinement and culture. The old town has been completely metamorphosed, with palaces standing now where plain farm-houses once had place; elegant equipages dash up and down what were once the quiet village streets, and out upon the hillsides; and where nature has failed to leave an impress of beauty, art has been called to her aid.

During this stage of metamorphosis the town has been the home, at different times, of distinguished literary talent and of pronounced genius. Here the beloved and lamented Dr. Channing spent the last summer of his life, and here fell his last accents upon the ears of a public audience; here Hawthorne, too, might have been seen occasionally during his residence in the "old red house" which stands just over the Stockbridge line; here also, about a mile south of the village, stood the residence of Catharine Sedgwick, a lady not more remarkable for her literary genius than for those enchanting virtues that made her the helper of the poor, the comfort of the afflicted, a cherished friend and an esteemed Christian; here Charlotte Cushman, "the Queen of the American Stage," found a home for a time, and is remembered as a lady of unassuming manners—a noble type of American womanhood; and here, also, often has wandered Henry Ward Beecher along the secluded rambles, drinking in the inspiration afforded by the beautiful surroundings. George Morell, the eminent jurist, was born here, March 22, 1786, and died at Detroit, Michigan, March 8, 1845, and Hon. Anson Jones, the last president of Texas, was born here, January 20, 1798, and died by his own hand at Houston, Texas, January 8, 1858.

The rocks entering into the geological structure of the town are mostly of limestone formation, with mica-slate in the southern and western parts, and quartz in the eastern part. Iron ore abounds to a considerable extent, and has been mined for many years. Fine grades of marble are found in the limestone ledges, which have also been quarried to a considerable extent.

In 1880 Lenox had a population of 2,043. In 1883 the town employed four male and eleven female teachers in its public schools, at an average monthly salary of $47.00 for males and $27.43 for females. There were 401 school children, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $4,100.00.

LENOX is a handsome post village located just south of the central part of the town, upon an eminence which commands a pleasing view of the surrounding country. President Dwight, who visited it in 1798, describes it as follows:—

“Lenox, the shire town of the county, is principally built upon a single street, on a ridge, declining rather pleasantly to the east and west, but disagreeably interrupted by several deep valleys crossing it at right angles. The soil and the buildings are good and the town exhibits many marks of prosperity. The buildings consist of a church [the same which now crowns the hill], a court-house, a school-house and jail.”

Another traveler's description of it, about a quarter of a century later, is as follows:—

“Lenox, the capital of Berkshire county, is a town of uncommon beauty. It is built upon a hill on two streets, intersecting each other nearly at right angles. It is composed of handsome houses, which, with the exception of a few brick, are painted a brilliant white. It is ornamented with two neat houses for public worship, one of which is large and handsome and stands upon a hill higher than the town, and a little removed from it. It has a court-house of brick, in a fine style of architecture; it is fronted with pillars, and furnished with convenient offices and a spacious court-room; this room is carpeted, and, what is more important, contains a library for the use of the bar. Lenox has fine mountain air, and is surrounded by equally fine mountain scenery. Indeed, it is one of the prettiest of our inland towns, and even in the view of the European travelers (who had eyes to see anything beautiful in what is unlike Europe), it would appear like a gem among the mountains. I did not count the houses, but should think there might be one hundred houses and stores, etc. White marble is often the material of their steps, foundations and pavements.”

But what a change would either of these writers witness could they visit the village to-day and ramble about its handsome streets, and witness its whirl of gaiety, its mammoth hotel, and many princely mansions surrounded by elegant grounds, forming in all what would appear to them the aristocratic suburb of a popular city. In place of its “two, neat houses of public worship” they would find four church buildings (Congregational, Methodist Episcopal and Roman Catholic), and such a general change in almost everything, that they would doubtless fail to recognize the place. They would find many old land-marks, however, among which may be mentioned the Congregational church, the court-house erected in 1791 which is now looked upon with so much veneration by the inhabitants, and in which is located the postoffice, and the “court-house of brick,” erected in 1816. The account of the town's appointment as the county seat and the final removal of the courts to Pittsfield, in 1868, has already been given on page 32.

The Charles Sedgwick Hall.—After the removal of the courts to Pittsfield, the court-house was purchased by Mrs. Adeline E. Schemerhorn, who donated it to the town to be used for public purposes. In it are located the town hall, town clerk's office, and a good library and reading-room, known as the Charles Sedgwick Hall Library. This library was established in 1855.

manding and pleasant site in the village. It was incorporated in 1803, the act making it a corporation also granted a half township of the State's territory lying in Maine, to be used towards the support of the school. For a number of years this land afforded no revenue to the institution, but about 1830 it was sold and the funds used in the school. Levi Gleazen, A. M., was the first principal of the institution. Mr. H. H. Ballard is the present incumbent. The principal of Lenox Academy is the founder and president of the Agassiz Association, a society for the study of natural history. The society has attained in two years a membership of over six thousand, distributed in over five hundred "chapters," or branch societies, in nearly all the United States and Territories, as well as in England, Scotland, Ireland, France and South America. Reports from these various sources are regularly received, and a condensed summary of them constitutes a regular department in the St. Nicholas Magazine. The headquarters of this association is the Lenox Academy, and here is the society's valuable and growing museum,

(OLD COURT HOUSE, ERECTED IN 1791.)

LENOX FURNACE is a small post village, located in the southeastern part of the town, on the Housatonic. It is noted for its iron and glass manufactories. A furnace was established here as early as 1780, by Job Gilbert, since which time thousands of tons of iron have been smelted here. In 1848 the Lenox Iron Works Co. was incorporated by the legislature, with a capital of $100,000.00. The present company has extensive works here, but they are not now in operation. The history of glass manufacture has already been given, on page 30.

DEWEY'S (New Lenox p. o.) is a hamlet located in the northeastern part of the town.

The first settler in the town was Jonathan Hinsdale, who came on from Hartford, Conn., in 1750, and built for himself a small house on the east side of the county road, about fifty rods south of Court-house hill. In the following spring a man by the name of Cooper located in the southern part of the town. Subsequently a Mr. Dickinson built a house near Mr. Hinsdale's. The first clearing in the northern part of the town was made by Jacob Bacon, on a hill west of the county road. In his neighborhood settled Messrs. Hunt, McCoy, Glezen and Steel. About this time a Mr. Waterman located in the extreme northern part of the town, in what has since been known as East street. The early settlers were the families of Root, Miller and Dewey. Messrs. Whitock, Parker and Richards made the first settlement where the village now is. In the western part of the town the early settlers were Collins, Treat Andrus, Wright and others. Settlers came in slowly, however, for the French and Indian war, which soon came on, laid the frontier settlements open to constant fear of raids by marauding parties of Indians. In or about 1755 all the settlers became alarmed and fled to Stockbridge for protection. During this flight, a man by the name of Stevens was shot by them while he was passing a ledge of rocks in the southern part of the town. The horse he was riding was killed, and a woman who was riding with him was only saved by Mr. Hinsdale coming to her rescue. With the return of peace, however, the settlement began to enlarge, and in 1791, at the taking of the first United States census, there were in the town 1,169 inhabitants. The first town meeting was held on the 5th of March, 1767.

The part taken by Gen. John Paterson, one of the patriots of Lenox, in the Revolution and the subsequent Shays Rebellion have been spoken of in our county chapter, and that the inhabitants in general were early active in the American cause is attested by the following vote of instructions to their representative on the 3d of June, 1776:—

*“ To the Representatives of Lenox :—*These are to direct to use your Best Endeavor to suppress all the Tyranical measures that have or may take Place from Great Britton, and Likewise take as much care that you do not set up anything of a dispotick Power among ourselves. But let us have freedom at home, although we have war a Broad. We Do Further Direct you to use your utmost abilities and intris with our assembly, and they Theirs with the Continental Congress, That if they think it safe, for the colonies to declare independent of the Kingdom of Great Britton, and in your so doing we Do Declare in the above mentioned thing we will stand by you with our lives and fortunes.”

General John Paterson, the youngest child and only son of Major John and Ruth (Bird) Paterson, was born at Farmington, Ct., about 1744. His father, of Scotch descent, and said to have been a liberally educated man, was a British officer in the French war, and was with Wolfe at Quebec. He died of yellow fever at the taking of Havana, September 5, 1762, aged fifty-four. General Paterson graduated at Yale college in 1762, taught school and was a practicing attorney and justice of the peace in New Britain, then the principal village in his native town. June 2, 1766, he was married to Elizabeth, daughter of Deacon Josiah and Hannah (Warren) Lee, of Farmington, and before 1774 removed, with his father-in-law's family, to Lenox. Here his abilities were soon recognized, and he was selected to represent the town in the two provincial congresses of 1774 and 1775. He was chosen a selectman and assessor in 1774, and was re-elected the following year. Entering the service as colonel of the fifteenth regiment he was made a brigadier-general February 21, 1777, and attached to the northern department. He remained in service until the close of the war, then returning to Lenox, where his home had been during the whole period, and engaging in mercantile business with his son-in-law, Azariah Egleston. In 1785 he represented Lenox in the general court, and in that and the following year was again a member of the board of selectmen and assessors. During Shay's Rebellion he headed a detachment of the Berkshire militia ordered out for its suppression. In the army General Paterson was associated with Kosciusko, the Polish hero, with whom he formed a close and intimate friendship. They were at the battle of Saratoga, and made the northern campaign together, and were both stationed at West Point after the escape of Arnold. While at West Point General Paterson was appointed one of the judges at the trial of Major Andre. Being one of the proprietors of the "Boston Purchase" of 230,400 acres in Broome and Tioga counties, New York, General Paterson removed from Lenox, with his family, in 1791, and settled at Lisle, in Broome county, now Whitney's Point, a village in the town of Triangle. Shortly after his settlement at Lisle he was chosen a member of the New York legislature, and held the position for four years. He was also a member of the New York constitutional convention of 1801, and in 1803-05 represented in Congress a large portion of central-southern New York. For twelve years he was the presiding or first judge of the county court of Broome county, his term of service ending with his life. General Paterson is said to have been remarkably quick and active, and a great walker. It is told of him, that while county judge he would often walk to Binghamton, eighteen miles, to hold court, rather than go to the field and catch a horse to ride. While in the service he excelled as a drill officer. The historian of New Britain, Ct., (from which place he removed to Lenox,) says that, judging from the honorable offices bestowed on General Paterson, he was, in these respects, the most distinguished man ever reared there. He died at Lisle, July 19, 1808. A grandson of Gen. Paterson, Hon. Thomas J. Paterson, formerly a member of Congress, is now living at Rochester, N. Y.

Azariah Egleston was born in the year 1757, and died in 1822, at Lenox. His ancestors came from Exeter, in Devonshire, England, in 1630. They settled at Dorchester, Mass., but subsequently removed to Windsor, Conn. He was the son of Seth Egleston, who removed from Windsor to Westfield. Azariah was one of several children. He came to Pittsfield previous to the Revolutionary war, and there enlisted in Capt. Noble's company of minute men, April 22, 1775. (Miller seems to have been captain of his company, a part of the time.) This company belonged to the regiment commanded by Col. Paterson, and contained the flour of the young men of Berkshire. He returned to Pittsfield from Boston, in December, 1775. He was afterwards lieutenant and paymaster and belonged to Col. Vose's regiment. He continued in the army during the war, and was twice wounded. He was in the advance guard at the battle of Trenton, and was in the battle of Princeton. He was in the battle at Bemis' Heights, and at Saratoga, at the capitulation of Burgoyne. He was at Monmouth, Newport and Stony Point. He was at West Point at the time of the court martial upon Andre, of which court Gen. Paterson was a member. While at West Point he became intimately acquainted with General Paterson. He was at New York at the British evacuation, and returned to West Point and settled the accounts of the 1st Mass. Regiment. March 4, 1784, he left West Point and came to Lenox. At the close of the war he was a major, and was afterwards generally known as Major Egleston. He was personally acquainted with Gen. Washington, and his signature is the seventh to the articles of association of the Society of the Cincinnati, Gen. Washington's being the first. (See in Library, State House, Boston.) August 11, 1785, he married Miss Hannah Paterson, daughter of Gen. John Paterson. She died at Lenox, January 31, 1803, aged thirty-three years. Thirteen years previously, her sister, Miss Polly Paterson, died at the age of seventeen. For twenty years after the war Major Egleston was one of the leading citizens of Lenox, distinguished for public spirit and hospitality. In 1796, at Christmas time, he entertained at his home a party of one hundred ladies and gentlemen, from Pittsfield and Stockbridge, as well as Lenox, a full account of which occasion is contained in a manuscript letter written by the Rev. Mr. Burhans, an Episcopal clergyman. It is understood that Major Egleston's property was afterwards lost, or greatly diminished, by obligations incurred for others. Mr. Egleston had several children, among whom were Mrs. James W. Robbins, of Lenox, and Mr. Thomas Egleston, a distinguished merchant in the city of New York, whose family preserve the old mansion with commendable care, and occupy it as a summer residence.

Gen. Caleb Hyde was born at Norwich, West Farms, (now Franklin,) Conn., July 29, 1739, the fourth son of Elijah Hyde and Ruth Trury, and grandson of Samuel Hyde of the third generation. He married, in 1764, Elizabeth Sacket, daughter of Captain John Sacket, of Oblong, N. Y., and niece of Admiral Richard Sacket, of the British navy. He settled at Lenox in 1769, and took an active part in opposing British aggressions and in urging on the Revolution. He was delegate from Lenox to the third provincial congress, represented the town in the general court five years, was for nine years a selectman, and for a time was sheriff of Berkshire county. He removed to Lisle, Broome county, N. Y., probably with Gen. Paterson, whose eldest child, Josiah Lee Paterson, had married, January 1, 1788, Gen. Hyde's daughter Clarissa. He soon became a leading man in Broome county, was major-general of militia, twice elected State senator, and in 1804 chosen by the assembly a member of the council of appointment. He died at Lisle in 1820.

Charles Mattoon immigrated to this town from Watertown, Conn., in 1768, and located on road 9, rearing one son, Charles, and six daughters. Col. Charles Mattoon married Julia Ann Burnham, of Vermont, who bore him two sons and three daughters. One son, Myron, born in 1806, married Laverna D. Higley, and was the father of two sons, and one daughter—George M., Charles G., and Catharine, now Mrs. John M. Cook, of Lenox. Charles G. married Anna O. Smith, who bore him three sons and three daughters. Myron resides with his son, Charles, upon the old homestead.

Thomas Landers, one of the first settlers of this town, located at Lenox Furnace, where he owned a large tract of land, and gave the site upon which the first grist-mill in the town was built, which mill is now operated by P. H. Shaylor & Co. His son Ashel was the second white child born in Lenox, whose daughter, Lucy M., widow of James Thompson, resides on the homestead. Thomas was one of the nine original members of the first Congregational church here.

William, son of Caleb and Elizabeth Perrin Walker, was born in Rehoboth, Mass., in 1751, removing to Lenox in 1770. He joined the American army immediately after the battle of Lexington, and was with Washington at the battles of Trenton and Princeton, New Jersey, being also engaged in the battle of Bennington. He was a member of the constitutional convention of Massachusetts, and repeatedly a member of the general court as a representative from Lenox. In 1783 he was chosen a senator from this county. In 1781 he was appointed by Governor Hancock register of probate, which office he soon after resigned. For a time he was employed as a surveyor. For this service he was well qualified. In November, 1795, he was appointed by Governor Adams judge of probate for Berkshire county, and discharged the duties of that office till January, 1824, when he resigned. In 1807 he was appointed by Governor Sullivan a judge of the court of common pleas in this county, which office he held till a new system for that court was established. In 1829 he was an elector of President of the United States. In 1781 was appointed justice of the peace, which office he held until his death in 1831. He married Sarah Woodruff, of Farmington, Conn., who bore him three children. His daughter Sarah became the wife of Dr. Charles Worthington, of Lenox. One son, William P., born on the Goodman farm in this town, in 1778, married Lucy Adam, in 1807 and located upon the place now occupied by Judge Julius Rockwell, rearing five sons and four daughters. Of these, Lucy F. became the wife of Judge Rockwell; Frances M. married R. D. Williams, of Stockbridge; Cornelia married Joseph H. Scranton, founder of Scranton City, Penn.; Sarah W. became the wife of Hon. David Davis, of Illinois; and Richard H. married Anna Perry, and has two daughters, Lucy A., wife of Rev. R. DeWitt Mallory, of this town, and Anna P.

Samuel Northrop removed his family from Salisbury, Conn., to Lenox, in 1770, when his daughter Phebe was but three years of age, coming with an ox team most of the distance, but at times being obliged to travel on horse-back by the guidance of marked trees. Samuel located on East street. He died in 1786, aged 42 years. Col. Elijah Northrop, a younger brother of Samuel, accompanied him to Lenox, and erected a house next south of his brother on the place now owned by Thomas Sedgwick, which house was used as a tavern during the Revolutionary war, and is one of the oldest houses in the place. Col. Northrop died in 1832, at the age of eighty-two. During the Revolution, Indians and wild game were plenty, and often troublesome. Mr. Northrop used to relate that on one occasion he and others killed three bears close to his house. At another time he had killed a deer and brought it into the house, when an Indian called and claimed it, as he had followed it all day. It was finally decided to give it to the "child of the forest."

Josiah Osborne, son of Daniel Osborne, of Ridgefield, Conn., immigrated to Lenox in 1773, and built a log house on road 28. He married Hesebath Olmsted, in 1773, by whom he had seven children. One son, Deacon Ezra, married Thalia, daughter of Deacon Oliver Kellogg, of Lee, the marriage being blest by two sons. One of these, Oliver W., born in 1823, married Mary C. Crosby, of Ashtabula, Ohio, who bore him two daughters. After her death, in 1859, he married Elsie M. Bourne, who bore him one son. Charles S. now resides upon the homestead first settled by his grandfather, Oliver. Josiah Osborn served in the Revolutionary war.

Reuben Root, at a date previous to the Revolution, married Sarah Curtiss, and removed to this town from Sheffield, Mass., locating on road 20. He was the father of six sons and three daughters, of whom one, Calvin, married Lois A. Cook, by whom he had three children, two, Rodney C., who was born on the homestead in 1817, married Nancy Babcock, and had born to him three children, and Sarah E., now Mrs. Kieth, of Springfield, are living. Calvin H., son of Rodney, born in 1844, married Addie A. Parsons, and resides upon the former home of his great-grandfather.

Luther Sears, born in New Lenox in 1774, is said to be the third child born in the town. His family is as follows: Nelson, born in 1798; Nancy, born in 1799, who married Levi Butler; Marshall, who was born in 1802 and died in 1883; Zachariah P., born in 1804; Luther; Marietta, who married Ira Carrier, of Fulton, N. J.; Anna Maria, wife of L. C. Judd; Harriet, wife of F. Washburn. Zachariah P. married Marietta, daughter of Lyman and Amanda Dewey Judd, and had born to him two daughters, Anna Amanda, now Mrs. Charles H. Lay, and Martha H., wife of A. W. Bigelow. Mr. Z. Sears resides in Lenox, on road 25, and is a successful farmer.

He died in 1828, aged sixty-five, and his wife Phebe survived him until the twenty-eighth day of February, 1867, when she died at the age of 100 years and nine days. Nine days before her death her Centennial birthday was celebrated. Gathered around her were four generations. She has had sixty-five lineal descendants, viz.: Ten children, eighteen grandchildren, thirty great-grandchildren, and seven great-great-grandchildren. She had spent ninety-seven years of her life in Lenox. Miles Washburn, Jr., married Emily Hatch, who bore him two sons, George T., who married Eliza Case, also rearing two sons, Edwin C. and David S., and Edward M., who married Anna O. Cornelius, married Eliza Mullen, daughter of Cornelius Mullen, of Galway, Ireland, and resides on road 37.

Frederic William Rackemann was born in Bremen, Germany, in 1821. His long residence in Lenox, his great love of the place and of the delightful scenery which surrounds it, and his zealous interest in the welfare of the town, were such as to make his foreign birth almost forgotten, although the first twenty years of his life were passed in Bremen. Born of a musical family, he manifested his unusual gifts in that line at a very early age, and performed at times the duties of the organist in the Cathedral while he was still too small to reach the pedals with his feet. Later, in spite of great obstacles, he devoted himself with great assiduity, to the piano-forte, though after the death of his father, the breadwinner, the student, of necessity, became the teacher, and at fourteen years of age he gave piano lessons in Bremen, the fruits of his industry being turned into his mother's scanty purse. He remained with her as long as her life lasted, and then, after making a successful debut as a concert giver in his native town, he sailed for America—then as now the hope of youth, the land of promise. He established himself in New York in 1842, where his acquaintance increased rapidly and spread widely, not more perhaps on account his unusual gift of music than by virtue of his social proclivities and his rapid acquirement of the English tongue, which eventually was like a second nature to him. There are now so many remarkable and distinguished pianists that it is difficult to-day to realize how great a mark the advent of one made in those days. As a teacher Mr. Rackemann's great fidelity and enduring patience gave him a steady success and reputation—a great deal of the good amateur work which has been done in New York in the past years might justly be traced to his influence and inspiration. He was one of the early habitues of Lenox, before it was the thronged summer resort which it has become, and his friendship with Mr. Charles Sedgwick's family resulted in his marriage with Mr. Sedgwick's second daughter, Elizabeth, in 1855, since when he always passed his summers in Lenox, and eventually settled in the Sedgwick homestead where he latterly resided throughout the year. From this time he identified himself with the place, taking a warm and active interest in it. When interest was first awakened in the project of reviving the "Lenox Academy," fifty years since quite a famous "seat of learning," to which pupils flocked from north, west, and south, but which had fallen into decay, it was mainly through Mr. Rackemann's unwearied personal exertion that sufficient funds were collected to render the undertaking feasible. He took an ardent interest in it, and became one of the trustees when the academy was re-established. He was also one of the trustees of the Lenox "Charles Sedgwick Library and Reading Room," and a chosen member of the "Lenox Improvement Society." His character was one of singular earnestness, purity and modesty. Of firm convictions, frank, gentle, hospitable and liberal to a fault, those who knew him best loved and esteemed him most. He died at Lenox, August 16, 1884.

Lenox has had several centenarians, among whom may be mentioned the following: Phoebe Washburn, aged 100 years; her step-grandmother, Mrs. Gates, who died at the age of 101; Mrs. Tabitha Scott, who died in 1821, aged 107 years; Mrs. Jabez Ellis, who died in 1831, aged 100 years; and Mrs. Silence Bonny, who died in 1859, aged 103 years.

The Congregational church of Lenox.—In 1769 Rev. Samuel Hopkins, of Great Barrington, organized this church. Rev. Samuel Munson, a graduate of Yale in 1763, was ordained as its pastor November 8, 1770. Soon afterwards a church building was erected near the site of the present building, which was occupied until 1806, when it was destroyed by fire. The present building was then erected, occupying one of the most commanding eminences in the town. In addition to the church, the society owns a beautiful chapel in the village, a parsonage and two wood-lots, the whole value of which is about $35,000.00. Rev. Mr. Munson was dismissed in 1792, and Rev. (afterward Dr.) Samuel Shepard, was installed in his place April 30, 1795, retaining the charge for about fifty years. The present pastor is Rev. R. Dewitt Mallary.

The Methodist Episcopal church, located at Lenox village, was organized at an early date, the first pastor being Rev. Clark Fuller. A church building was erected in 1834, which gave place to the present edifice in 1851. It will accommodate 300 persons, and is valued, including grounds, etc., at $6,000.00. Its dedication sermon was preached by Bishop E. O. Haven. The society now has thirty members, with Rev. James M. Yeager, pastor. Among those who have officiated as worthy and efficient pastors of this church may be mentioned Revs. Albert Nash, Wesley Hubbard, J. W. Lindsay, Archibald Foss and John E. Cookman.

Trinity Episcopal church of Lenox was organized in 1774. It is not known when the first Episcopal services were held. In December, 1793, the Rev. Daniel Burhans was engaged "to officiate in his public character, for one year, every other Sunday." The engagement with Mr. Burhans was repeated from year to year until 1796, when he removed to Connecticut. In 1800 the Rev. Ezra Bradley was engaged for "one-fourth part of the time." In 1804 the Rev. Samuel Griswold, brother of Bishop Alexander V. Griswold, was chosen rector of the church in Great Barrington and Lenox. He chose the former as his place of residence, and officiated in each town, preaching on alternate Sabbaths, until 1818. During his ministry the present church building was erected, in 1816. After his dismissal, services were held only occasionally by different clergymen till 1826, when the Rev. Benjamin C. C. Parker, son of Bishop Parker, was chosen rector, who remained until 1832. He was followed by Rev. Samuel P. Parker, afterwards for many years the highly esteemed rector of the church at Stockbridge. Then came the Rev. George Walters, in 1841, and after him an interval of suspended services. The Rev. Dr. Pynchon, now a professor in Trinity college, at Hartford, took charge of the church in connection with that in Stockbridge, of which he was rector. In 1855, the Rev. William H. Brooks followed him. From 1858 to 1860 the church was again under the care of the Rev. Dr. Parker. The Rev. J. A. ——— was chosen rector at Easter, 1860. He was succeeded at Easter, 1861, by the Rev. H. A. Yardley, afterwards professor in the Theological school in Middletown, Conn. He was obliged, in consequence of ill health to resign, and at Easter, 1862, the Rev. Justin Field, the present rector, was chosen. The church was enlarged in 1873, but as more room is now needed, it is contemplated to erect a new stone edifice.

St. Ann's Roman Catholic church, located at Lenox village, was organized in 1868, by Rev. G. H. Brennan, its first pastor, with 250 communicants. Their church building, erected in 1875, will seat 350 persons, and is valued, including grounds, at $10,000. The society now has about 550 communicants, with Rev. T. M. Smith, pastor.

MONTEREY lies in the southern part of the county, in lat. $42^{\circ} 12'$ and long. $3^{\circ} 47'$, bounded northeast by Tyringham, east by Otis and Sandisfield, south by Sandisfield and New Marlboro, and west by Great Barrington. It was originally a part of Tyringham, to the records of which town we refer the reader for the early history of this town, though the first settlement of Tyringham was commenced in the portion of the town now Monterey. The division was brought about principally, on account of a range of highlands that divided the town into two nearly equal parts, rendering communication between the two portions exceedingly difficult. Accordingly, November 23, 1846, the matter of division was brought up, voted upon, and the measure adopted by a large majority, the line of division was brought up, voted upon, and the measure adopted by a large majority, the line of division following this range of highlands. About a mile south of the original line, in New Marlboro, was a hill, called "Dry Hill," which extended parallel with the line, so as to separate the intervening territory, making it appear as though a part of Monterey. The inhabitants of this section also being much more connected with Monterey than with their own town, an effort was soon instituted to effect an annexation, which, in 1851, resulted in success. Added to this was a small part of Sandisfield, April 24, 1875.

The surface of Monterey is peculiar. Extending nearly around the town's entire outline are high hills, which gives it the form of an elevated basin, rising to still higher elevations on or near its whole boundary line. In this outline, however, the hills are so broken that roads and driveways are conveniently built. The soil is better adapted to grazing than grain-raising, though the southern part of the town has some farms that are excelled by those of none of the other hill towns in the county. The northern part is mountainous and mostly unfit for purposes of cultivation. Chestnut hill is a high elevation in the southeastern part, affording a fine prospect of the surrounding country. Brewer's pond, a fine sheet of water covering about 250 acres, lies near this hill, and Six-mile pond, covering an area of 344 acres, lies in the southwestern part, extending into New Marlboro. These ponds are well stocked with fish, and lend a pleasing diversity to the landscape. Hop brook, so named from the wild hops growing on its banks, rises in the northern part of the town, while branches of the Farmington river flow over the southern part.

The geological formation is made up of quartz rock, limestone, gneiss, and mica-slate. Iron ore is found in the southern part of the town.

In 1880 Monterey had a population of 635. In 1883 the town employed one male and eight female teachers, at an average monthly salary of $40.00 for male and $19.93 for females. There were 111 school children in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $873.48.

MONTEREY is a small post village located in the central part of the town.

J. K. Hadsell's saw, shingle and planing-mill, located on road 32, is operated by water-power and cuts annually about 150,000 feet of lumber and 125,000 shingles.

The early history of Monterey, as we stated before, is written in connection with that of Tyringham, the first settlement being made here in April, 1739, by Isaac Garfield, Thomas Slaton and John Chadwick.

Rev. Adonijah Bidwell, the first pastor of the first church in Tyringham, now Monterey, was the posthumous son of Thomas Bidwell, who sailed from Barbadoes in 1716, and was never heard from. His mother, Jemima Devotion, was the lineal descendant of the Norman kings of England, beginning with King William the Conqueror, born 1027, and in the line of the Henrys, I., II., and III., the Edwards I., II., and III., Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, Sir John Bouchier, Sir Humphrey Bouchier, John Haynes, first Colonial Governor of Connecticut, Rev. Edward Taylor and Rev. Ebenezer Devotion, and in the hands of their descendants is a record still farther back through the Saxony kings of England, beginning with King Egbert the Great, who reigned 800 to 836. Rev. Adonijah Bidwell left four children, two sons and two daughters, all of whom filled places of distinction. Adonijah, the first born, lived the most of his life in his native town, and left a large family, some of whom still live in Monterey, and of his grandchildren three are now living there, as well as some of two later generations. The second son, Barnabas Bidwell, a lawyer of distinction, removed from Stockbridge to Kingston, Canada, and his son, Marshall S., was a lawyer, member of parliament, speaker of the house of assembly in Canada, and afterwards lived and died in New York city, and his namesake, Marshall Spring Bidwell, descendant of Adonijah, is now living in Monterey. One of the daughters, Jemima, married William Partridge, of Pittsfield, and was the mother of a large family, some of whom were ministers' wives and missionaries. The other daughter, Theodosia, married Elial Brewer, of Monterey, and was the mother of a large family, of which was the Rev. Josiah Brewer, who was the first missionary in Smyrna, Turkey. The descendants now living are scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific, judges and lawyers, ministers, doctors, bank presidents, etc. Rev. Mr. Bidwell was installed as pastor of the church here in 1750, preached here thirty-three years, and died June 2, 1784, aged sixty-seven years.

Tristian Stedman, from Rhode Island, near Tower Hill, came to Monterey in 1771, and located on road 8, near the Otis line. He married Penelope Hazard, to whom was born twelve children. Hazard and Olive Raymond located in Central New York; Tristian Stedman, Jr., who married Hulda, daughter of Maj. Herrick, located on road 9, building the house now occupied by Mrs. William Warren. He had born to him a family of seven children—three sons and four daughters—five of whom survive. They were Lorenzo H., Abigail C., Henry A., Mary B., Anna E., Julia M., and Oscar A. Henry A. married Miss L. A. Couch, and reared three children. He has always resided in Monterey.

Isaac was twice married, having, by his first wife, Anna Bond, two children, Mary and John. He afterwards married Martha Wickwire, who bore him four children, Amelia, Louisa, Harriet, and Egbert, of whom only Egbert survives. He resides in Lee. Isaac N. is of the fifth generation to reside on the old homestead.

Having gotten a house under process of erection, he sent for his family—consisting of a wife and two children—who made their journey thither on horseback. He married Hannah Munn and reared a family of three sons and six daughters, one daughter of whom is now living, at the age of ninety-one.

Charles Thomson, from New London, Conn., came to this town with his wife and five sons, Lemuel, Samuel, Gideon, Jared, and Aaron, locating upon the place now occupied by C. L. Bunce, on road 25, on Mount Munger. Aaron removed to the western part of New York. After a residence of a few years here, Lemuel, a farmer, carpenter and joiner, and who was also somewhat of a preacher, although never ordained, married a Miss Judd who bore him six children, all living to maturity, but only one, the eldest, Alanson, is now living. Samuel reared a large family, but two of whom survive, who now reside in other towns with their children. Samuel was killed by a mad bull; Gideon located on road 11, where he passed the remainder of his days, and on which road Lemuel and Samuel also resided. Jared married Lois Judd and located on the homestead, where he died at an advanced age. His wife, who bore him a family of nine children, all living to maturity, died at the age of ninety-three. Jared served his town as representative, and was also captain of a militia company. One of his children died at the age of twenty. Of his other children Jared married and removed to Pennsylvania; Charles and Davis moved to New York; Lester, who located in Sandisfield, married, for his first wife, Miss Fargo, and for his second, Jane Walker; Lyman mar-

He was assessor for thirteen years, and a selectman for several years. His wife survives him at the age of seventy, and resides with her daughter, Mrs. Charles Hastings. M. V., son of Lyman, married Fanny Brewer, and resides on the Ann Wheeler place. He is a large farmer, has a creamery and silo, and was the first person in this town to engage in that business. He has been a school committeeman. Silona married S. W. Thompson, of Albany, N. Y., but is now dead. J. M. died at the age of twenty-two; Matilda M., wife of Dr. Hastings, resides at Feeding Hills, where her sister, Lois L., also resides; Ellen M. married Charles Hastings, of Agawam, Mass. E. O., son of Sardis Thomson, is employed by a condensing milk company, in England. Lester had two children, Myron, who married Harriet Walker, and Angeline, wife of Thomas S. Webb, of Sandisfield.

David Munson, from Wallingford, Conn., came to this town about 1807 and located on the place now owned by Lester Busby. He married Miss Dorman, and reared six children, the aggregate weight of whom, at maturity, was over 1,300 pounds. But one of the family, David, Jr., located in this county, the others locating in New York. David, Jr., resided in New Marlboro until his death, in November, 1851.

MOUNT WASHINGTON is a mountainous town lying in the extreme southwestern corner of the county, in lat. $42^{\circ} 6'$ and long $73^{\circ} 34'$, bounded north by Egremont, east by Sheffield, south by the state line of Connecticut and west by the state line of New York. It was originally known as Taghconic, or Taconic mountain, its settlement being commenced as early as 1753 or '54, and in 1757 the Indian title to it was purchased for £15. Soon after this John Dibble, John King, Nathan, Benjamin and Peter Woodin, Benjamin Osborn, Charles Patterson and others petitioned the legislature for a grant of the territory, and in 1759 or '60 the township was surveyed under direction of the legislature, and divided into fifty lots, though the grant prayed for was not issued until 1774. June 21, 1779, the township was incorporated, under the name it now bears. June 17, 1817, a part of Egremont was annexed to its territory.

Rising in noble grandure above the valley of the Housatonic, the traveler through southern Berkshire will see the dome-like summit of Mt. Everett, or Bald mountain, rising abruptly 2,000 feet above the valley, or 2,624 feet above tide water, flanked by a short range of mountains extending north and south. Behind it, to the west, is another range, along the state line of New York, of nearly equal height above Harlem railroad, which skirts its western base. Between these two ranges there is an elevated inhabited area, from one to two miles in width from east to west and seven from north to south—the town of Mount Washington.

This "town among the clouds," as it were, however, is not only rich in picturesque scenery, but has an eventful and interesting history. Its location in the extreme southwest corner of the county and State, and its height above the neighboring towns, places it in a disadvantageous position as a business town; but as a health resort, winter or summer, no town in Berkshire county is more favorably situated, nor more accessible from New York city and vicinity, access being by the Harlem and other railroads, at and near Copake Iron Works, 104 miles from New York city, while Sheffield, the nearest town on the Housatonic, in Berkshire county, is 135 miles.

The grand and beautiful scenery in the drive of three miles from Copake, by two routes, the one following the Bash-Bish stream, through a deep ravine, passing the well-known Bash-Bish falls, the other skirting the western slope of the mountain, and giving a panoramic view of the Hudson river valley, with the entire range of the Catskill mountains in the back ground, proves a pleasant change from the thirty miles longer railroad ride up the Housatonic to Sheffield. The principal and at present only good carriage road from

Berkshire county, is by excellent roads from Sheffield or Great Barrington, through South Egremont to the base of the mountain, about two miles west of the village of South Egremont. Then, after following a mountain brook by a well-shaded road between two ranges of mountains about two and a half miles to the summit, a view unique, and hardly surpassed in New England, bursts upon the view. That to the north, from Sky Farm, looking down through the gorge, through which you come to the farthest extremity of Berkshire, with Greylock and the mountains of Vermont in the distance, Lenox, Stockbridge, Monument mountain, etc., in the intervening distance, is grand in the extreme. The various views of the interior of this "mountain town girt round about with mountains," its cultivated fields, and scattered white farm houses form a picture in itself. The views of the surrounding country from the various peaks of Mts. Ethel, Sunset, Prospect, Fray, Cedar, Alander, and that monarch of all, Mt. Everett, from whose dome-like summit you have an unrivalled view of the whole of Berkshire county, Western Connecticut, New York State to the Catskills, and a birds-eye view of the fine scenery of the town which lies beneath you. From the bright, silvery lakes in Salisbury, to the deep blue of the Catskills, from the distant hills and mountains of Berkshire to the rich and fertile valleys of the Housatonic and the Hudson, with their cultivated fields, the eye will continue to return to the nearer grand mountain ranges which, like natural ramparts, form the boundaries of this romantic town, transforming it into a fortress, form altogether a scene such as God alone can make. In the northwest part of the town are two water-falls and ravines rivaling even Bash-Bish. First Sage's Ravine, in the extreme southeast, partly in Connecticut, through which, for a mile or more, a mountain stream of almost icy coldness in midsummer plunges down through a dense forest, by successive leaps, from a few feet to sixty or more. About a mile north of this, a stream from Plantin pond, which nestles among the hills 1,000 feet above the Housatonic, after flowing a quarter of a mile through a wild forest, plunges over an almost perpendicular cliff nearly 500 feet, and disappears in the woods below, and thence, by a less rapid descent, it flows south and joins the brook from Sage's ravine, at the base of the mountain just across the State line in Connecticut, and thus united, as if reluctant to leave their mountain home and beautiful Berkshire, flow slowly several miles northeasterly into Berkshire again, to join the Housatonic in the village of Sheffield. At the top of the mountain, from the character of its surroundings and the richness of the Housatonic valley scenery beneath, one of the finest views in New England is obtained. With the roaring brook at your back, rushing through the forest to its final plunge, and the forest trees over your head, you look down upon a scene which lingers long in the memory of all who witness it. The forest, 500 feet beneath you, in which the brook is soon lost after its final plunge, the fertile valley of the Housatonic, Twin Lakes beyond, with perhaps a train passing across on the Connecticut Western railroad, three miles distant, the hills of Canaan and Norfolk in Connecticut, and New Marlboro and Great Barrington across the valley of the Housatonic, with the scattered villages here and there and the farm houses of Western Sheffield at your feet, combine to make a landscape of surpassing beauty.

Such in brief are some of the views in this town of less than the average area. It has also a dry and sunny atmosphere, the purest water from numerous springs and mountain brooks, and an even temperature. These many attractions are rapidly becoming known and appreciated, and the capacity of its well-kept summer boarding houses prove insufficient to accommodate even half of those who apply, while many who have spent several successive seasons here have commenced to build cottages for themselves, so that the present time appears to be the beginning of a fresh impetus in the growth of the town, bidding fair to become a popular summer resort.

The rock is principally talcose-slate and limestone. Iron ore of a good quality is found, which formerly was wrought to a considerable extent, though not much has been done in this line since about 1850.

In 1880 the town had a population of 205. In 1883 the town employed one male and two female teachers in its public schools, paying $24.00 per month to the male and $20.00 each to the females. There were then twenty-two school children in the town, while the whole amount raised for school purposes was $160.00.

There is no postoffice in the town at present, though there is, we believe, one to be established soon.

Small in population though it has ever been, Mount Washington has an interesting early history, being one of those earliest settled in the county, by an energetic class of pioneers, many years previous to its incorporation. These early settlers were in constant conflict for a number of years, with Robert Livingston, whose grant from the colony of New York then included the west part of this town. Among these early settlers, previous to the purchase of the territory of the Indians, March 15, 1757, were Christopher and Henry Brasie, John and Michael Hollenbeck, Andrew Race, Josiah Loomis, James VanDeusen, Joseph Paine, George Robinson, Jonathan Darby, Eleazer Stockwell, William Race, Joseph Graves, John Cade, Thomas Wolcott, Daniel Lord and a Mr. Vangilder. May 7, 1757, the houses of several of these were burned, or pulled down, by the Livingstone party. But these troubles were finally ended, and, after the Indian purchase, the settlers were mostly of a new class of people. In 1766 there were about twenty families in the town, and a grist-mill and a saw-mill had been erected. At the time the town was incorporated, in 1779, most of the landowners were the following, viz.: John Barber, Joseph Benedict, Peleg and Nathan Benjamin, William Campbell, Samuel Cogswell, John, Daniel and Samuel Dibble, Elnathan Hall, Andrew Hoxton, Jonah Ireler, Thomas Jones, Samuel Judson, John and Fenner King, Andrew Loomis, Gilbert and James Murray, Ezra Nickerson, Benjamin and Jonas Osborn, Nathaniel and William Palmer, Andrew and Charles Patterson, George and James Robinson, Philip Ruff, Allen and Sebah Sage, Elisha Sheldon, Eleazer Stockwell, John Wright, John, Abner and Peter Woodin, and Samuel, Azariah and Joseph Winchell.

As early as 1800 the town supported two schools, and soon after three. Its first church was erected in 1806. Between the years 1830 and 1850, it manufactured bar iron, axes, shovels, forks, hoes, and cartridges, but since about that time there has been no manufacturing carried on within its limits. Since the beginning of its popularity as a summer resort, the citizens have erected a new church building, a town-house, and the project of erecting a large hotel is being agitated. Telegraph and mail facilities, of which the town has been deprived, are also being talked of.

NEW ASHFORD lies in the northern part of the county, in lat. $42^{\circ} 36'$ and long. $3^{\circ} 47'$, bounded north by Williamstown, east by Adams and Cheshire, south by Cheshire, Lanesboro and a small part of Hancock, and west by Hancock. It is principally noted as being the smallest town in the State, both as regards area and population. It was originally incorporated as a district, February 26, 1781, having all the privileges and immunities enjoyed by regularly incorporated towns, except that of choosing a representative. March 14, 1793, a portion of its territory was taken towards making up the township of Cheshire; February 6, 1798, another portion was added to the same town, and June 26, 1798, a portion of Hancock was annexed to New Ashford, so that it is now about 1,400 rods in width, from east to west, at its widest part, and about 1,000 rods in extent from north to south. May 1, 1836, it was incorporated as a town, and since that time has enjoyed the privileges accorded such bodies.

The surface of the town is very rough and mountainous, being situated principally upon the steep and rugged hills which are made up from Saddle mountain on the east, and the Taconic range on the west, which here approach each other. In the narrow valley between these hills, along the rise of the western branch of the Housatonic, and the eastern branch of Green river, are some small tracts of land, having an arable, productive soil, though the soil in general is hard and gravelly, and of an indifferent quality. By these streams, with the connected springs and brooks, the town is well watered. The branch of Green river, on which are some mill privileges, flows north into Williamstown, receives the branch from Hancock, and finds its way into the Hoosac. The source of these streams is near the source of the western branch of the Hoosatonic, which takes an opposite course and flows into Lanesboro.

The rocks entering into the geological structure of the territory are limestone and talcose-slate. Some valuable beds of marble are found. In one part of the town, also, is a remarkable cave, about 130 feet in extent. Some of its apartments have arches rising twenty feet above the floor, which glitter with stalactites, formed by water dripping for ages over the limestone.

In 1880 New Ashford had a population of 203. In 1883 it employed three female teachers, at an average salary of $20 per month. There were thirty-four school children in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $102.

NEW ASHFORD (p. o.) is a hamlet located in the southern part of the town.

Lester Roys's grist and saw-mill, located on Green river, was built by Gideon Lewis, many years ago. The grist-mill has one run of stones, and the saw-mill cuts about 10,000 feet of lumber per year.

The settlement of the territory was begun as early as 1762, by emigrants from the eastern part of the State, and from Rhode Island and Connecticut. Among the early settlers were Nathaniel, Abel and Gideon Kent, Uriah, Peter and Eli Mallery, Samuel Gregory, John Wells, William Green, Jacob Lion, Samuel Gridley, Jonathan, Hezekiah and Caleb Beach, Samuel P. and Benjamin Tyler, Abraham Kerby, William Campbell, Amariah Babbit, Evans Roys, Captain Samuel Martin, John Lyon and a Mr. Mason.

The first store was kept by Peregrine Turner; the first hotel was kept by William Starkweather; no doctor or lawyer has ever been located in town.

During the Revolutionary period committees of safety were formed here, and several of the citizens were actively engaged in the war. Some of them were at the battle of Bennington, present on the occasion of the surrender of Burgoyne, and five or six were at Stone Arabia when Col. Brown fell. J. G. Holland mentions an incident of the old French war, as follows:—

“An incident of the bravery of two young men, which occurred within the territory now covered by the town, during the old French war, may be related here. Samuel Curtis and James Ensign, youths seventeen and nineteen years of age, volunteered as bearers of a communication from fort No. 4 (Williamstown) to the fort in Lanesboro. They had arrived at the northern part of New Ashford, where they discovered that Indians had been digging for ground nuts. They cautiously followed their trail, up the valley, to the knoll where the dwelling of William B. Dewey now stands. On arriving there, they discovered four savages, unsuspectingly roasting their ground-nuts, and each selecting his victim, fired, and ran for the Lanesboro fort. The two surviving Indians seized their rifles, and gave pursuit. The chase was a long and desperate one, and darkness only saved the young men. Their course was cut off, and they were driven easterly out of their way, but during the night they made their way to the fort. On their return, the following week, they visited the scene of the encounter, and two newly made graves showed that their baffled pursuers had preceded them.”

Evans Roys, one of the first two settlers of New Ashford, (Hezekiah Beach being the other,) came from Connecticut some time previous to the Revolutionary war. His son, William, also lived and died here about 1830. His son John was born in town in 1790 and died here in 1874, aged eighty-four. He had nine children, only three now living, one son, Lester, on road 3, in this town.

Archibald Beach, an early settler, came here and located on what is called "Beach Hill." He had a large family, all of whom are now dead. His son, Atwater, was born here in 1792, and lived here till about four years before his death, which occurred in 1864. He raised six children, four now living in New Ashford, Florea, William P., Rhoda C. Phelps, and Sibyl N. Baker.

Uriah Mallery came here from Connecticut, or Rhode Island, at an early date, and settled on the farm which is now owned by Van Ness Mallery. He built the house now occupied by Van Ness, in 1794.

Henry Dewey moved from New Lebanon, N. Y., to New Ashford some time previous to 1800, settled near the center of the town, lived there till his death in 1859. He had a family of fourteen children, nine of whom lived to maturity. Three still live, a daughter, Betsey, in North Brookfield, Mass., another, Susanna, in Fairfax county, Virginia, and a son, William B., on road 4 in Lanesboro.

Jonathan Ingraham moved here from Pelham, Mass., about 1790, and located in the northern part of the town. He had served through the Revolutionary war, was at the battles of Stillwater, Cowpens, Valley Forge and many other important engagements, and died in New Ashford in 1847, aged eighty-six years. He had eight children, all now dead. His son, Elihu, was born here in 1792, living here till his death in July, 1868. He was a captain of the militia, an active, public-spirited man who held many town offices. He had a family of seven children, five now living, a son, George H., in Pittsfield, a daughter, Sarah E. Goodelle, in New Ashford, also a son, Elihu, the present town clerk and first selectman, and a daughter residing in Michigan.

Gaines Harmon came to New Ashford from Suffield, Conn., just before the battle of Bennington, in 1777, at which battle he was present. He settled on road 9, on the farm now owned by Elihu Ingraham, and died there about 1818. His son, Nathaniel, was born (it is so supposed) here in 1779, and lived here till near the close of his life, when he removed to Dalton, where he died in 1860. Nathaniel had six children, all living to maturity. Two still live, one son, Judge Nathan W., in Lawrence, Mass., and a daughter, Mrs. Dean, in New York State. One son, Phinehas, born here in 1802, was a resident until his death. In his early life he was a school teacher, was married in 1830 to Sarah A. Mallery, had eight children, was appointed justice of the peace about 1833 by Governor Lincoln, holding that office till 1882, and was town clerk most of the time from 1832 to 1867, besides being selectman. He died June 10, 1884, aged eighty-one years, eleven months.

Samuel Baker, a very early settler of New Ashford, lived in the southern part of the town on road 5, till he died about 1820. His son, Elihu, was born here in 1802, but removed to Hancock and finally to Bennington, Vt., in 1835, and he died in Cheshire about 1868. Six of his sons are residents of Berkshire county.

The Methodist church, located on road 3, was organized by its first pastor, Rev. Martin Ruter, at an early day. The church building was erected in 1828, and is now valued, including grounds, at $1,500.00.

NEW MARLBORO lies in the southern part of the county, in lat. $42^{\circ} 6'$ and long. $3^{\circ} 47'$, bounded north by Monterey, and Great Barrington, east by Sandisfield, south by Litchfield county, Conn., and west by Sheffield. It was granted in 1735, under the name of Township No. 2, the grant being brought about as follows: At the great and general court of Massachusetts Bay which sat at Boston from Wednesday, May 28, 1735, and was continued by several adjournments to the 31st of the following December, Edmund Quincey, Esq., from the committee of both Houses, made the following report:

“That there be four towns opened upon the road betwixt Westfield and Sheffield: That they be contiguous to each other: That they be six miles square and as near to said road as the land will allow: That there be sixty-three house lots of sixty acres each laid out in each township, in as regular, compact and desirable a manner as may be, one of which shall be for the first settled minister, one for the second, one for the school, and one for each grantee, and who shall draw equal shares in all future divisions; and also that said grantees shall appear and give surety to the value of £40 to perform all things on their lots and in their respective townships which had been required by the Great and General Court of grantees between the Connecticut and Merrimack rivers, and that there be a committee of five appointed, empowered and obliged to bring forward the line of the townships as is before provided.”

Immediate and active measures must have been taken for complying with the terms of the grant, for only two years after, June 24, 1837, the necessary surveying had been accomplished and a plot of the four new townships, numbered 1, 2, 3 and 4, and afterwards incorporated under the names of Tyringham, New Marlborough, Sandisfield and Becket, was presented to the house of representatives, accepted and confirmed to the grantees of the said townships “to them, their heirs and assigns forever; provided said grantees perform all the conditions of the grants.” The original grantees admitted into No. 2, or New Marlboro, was Caleb Rice and fifty-nine associates, among whom was undoubtedly Benjamin Wheeler, who became the first actual settler within the limits of the township. June 15, 1759, No. 2 was incorporated as a township under the name of New Marlborough, (since shortened by common practice to New Marlboro) taking its name probably from Marlborough, Middlesex county. The original area of the town was about 26,000 acres; to this was added small parts of Sheffield on three different occasions, viz: June 19, 1795, February 7, 1798, and April 19, 1871; and parts of Tyringham, February 27, 1811; while a part of New Marlboro was annexed to Monterey, May 24, 1851, and a part to Tyringham, February 11, 1812, so that the town now has about 28,000 acres.

The surface of the town is generally uneven and hilly, and like most of the elevated towns of the county is stony, though there are some very fine farming districts. It is watered by numerous brooks and ponds, the latter of which, Lake Buel, is the largest. It lies partly in Monterey and Great Barrington, being about two miles in length and one in width. George N. Gibson has a steamboat running on this lake, and also a fine grove at its south end, on road 1, which is a great resort for picnic parties. East, or Hermit pond comes next, about a mile in length and a half mile in width. It was named Hermit pond from the fact that a hermit by the name of Timothy Leonard, from Danbury, Conn., settled on its shore just prior to the Revolution, residing here in loneliness, with an insane abhorance of woman, until his death, June 17, 1817. Konkapot river, on Mill Run, the largest stream, has its source in Lake Buel and flows through the eastern part of the town, furnishing a number of fine mill-sites. The town also contained several points that are celebrated for the natural curiosities they contain. Among these is the "Tipping rock," located just south of the junction of roads 52 and 53. This immense boulder, weighing about fifty tons, is so nicely balanced on a pivotal point that a slight pressure will cause the immense mass to oscillate. Located on the southern line of the town, in a wild and picturesque spot, are Campbell falls, where the water falls over a precipice of one hundred feet or more. From whom, or what they derived their name we were unable to learn, though it is probably derived from some person or family by that name who resided near them. In the southwestern part of the town upon the farm of M. H. Mansir, there is quite an extensive cave, called the "Cat Hole." Dry hill is an elevation located in the northeastern part of the town. The early settlers in its vicinity found its rocks and stones so covered by a peculiar vegetable mold, as to completely hide them, causing the men to express a fear lest they should not be able to obtain stone enough in the vicinity for building purposes. This fear, however, was proved to be completely groundless, for the rocks here are of a peculiar flinty formation, and are so cut by nature as to be taken out of the quarries in nearly perfect cubes of different sizes. The name of the hill was derived from the fact that no springs or streams are found upon it. Its timber is mostly chestnut, of fine, compact grain.

Geologically, the formative rock is principally ferruginous gneiss, Potsdam and Lewis limestone. Iron, gold and silver ore exist in limited quantities. In 1880 L. J. Cleveland leased a strip of land on his farm, located on road 55, to J. B. Eldridge, William B. Gibson, William Sardam, and George W. Gibson, for the purpose of mining gold and silver thereon. These gentlemen have sunk a shaft twelve feet in diameter to a depth of twenty-two feet, developing ore of both kinds which assays about $28.00 to the ton. Gold was first discovered here in 1867. Upon the farm of Hiram Hotchkiss there exists a considerable deposit of iron ore. He has also a fine ledge of marble. In the westerly part of the town there is a valuable bed of white porcelain clay.

In 1880 New Marlboro had a population of 1,876. In 1883 it employed three male and fifteen female teachers in its public schools, at an average monthly salary of $25.50 for males and $21.40 for females. There were 347 school children in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $2,041.52.

MILL RIVER, a post village and the municipal center of the town, lies in nearly the center of the township, on Konkapot or Mill river. It has two churches, (Roman Catholic and Congregational), one hotel, three stores, town hall, grist-mill, two saw-mills, three paper-mills and about fifty dwellings. It is decidedly a manufacturing village, and has, within a mile, eight dams each with a head varying from seven to twenty-five feet, and aside from this is one of the loveliest villages in Southern Berkshire, and was the last to loose its business on account of remoteness from transportation facilities. The question of building a railroad to Caraan, Conn., to connect with the lines there, is being agitated, which, if it succeeds, will restore the village to its past importance.

NEW MARLBORO, a post village located about two miles east of Mill River, and the same distance north of Southfield, is the oldest community in the town. It has one church (Congregational), one store, the buildings of the South Berkshire Institute (now used as a summer hotel), and about twenty dwellings.

SOUTHFIELD, a post village located in nearly the central part of the town, has two churches (Congregational and Baptist), one store and about twenty dwellings.

CLAYTON, a post village located on the line between New Marlboro and Connecticut, has one store, a blacksmith shop, the Sheffield China Clay Works, and about a dozen dwellings. It came into the town along with the annexation from Sheffield in 1871.

HARTSVILLE, a post village located in the extreme northern part of the town, near Lake Buell, has one church (Methodist), one store, a machine shop, foundry, grist and saw-mill, and about a dozen dwellings.

Of the paper industry as carried on at Mill River, Hon. Byron Weston, of Dalton, gives the following history, appearing in The Paper World of November, 1880:—

“In 1836 a paper-mill was built at Mill River, by Wheeler & Gibson. It was burned the following year, and when rebuilt was located across the river from its first site, where it still stands, and where writing paper has been made by Wheeler & Gibson, Wheeler & Sons, Wheeler, Sheldon & Babcock, Gibson, Crosby & Robbins, George Robbins, Marlboro Paper Company, and the Brookside Paper Company. In 1838 or '39 John Carroll built a small straw mill on the privilege next below the Wheeler mill. In 1856 he made additions, improvements and changes, and began the manufacture of writing paper, but soon abandoned it for the manufacture of printing paper made from straw, the second mill in the country to make white paper from rye straw. In 1873 Mr. Carroll took into partnership with him James Goodwin, and they built another mill on the site below, which they bought from George Sheldon. These mills were afterwards operated by the Carroll Paper Company. In 1877 James Goodwin became sole proprietor and still runs the mills, making three tons of print paper per day. Above the old Wheeler mill, Beach & Adams, in 1839 or '40, built a small mill and made printing paper. The several proprietors have been E. C. Brett & Co., Adams & Brett, Paul Face, Wheeler, Sheldon & Babcock, Gibson, Crosby & Robbins, George Robbins, Marlboro Paper Company, and the Brookside Paper Company. In the same locality Messrs. Andrews, Sheldon & Adams built a mill for making manila paper in 1856. George Sheldon soon bought out his partner, and run the mill until 1872, when it was burned and the ruins were sold to J. Carroll & Company."

The Berkshire Paper Company.—The first mill built by John Carroll, about 1840, was burned in 1868, and immediately rebuilt. The lower mill, built by Sheldon & Adams in 1856, burned in 1872, and the ruins sold to J. Carroll & Company, was rebuilt by them in 1874. In 1876, on the death of Mr. Carroll, the company took its present name, with James Goodwin, president. They employ sixty hands, with capacity for turning out five tons of book paper per day.

Mill River Hotel, Frank W. Keyes, proprietor, is located in the midst of some of the finest scenery and best trout fishing grounds in Southern Berkshire, making it an extremely pleasant summer resort. Mr. Keyes, who is a popular host, has been here since 1879.

The South Berkshire Institute Buildings, located at New Marlboro village, which until lately were devoted to the uses of a popular educational institution, were built in 1856. They are now leased by Ira G. Tuttle, who conducts therein a fine summer hotel, capable of accommodating 120 guests, and containing fifty-two rooms arranged singly and in suites.

The Sheffield China Clay Works, located at Clayton village, were established by Orchabla Taft, in 1866, and in 1873 were taken by Robert L. Taft, the present proprietor. The clay is mined, washed free from sand and dried, when it is shipped to consumers a fine pottery clay, and for use in the manufacture of paper. Mr. Taft employs fifteen hands and turns out about 1,500 tons per annum.

F. G. Holt's saw-mill and box factory, on road 70, was built by McAlpin Bros., about 1844, and was bought by the present proprietor in 1871. The mill has the capacity for cutting 250,000 feet of lumber per annum.

Wallace Canfield's saw and planing-mill, located on road 73, was built about 1844, and came into Mr. Canfield's hands in 1876. It has the capacity for cutting 300,000 feet of lumber per year.

Hartsville machine shop and foundry, located on road 3, is the property of a stock company and is managed by G. T. Sheldon. It is operated in the manufacture of saw-mills and stump-pullers, and in all kinds of repairing.

John A. Doucaster's saw, grist and flouring-mill, located on road 3, was originally built in 1804, and came into the possession of Mr. Doucaster in 1870. It is supplied with an upright saw, two runs of stones, and does custom work.

John G. Calkins's saw, grist and flouring-mill, located on road 49, was built by W. Abbott, about 1830, and was purchased by Mr. Calkins in 1878. He does custom work and deals in grain and feed.

Walter Rote's grist-mill, located on road 44, was built in 1883. Mr. Rote does custom work and deals in grain and feed. He also makes cider.

William B. Gibson & Son's steam saw and shingle-mill, tub factory and cider and feed-mill, located on road 67½, was built by the present proprietor in 1865. The saw-mill has the capacity for turning out 200,000 feet of lumber per annum, while in the other departments he manufactures oak pails and tubs and cider jelly.

Dr. John Scoville's saw, shingle, planing and grist-mill, located at Konkapot, on road 58, was erected in 1856, and came into Mr. Scoville's hands about 1879. The grist-mill is leased to Edward B. Grant, while a cheese factory connected with the property is leased and operated by C. E. Burns & Co.

Chauncey B. Brewer's saw, shingle and cider-mill, located on road 24, has been owned by the present proprietor since 1876. It has the capacity for manufacturing 500,000 feet of lumber, 200,000 shingles, and fifty barrels of cider per annum.

Henry Sisson's saw, planing and pulp-mill, located at Mill River, came into his hands in 1857. He can manufacture 600,000 feet of lumber per annum.

Fred G. Alexander's grist and flouring mill, located on road 24, was built by the present proprietor's father in 1858. The mill has two runs of stones and the capacity for grinding 200 bushels of grain per day.

The first white settler in the town was Benjamin Wheeler, who remained here during the severe winter of 1739-40, engaged in clearing his farm, his nearest white neighbors being in Sheffield, a distance of ten miles. Near the outlet of Brewer's pond there was a small colony of Indians, who, like the other Indians of the county, were generally friendly, though they forbade Mr. Wheeler the use of his gun lest he should shoot deer with it, thus taking from him part of the means upon which he depended for support. During the following summer he visited Marlboro and returned with his family. In 1741 the settlement was strengthened by the arrival of Noah Church, Jabez Ward, Thomas Tattlow, Elias Keyes, Joseph Blackmer, Jesse Taylor, John Taylor, William Witt, Philip Brookins, and, soon after, Samuel Ryan, from Marlboro, and vicinity; in 1744-45, Joseph Adams, Charles Adams, Moses Cleveland, Nathan Randsford, Thomas Randsford, Solomon Randsford, and Jarvis Pike, from Canterbury, Conn.; Eli Freeman and four brothers, from Cape Cod; in 1745, families by the name of Sheldon, Wright and Allen, from Northampton, and Seth Norton, Ezra Sheldon, and ——— Harmon, from Suffield, Conn.; in 1746 William Alexander and John Thompson, from Dedham; and in 1760, Bullard and Rawson, from Meriden, Conn. In 1753, John Collar, grandfather of Deacon J. N. Collar, owned and occupied the farm now owned by Mrs. John P. Wadsworth. He served two campaigns as an officer in the Continental army in the defence of the colonies, and for several years as lieutenant-colonel in Ashley's regiment, in the Revolution. In 1754, Eben Smith, afterwards Captain Smith, of Revolutionary fame, Gershom Howe, Timothy Rober and William Keyes all owned and occupied lots in township No. 2, contiguous to the south line of the colony.

At the first drawing of lots, Wheeler drew No. 25, which remained in the family until about 1872. Lot No. 21 was set off for the first settled minister, No. 1 for the second, and No. 48 for schools. August 25, 1737, Nahum Ward, Esq., of Shrewsbury, was appointed and empowered by the house of representatives to assemble the proprietors of this township for certain specific purposes. He issued his warrant, convening said proprietors on November 29th, at the house of Jonathan Howe, inn-holder in Marlboro, Middlesex county, at which meeting Nahum Ward and Colonel Ephraim Williams were appointed a committee to petition the house. On the very next day they presented to his excellency, Jonathan Belcher, a petition setting forth that they had paid into the hands of the honorable committee of the court the sum of $\text{£}1,200$ for defraying the expense of surveying said township and for other necessary charges, and for the purpose of cultivating a good agreement with the Indian owners of said land; and that there might be no grounds for uneasiness, they had purchased said land of Tap-hen-han-new-ak, also Konkapot, chief of the Housatonic tribe, and sundry other Indians, "which deed is duly executed and acknowledged before the Hon. John Stoddard, the consideration being $\text{£}300$, and no tobacco or rum, which sum the proprietors had actually paid," making a total of $\$7,500.00$. The committee further stated that "the amount is greater than ever paid by any other proprietors," and closed by asking a "further grant of land," and that "the Konkapot deed may be approved and fully ratified."

On the 7th of the following December the house voted, in answer to this petition, that the deed from the Housatonic Indians "be and hereby is fully allowed and approved of, to all intents and purposes," and also, "that a further grant of 11,000 acres be made to the grantees of said township, upon condition that seven more families be added to the township," hence the second division.

October 31, 1738, the proprietors, at a meeting held at the house of widow Sarah Howe, inn-holder in Marlboro, a committee was chosen to make arrangements with suitable persons to raise a grist-mill in No. 2. At a subsequent meeting the committee reported a failure to accomplish the purpose; but in June, 1739, a contract was made with Nathan Ward to build both a grist and saw-mill on "Iron Works river," now Mill river. In consideration of this service he received $\text{£}120$ in money and fifty acres of land. Ward first gave bonds in the sum of $\text{£}500$ to keep the mills in good repair and running order for twelve years, when the money was raised for him by taxing the lots $\text{£}2$ each. A grant of twenty acres of land was also made to Joseph Blackmer, "to encourage him in raising a grist-mill," and at the same meeting a cash appropriation was made for the purpose of raising "the town stock of powder, lead and flints." The last vote at this, as well as the other pro-proprietors' meetings, was to instruct the treasurer to "pay the shot to Landlady Howe," which was usually £1 2s. 3d.

In 1741, Samuel Bryan, Noah Church, Jesse Taylor, Phineas Brown and Nathan Randsford were appointed a committee to "locate the meeting-house," procure the ground for the same, and to raise the building. They located this important structure on lot No. 22, having first procured of Adonijah Church a deed of three acres of land, "for to set the meeting-house on." By vote of the proprietors, the building was to be forty feet long and thirty-two feet wide, with a twenty-foot shed. The contract was probably let to one Thomas Tatilow, though the records fail to state such fact. July 17, 1744, the proprietors being duly assembled at widow Howe's, it was voted among other things, "to accept of the choice of the inhabitants of No. 2 of the Rev. Thomas Strong to settle in the work of the Gospell ministry in said township," and choose Dr. Benjamin Gott, Abraham Williams, and Jabez Ward to prepare articles of settlement and salary, and report at a future meeting. Subsequently the committee reported that the Rev. Mr. Strong have a settlement of £150, old tenure, and an annual salary of £50 in bills of credit, "so long as he proves faithful." The committee report was accepted, both by the proprietors and Mr. Strong, and on October 31, 1744, the first church was formed, with five members, viz.: Moses Cleveland, Samuel Bryan, Jesse Taylor, William Witt and Joseph Adams, and on the same day the Rev. Mr. Strong was ordained pastor. In the same year, 1744, special grants were made to Elias Keys and Moses Cleveland, "to encourage them in the building of mills upon Iron Works river, in township No. 2."

Prior to 1749, all proprietors' meetings were held in Marlboro, Middlesex county, 125 miles distant, on account of Indian troubles attending the first French and Indian war. The next ten years, up to 1759, was employed in forwarding the settlement of No. 2; but on June 15th of that year, that township ceased to exist, and New Marlboro took its place. At the first town-meeting, held soon after, the following officers were elected: Jabez Ward, Solomon Randsford and Jesse Taylor, selectmen; Elihu Wright, town clerk; Jesse Taylor, treasurer; Zenas Wheeler, clerk of the market; Ozias Pike, constable; and "a suitable number of tythingmen." The first born in the town were twins, a son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Brookins. The distinction of having brought the first wagon into the township is a matter of dispute between the descendants of Capt. Solomon Hart and Capt. Samuel Bryan. The first newspaper subscribers in the town were Edward Stevens and Harvey Holmes, the latter of whom is now a resident of Great Barrington. The first native of the Emerald Isle to become a resident of the town put in his appearance in 1839, in the person of Timothy Wrinkle. It is said, that although there was nothing in his appearance or demeanor to distinguish him from any other ordinary man, and although he went quietly to work in the Wheeler paper-mill, no elephant broken loose from a caravan could have created a greater excitement. The people flocked up the valley and down the hill-sides to catch a glimpse of the first Irish resident.

The attitude taken by the town relative to the Revolutionary struggle was early and decidedly developed. At a town-meeting assembled on the second Monday of July, 1774, the following resolutions were passed:—

Resolved, That King George the Third is our rightful king, and that we will bear true allegiance to him :

Resolved, That the inhabitants of this, his Majesty's colony in America, are justly entitled to the rights and liberties that the inhabitants of Great Britain are entitled to : which rights and liberties have been particularly confirmed to the inhabitants of this Province, by charter :

Resolved, That it is one of the grand rights and liberties of said inhabitants of Great Britain that they cannot constitutionally be deprived of their property but by their own consent :

Resolved, That the late act of British Parliament for giving and granting to his Majesty a duty upon all tea imported into America, which duties by said act are made payable in America, for the purpose of raising a revenue within the same, was made without the consent of the inhabitants of America, whereby their property is taken from them without their consent and therefore ought to be opposed in all legal and prudent ways :

Resolved, That it is the undoubted right of the inhabitants of said colony in all actions to be tried by their peers of the vicinity, and therefore all those acts of British Parliament that in any way respects the collection of duties aforesaid, whereby the trial by jury is taken away, or whereby the ancient trial is in any way altered, are unconstitutional and oppressive :

Resolved, That when any franchises and liberties are granted to a corporation or body politic, those franchises and liberties cannot be legally taken from such corporation or body politic, but by their consent or by forfeiture, that the inhabitants of this province have divers grants and liberties, and valuable franchise granted to them by charter, which franchises and liberties have not been forfeited or relinquished by said inhabitants, thereby the late acts of the British Parliament the most valuable of those franchises and liberties of the said inhabitants are taken from them without even the form of a trial, therefore :

Resolved, That it is the indispensable duty of every person who would preserve to himself and to posterity the inestimable blessing of liberty by all constitutional ways and means in his power, to endeavor to avert the much dreaded consequences of those arbitrary and oppressive acts, and that for that purpose it is prudent for the inhabitants of said colonies to enter into an agreement not to purchase or consume the manufactures of Great Britain under such limitation and exceptions as shall be agreed upon, and that such non-consumption agreement is neither unwarrantable, hostile or treacherous, or contrary to our allegiance to our king, but tends to promote the peace and safety of the community."

In the war of 1812, New Marlboro responded promptly to the call of the country, and during the summer of 1814 Captain Joseph S. Catlin was in command of a company formed by detachments from several militia companies with Luke Harmon for lieutenant, Benjamin Smith, Jr., ensign, and Jonathan Arnold, fifer.

The town's expenditure on account of the late war, which was never reimbursed, was $25,778.53. The soldiers' record of the town bears the names of 202 men, 21 of whom were killed, or died of wounds, during the service. One hundred and nine enlisted in Massachusetts regiments, twenty-four in Connecticut regiments, and the rest elsewhere. At the close of the war there was standing to the town's credit, over and above all calls, a surplus of twenty-two men.

Jehiel Baldwin, a descendant of Nathaniel, who came to this country from England about 1620, came to New Marlboro in 1744, settling on road 40. He reared a family of seven children, of whom his eldest son, David, married Lois Churchill, and remained on the old homestead, rearing six children. David, Jr., his second son, married Esther Morley for his first wife, by whom he had two children, William R. and Isaac H., and by his second wife, Electa Heath, four children, Edward C., Esther E., Edwin R. and Henry M. For twenty years William R. has carried on business in Southfield, where he had his store burned three times, and has also been engaged in the manufacture of whips for several years. He has been a justice of the peace for the past five years. Edward C. was engaged in the whip business for a number of years, and was president of the company for some time. Esther married Martin Van Deusen, and resides in the town. Edwin R. resides on the old homestead, which has been in the possession of the Baldwin family 140 years. He at present is employed by B. The youngest, Elizabeth, still lives with A. J. Freeman, son of Heman, upon the old homestead.

Timothy Leonard, or "Hermit Leonard," as he was called, was a very eccentric person who came to New Marlboro from Danbury, Conn., just previous to the Revolution, locating near East Pond, with the intention, it is said, of bringing his intended bride thither in the following autumn. Upon returning to Danbury, for her, he found that she had married his brother. This so worked upon the feelings of the man as to partially destroy his reason. He returned to his lonely cabin, where he lived the life of a hermit during the remainder of his days, denouncing all womankind as false, dying in June, 1817, aged about seventy years. He was buried near the cabin that had served as his solitary abode for so many years though his body was subsequently disinterred, it is supposed, and found its way to the dissecting table. In signing his name to any document, he always used the following phrase, clearly demonstrating his insanity: "I, Timothy Leonard, God of Gods and Lord of Lords."

Seth Sheldon, one of the first settlers in New Marlborough, removed from Northampton, Mass., to this town, in 1745, locating on the farm now owned by John Alexander. His son, Seth, born in this town July 13, 1784, married Hannah Lyman, of Southampton, who is still living at the age of

He married, first, Abigail Austin, August 1, 1709, she being a daughter of Thomas Austin, of Norwalk; and second, Abigail Dean, May 9, 1711. He died in September, 1712. She being very sensitive to noise, they built a small house for her away from the street, and in which she was burned one morning while the family were at breakfast. In 1793 the little church of five members which had been planted in the wilderness, forty-nine years before, and which had been guarded from heresy by Rev. Thomas Strong, Rev. Caleb Alexander and Jacob Catlin, had gathered in strength so that they were under the necessity of building a new meeting-house, which they did, removing its site from Mill River to Southfield. This was done the same year and is still in use. The next year, 1794, Ebenezer Smith, Esq., by order of the legislature, divided the town into two parishes. The early pastors of the second church were John Stevens, Nathaniel Turner and Sylvester Burt. The church building will comfortably seat 275 persons, and is valued, including grounds, at $7,000.00. NORTH ADAMS lies in the northern part of the county, in lat, 42° 40', and long. 3° 53', bounded north by Clarksburg, east by Florida and Savoy, south by Adams and west by Williamstown. This town, originally including the township of Adams and known as East Hoosac, has already been spoken of in connection with the sketch of Adams, where the story of the early grant, early settlement, and a topographical description, etc., are given, bringing us down to April 16, 1878, when the old town of Adams was divided, the southern half retaining the old name and the northern half taking that of North Adams, which its enterprising metropolis had for so many years honorably borne.

The surface of the town is exceedingly rough and broken, except through the valley of the Hoosac; but there are still some very good farms, though in general the township is emphatically a manufacturing district. Upon the east lies Hoosac mountain, with its "mighty-bore," a good description of which is given in connection with the sketch of Florida, while upon the west lie mountains of the Greylock group, of which "Godfrey Greylock" speaks as follows:—

"The isolated mountain range between the Hoosac and the Taghconics now generally known as the Greylock range, is not so much a chain as an intertangled cluster of mountains in the towns of Adams, North Adams and Williamstown; from which a spur strikes southward through New Ashford, Cheshire and Lanesboro, to Pittsfield. The main cluster has a length, from east to west, of about six miles, and an average altitude of perhaps twenty-four hundred feet above the surrounding valley. It consists of seven distinct peaks and ridges rising above a common base. The highest peak—the Greylock, from which the cluster takes its name—is upon the east, and has an elevation of about 3,500 feet above sea level, or 2,600 feet above the valley of the Hoosac, at its base on the north and east."

Between these mountains, flowing through the narrow but fertile Hoosac valley, is the Hoosac river, which enters the town at about the center of its southern boundary and flows a northerly course to North Adams village, where it is met by the North Branch, whence it flows almost a direct westerly course into Williamstown. On this stream and on the Branch are many fine mill-sites, not a few of which are utilized. The only other stream of importance is Notch brook, which flows a northerly course through the eastern part of the town, uniting with the Hoosac at Braytonville. This brook furnishes the North Adams village water-works with pure, cool water. Among the other elevations of importance in the town are Mount Hawkes, and Williams and Adams hills. Among the curiosities that Dame Nature's eccentric work-people have deftly constructed is the "natural bridge." "This is located," says one writer, "about a mile northeast of the village, near the line of Clarksburg, where Hudson brook has worn a channel thirty rods long, and in some places sixty feet deep, through a quarry of white marble. The mass of rock terminates towards the south in a steep precipice. Down this precipice it appears, the water once fell; but finding in some places natural chasms, and in others wearing away the rocks themselves, it has found a passage, from thirty to sixty feet below its former bed. The mean breadth of the channel is about fifteen feet. Two masses of rock—one of which lies ten or twelve feet above the other—under which the water has made its way, lie like bridges across the channel. The upper bridge is now much broken. Under the lower one, which is beautifully arched, the stream has sunk its bed nearly fifty feet." "The walls of the ravine," says another writer, "are perpendicular cliffs of pure white marble, highly crystalline in coarse granulation—a dolomite susceptible of a fine edge under the chisel. They are mottled all over, from top to bottom, with indentations of various shapes and sizes ; but oftenest circular and concave, like a saucer, with an average diameter of eight or ten inches, making a very pretty arabesque fret work. But, small or large, the indentations were evidently made by rolling pebbles kept in motion by the waters of the sinking stream." Near the bridge there is a small cave that often attracts the curious, while another is found about a mile south of the village.

The geological structure of the town is made up of rocks of talcose-slate limestone and mica-slate formation, disposed in nearly equal parallel ranges extending north and south, the limestone deposit occupying the center, including the valley of the Hoosac.

From the school superintendent's last report we make the following abstract : Population of North Adams in 1880, 10,292 ; number of children between five and fifteen years of age, May 1882, 2,720 ; increase from last year, forty-two ; number of different pupils enrolled during the year—boys 1,227, girls 1,257, total, 2,484 ; decrease from last year, eight ; average number belonging, 1,844.9 ; increase from last year, 45.3 ; average attendance, 1,734.3 ; increase from last year, 56.7 ; number of pupils between five and fifteen not attending school during the year, 346 ; whole number of different teachers employed during the year, fifty-four ; number in regular teaching force, forty-eight ; total cases of tardiness for the year, 731 ; decrease from last year, 258 ; average number of each pupil, .39 ; decrease from last year, .15 ; number not tardy or absent during the year, thirty-eight ; value of school houses and property, $130,500.00.

NORTH ADAMS, known also by the sobriquet of the "Tunnel City," is a bright, pleasant, decidedly business-like post village located in the northern part of the county on the Hoosac river. It has, aside from its many manufactories, fine churches, rows of business blocks, convenient hotels, spacious union depot, and elegant private residences, four banks, and two flourishing weekly newspapers, The Transcript and The Hoosac Valley News, the history of the latter two of which, as well as of the several railroads which center here, and of the Hoosac tunnel, is given in the county chapter at the beginning of the volume. The nucleus about which this enterprising town has been built was the grist and saw-mill erected here by Ephraim Williams, in order to fulfill the conditions attending the grant of 200 acres of land made him by the general court, viz. : "that he should reserve ten acres for a fort, and build a grist and saw-mill, and keep them in repair for twenty years," as previously mentioned on page 88. Down to about the first quarter of the present century, there had been gathered about this nucleus a village of about a thousand souls, as follows, to quote from a writer of that time :—

"The north village now contains three houses of religious worship, one for Baptists, one for Methodists and one for Congregationalists. It has seven factory buildings, seven stores, two taverns, a printing-office, a post-office, an iron furnace, three blacksmith shops, one tin shop, six shoemakers, one silversmith and jeweler, three milliners, two tailors, one hatter, two saddle and harness makers, three carpenters and two sleigh and wagon makers. There are other mechanics in the village, who keep no regular shops, such as carpenters and joiners, brick layers, etc., and there are other shops connected with the different factories, for working wood and iron, which are not embraced in this list. The village contains eighty-seven dwelling houses, occupied by 105 families, which, including all employed in the factories, mechanic shops, etc., number not far from 1,000 souls."

This is surely not a bad showing for a New England village of that early day; but now, in conjunction with what we have already said, read the following from "Godfrey Greylock's" Taghconic, and draw your own conclusions of the Tunnel City of to-day:—

"But I think bright, busy, bustling, dashing North Adams, with its lively streets and peculiar surroundings, will show off well in this cool, clear atmosphere. * * * * To my mind, the most notable thing in this fine old town, or its bright village, is the people: not to disparage some very noble scenery, or perhaps the most remarkable natural curiosity in the commonwealth; and, least of all, to speak lightly of the grand tunnel. But North Adams is, I verily believe, the smartest village in 'the smartest nation in all creation:' the concentrated essential oil of Yankeedom. As you pass through its streets, you see evidence of this great truth everywhere; in the shops, in the manufactories, in the hotels: and, if these do not convince you, there will be no room for doubt when you come to the Hoosac Tunnel."

The area covered by the village is, in some places, exceedingly rough and hilly, so that one has here the advantage (and disadvantage) of immediate hill, cliff and mountain, and also fine views of far-reaching, magnificent mountain scenery. The village is well protected against loss by fires, having a fair water-supply and an excellent fire-department, the North Adams Fire District having been incorporated Monday, February 4, 1845.

BLACKINTON is a small post village and manufacturing center located in the northwestern part of the town, on the line between this town and Williamstown. The village has also a good free library and a fine union school. The library was established in 1859, by the formation of a society with O. A. Archer, president. A tax of fifty cents per annum was at first charged for drawing books, but since 1878 it has been free. It has 1,400 volumes, with O. A. Archer, librarian. The Blackinton Union School was established in 1873, by a special act of the legislature authorizing a Union Graded School. The building, erected that year, is a two-story wood structure and cost $10,000.00. The school has now about 275 pupils, with Frank Ketchum, principal.

The following officers were chosen: N. S. Babbitt, president, and O. J. Brown, secretary and treasurer, and the plan of holding monthly meetings adopted. These meetings the society has continued to hold, with good, practical results and an increased fraternity feeling. Several prominent members have died during the time, including Drs. Howkes, Phillips, and Lawrence, of North Adams, and Drs. Sabin and Duncan, of Williamstown. The society now has a membership of eighteen, extending south into Cheshire and north into Pownal and Stamford, Vt. The present officers are Homer Bushnell, president; A. F. following gentlemen as incorporators : Clement Harrison, Edward R. Tinker, and Rodman H. Wells. In 1876 the records of the society were destroyed by fire, so the data of the early proceedings of the society are difficult to obtain. The first president, however, was Hon. Joseph White, of Williamstown, who held the office two years. He was succeeded by Sylvander Johnson, of North Adams, 1862-63 ; Daniel Upton, of South Adams, 1864-65 ; Asahel Foote, of Williamstown, 1865-66 ; Benjamin F. Mills, of Williamstown, 1866-69 ; John M. Gallup, of North Adams, 1860-69 ; H. Clay Bliss, of North Adams, 1869 to the present time. The society has had its grounds and track located in North Adams badly damaged by freshets at different times, rendering it necessary to build a new track, and remove its buildings, entailing considerable expense, so that at the present time it owes $3,600.00. In other respects it was never in a more flourishing condition, the receipts for the past year being larger than those of any former year. The building, consisting of a large exhibition hall, a barn with twenty-two stalls for horses, a judge's stand and a grand stand, were erected some five or six years ago by an association, and at the expiration of ten years are to revert to the society. They are all in good repair and were newly painted in 1883.

The early settlement, etc., of the town having been noticed on page 95, we will turn our attention immediately to the building of old Fort Massachusetts.

As soon as the declaration of war between England and France was proclaimed at Boston in June, 1744, orders were issued by Governor Shirley for the building of a line of forts, more effectually to protect the western frontiers of Massachusetts from the ravage of the Indians. Of the routes which had been pursued by the enemy in the former wars in approaching the frontiers from Canada, the most northern was by the river St. Francis, through Lake Memphremagog, in Vermont, thence by portage to the Passumpsic river, and down that river to the Connecticut, and thence to the settlements bordering the banks of the latter stream. Sometimes the enemy, having sailed down Lake Champlain, as far as Whitehall, would proceed up Pawlet river to its sources, thence across the mountains to West river, and down that stream to the Connecticut. At other times they would approach that river by following up Otter creek to its sources. In 1724 Fort Dummer had been built on the Connecticut, where Brattleboro, Vt., now is, as an obstruction to the Indians in their northern march into Massachusetts.

The forts which Governor Shirley commanded to have built extended from Fort Dummer to East and West Hoosac, now North Adams and Williamstown, and was located in the following towns: Fort Massachusetts, in North Adams; Fort West Hoosac, on the public square in Williamstown; Fort Shirley, in Heath; Coghnan's and Rice's forts in Coleraine; and Sheldon's fort, in Bernardston. In the latter place, as well as in Coleraine, several houses were stockaded, and at Northfield and Greenfield the old defenses were repaired. The western cordon of forts was placed under the immediate command of Capt., afterwards Col. Ephraim Williams, who established his headquarters at Fort Massachusetts. Col. John Stoddard, of Northampton, commander of the militia regiment in the county of Hampshire, was charged with the general defense of the same quarter.

The rations allowed the garrison forces on the frontiers were, for each man, one pound of bread and half a pint of peas or beans per diem; two pounds of pork for three days, and one gallon of molasses for forty-two days. Marching forces were allowed a pound of bread for each man; the same of pork, and a gill of rum per diem. Parties were kept continuously ranging from fort to fort on the line between Forts Dummer and Massachusetts, and thence to Pittsfield, for the purpose of ferreting out the Indians, and companies of large dogs were trained to scent their trails. To induce soldiers to engage in this kind of warfare, a bounty of thirty pounds each was offered on Indian scalps. The officer who commanded a "scalping expedition," was required to keep a fair and correct journal of his marches and operations, and return it to the government of the province.

Fort Massachusetts was located near road 3, as numbered on our map, or the main road leading from North Adams to Williamstown, about four miles from the present village of Williamstown, upon a meadow of the Hoosac river, now a part of the Harrison farm. Its immediate site is marked by a large elm tree which was planted by Prof. A. L. Perry, of Williams college, in 1859. During the year 1744 no very important demonstrations were made by the enemy, and none within the reach of the forts, and even during the following year, 1745, the vigilance of the scouts was rewarded with no discovery of, or collision with, the enemy. But May 6, 1746, as Lieut. John Hawks and John Miles were riding out from the fort, they were fired upon by two Indians and wounded. Miles made his escape to the fort; but Hawkes fought for sometime and might have taken both prisoners, had he understood their language, for it was afterwards learned that they both asked for quarter. On the 11th of the following month, June, a party of the enemy attacked a number of men who were at a distance from the fort, and a skirmish ensued. After sustaining the fire a few minutes, the enemy fled, having lost one of their men. Elisha Mims and Gresham Hawks were wounded, and Benjamin Tenter was taken captive.

No attack then took place until the 20th of August, when an army of French and Indians under Gen. De Vaudreuil, their number being variously estimated at from 800 to 900, appeared before the fort. A more unfortunate time for the garrison could not have been chosen, as its ammunition was nearly exhausted, and there were but twenty-two able men in the fort. The French general made propositions to Sergeant John Hawks, then temporarily in command of the fort, to surrender, but he declined, thinking, perhaps, that succor might reach him during the time which he might be able to delay his surrender. The attack was accordingly commenced, and the brave little garrison defended the fort against forty times their number for forty-eight hours. During all this time the enemy were kept at a respectful distance, and some of them were shot, at the long range of sixty rods, when they supposed themselves entirely beyond the arm of danger. At the end of this long and most gallant defense, the ammunition of the garrison became exhausted, and no choice but a surrender was left, and even then the commander of the garrison made his terms. One of the conditions was that none of the prisoners, numbering thirty-three men, women and children, should be delivered to the Indians. DeVaudreuil made the pledge, and the army next day, under the pretence that the Indians were mutinous in consequence of withholding prisoners from them, one-half of the number were delivered over to them, and one of the number was immediately killed, in consequence of his being too sick to travel. The garrison lost but one man in the attack, while the enemy lost, in killed and mortally wounded, forty-five. The fort was destroyed and the captives marched to Canada, where they all, except the murdered man, arrived in safety, being treated as humanely as circumstances would allow. Twelve of them, however, were taken sick and died there, while the remainder, with other prisoners, arrived at Boston on August 16, 1747, nearly a year after their capture, under a flag of truce, and were redeemed. This affair, one of the most gallant in the whole history of the frontier wars, has invested the locality of old Fort Massachusetts with patriotic associations, such as attach to few of the points made interesting by having been the scene of border struggles, and is regarded and spoken of with affectionate pride by those living in its vicinity. That Sergeant Hawks would never have surrendered if his ammunition had not failed him is very certain, and, as it was, the victory won by DeVaudreuil was no subject of boasting.

The fort was rebuilt during the following winter and spring, and on the 25th of May, while it was in progress of erection, there being several hundred people present, an army of the enemy came on with the design of hindering the undertaking. About a hundred men had been sent to Albany a few days before for stores of provision and ammunition. As these were approaching the fort on their return, a scout was sent forward, who, upon coming within sight of the fort, discovered the enemy and began an attack, which gave alarm to the people at the fort, who had not yet discovered the enemy. A few issued out and maintained a small skirmish, until the enemy fled. The people remained at the fort, and the commander of the party with the wagons were much blamed for not affording assistance, and were charged with cowardice. In this action three persons were wounded and a friendly Indian from Stockbridge was killed.

On the 1st of October following, Peter Burvee was captured near the fort; and on the 2d of August, 1748, about 200 of the enemy appeared at the fort. It was then under the command of Captain Williams. A scout was fired upon, which drew out the Captain with about thirty men, and an attack was begun, which continued for some time; but finding the enemy numerous, Captain Williams fought upon the retreat until he had regained the fort. The enemy soon withdrew, but with what loss is not known. A man by the name of Abbott was killed, and Lieutenant Hawley and Ezekiel Wells were wounded. Colonel Williams was killed at Lake George, September 8, 1755, and afterwards a Captain Wyman had charge of the fort. The last sanguine affair at the fort, at which we have mention, was on June 7, 1756, when Benjamin King and a man by the name of Meacham were killed, this being during the second French war.

We have already stated, on page 95, that some of the first settlers of the town had been soldiers located at Fort Massachusetts. One of these a John Perry, had settled here, built for himself an house, and had cleared a small farm at the time the prisoners were captured, of which he was one, August 20, 1746. His house and effects, it seems, were destroyed, and a short time after his release from captivity he petitioned the general court for compensation for his losses. This quaint petition, which we print below, it seems, however, was disregarded by the court. It is dated November 5, 1747, less than three months after the return of the captives:—

“Whereas, your Honors’ humble Petitioner enlisted in the service of the country, under the command of Capt. Ephraim Williams, in the year 1745, and was posted at Fort Massachusetts, in Hoosuck, and upon ye encouragement we had from ye late Col. John Stoddard, which was that if we went with our families, he did not doubt but that ye court would grant us land to settle on, whereupon I, your Honors’ humble petitioner, carried up my family with my household stuff and other effect, and continued there till we was taken, when we was obliged to surrender to the French and Indian enemy, August the 20th, 1746. I would humbly lay before your Honors the losses I sustained, then, which are as followeth:— A house which I built there for my family, £80; two feather beds with their furniture, £100; two suits of apparel apiece for me and my wife, £150; two brass kettles, a pot of pewter with tramel tongs and fire slice, and knives and forks to ye balance of £20; one cross-cut saw, £20; and one new broad-ax, £6; three new narrow axes, £8; two steel traps, £14; two guns, £32; one pistol, £5; one one-hundred weight of sugar, £20; total, £457, with a great many other things not named. The losses your humble petitioner hath met with, together with my captivity, hath reduced me to low circumstances, and now humbly prayeth your Honors of your goodness to grant him a grant of land to settle upon near ye forts, where I fenced, which was about a mile west of the fort or elsewhere, where your Honors pleaseth, and that your Honors may have a full reward hereafter, for all your pious and charitable deeds, your Honors’ humble petitioner shall always pray.

This date places John Perry as the first settler in the Hoosac Valley, though he never came back here. Among the early settlers of Egremont, however, was a John Perry, who possibly may have been the one in question. The estimates he made on his property, it must be remembered, was in “lawful money,” that is, colonial bills made legal tenders, and these, during that very year, were being redeemed by Massachusetts at the rate of eleven for one silver dollar.

Jeremey Slye removed to North Adams from Rhode Island, at an early date, coming some time previous to 1784. He located on a portion of the farm now owned by his grandson, Addison M., where he resided until his death in 1854, rearing a family of five children, of whom but one, Mrs. Lydia Howland, of Palmyra, N. Y., survives. A son, Ira, born here in 1805, lived upon the homestead until his death in 1880, and was the father of eight children, five of whom are now living, one son, Addison, occupying the old homestead. A daughter, Mrs. Martha Bowen, resides in Adams.

Otis Blackinton immigrated to this town from Attleboro, Mass., in 1782, located about three miles from the village, and followed farming as a business. He reared a family of ten or eleven children, four of whom are still living. He died while on a visit to Attleboro. One son, Sanford, was born in Attleboro, in 1798, but has spent his life in this town. He has been engaged in manufacturing a great many years, and is now president of the Glen Woolen Company, also of the Blackinton Woolen Company. He is president also of the Adams National bank, and for many years has been one of the most prominent business men of the town.

James Paul, of Connecticut, came to this town about 1786, and located on road 18. He was an extensive farmer and land holder. Of his family of eight children, one, David, now resides in Indiana. James died about 1828. Joseph, another son of James, came here with his father when about four years of age. When a young man he was a school teacher. About 1816 he married and settled on the farm where his father first settled, where he resided until 1852, rearing four children, all of whom are now living, and one of whom, George R., succeeds to the homestead.

Elisha Kingsley came to this town from Swansea, Mass., about 1790, locating in 1810 on road 23, where he died in 1849. Two sons, Elisha and Henry W., reside in North Adams, Henry occupying a farm adjoining that formerly owned by his father.

William Wilbur came to this town about 1800, located upon the farm now owned by his grandson, L. S. Wilbur, rearing a large family. His son, Smith, was born in town in 1804, and resided here until his death in 1879. Two of his children, Mrs. Emily Ballou, of Adams, and L. S., residing in this town, on road 20, survive.

The Congregational church of North Adams.—The early settlers, most of whom were from Connecticut, immediately established the institutions of religion, in accordance as well with their uniform policy, as with the conditions attached by the general court to the conveyance of the township. They built a meeting-house of logs, on a site at the corner of the roads near the southern line of the town. A church was formed, and Rev. Samuel Todd settled as pastor, but at what date is not known, as the records are lost. It was probably, however, in 1766; at least Mr. Todd came into the town in the autumn of that year. The change in the character of the population, which must have occurred soon after Mr. Todd's settlement, withdrew from him his support, and put a stop to his labors. A vote of the inhabitants was taken, January 3, 1778, proposing to him to relinquish his claim to the ministerial lands, and to receive his dismissal, but, while he acceded to the latter clause, he retained the lands. Mr. Todd was a native of North Haven, Conn., and graduated at Yale college in 1734. The first church probably existed, with him as pastor, for about ten years, and then became extinct. For a period of twenty years after the dismissal of Mr. Todd, there was no society in the town except that of the Friends, which was formed in 1781. About 1782 the people of North Adams, comprising the remnants of the defunct Congregational church, with others of similar sentiments, joined in putting up and covering the frame of a meeting-house a few rods south of the village, which stood unfinished and unused until 1794, when it was moved into the village and finished. But it was not until April 19, 1827, that the present church was organized, Rev. J. W. Yeomans being the first pastor. Their fine brick church building, located on Summer street, was completed and opened during the following year.

The First Baptist church of North Adams, located on Church street, was organized under the ministry of Elder George Witherell, with twenty-two members, October 30, 1808. Their first church building, however, was erected ten years previous, in 1798. It did service until 1828, when it was succeeded by another, which was used until 1848, and the present structure was erected in 1880. It will comfortably accommodate about 1,000 persons, and is valued, including grounds and other property, at $100,000.00, the original cost of the church being about $50,000.00. The society now has 900 members, with Rev. A. C. Osborn, D. D., pastor. The home Sunday school has 600 scholars and the five mission schools about 100 each.

The Methodist Episcopal church, located on Church street, was organized by Rev. Mr. Lewis, of Petersburg, N. Y., with twenty members, in 1824. Rev. Friend Draper being the first pastor. Their first church building, erected in 1828, did service until 1842, when it was superseded by the present brick structure, which will seat 1,500 persons, cost $65,000.00, and is valued, including grounds, etc., at $75,000.00. The society now has 650 members, with Rev. J. W. Thompson, pastor. The Sunday school has 400 members.

St. John's Episcopal church, located on Summer street, was organized by William Tatlock, Stephen H. Tyng, Jr., the students of Williams college, and some others, in 1856, the Rev. Benjamin F. DeCosta being the first rector. In 1857 a church building was erected of wood, which was succeeded in 1869 by the present stone structure, which will seat about 350 persons, and is valued, including grounds, at $26,000.00. The society now has 140 communicants, with Rev. Harry I. Bodley, rector. The Sunday school has 191 scholars and fifteen officers and teachers.

The Blackinton Union church, located at Blackinton, was organized by its first pastor, Rev. John Alden, in 1843, with twenty members. The church building, erected in 1871, will seat 300 persons, and is valued, including grounds, at $12,500.00. There are now about 150 members here, the pulpit being supplied by Rev. T. T. Munger, S. McKean and A. C. Osborn, of North Adams. The church building was erected by Sanford Blackinton and donated to the village.

OTIS lies in the southeastern part of the county, in lat. $42^{\circ} 12'$ and long. $3^{\circ} 56'$, bounded north by Becket, east by Blandford in Hampden county, south by Tolland, in Hampden county, and Sandisfield, and west by Tyringham and Monterey. It was made up by uniting the old town of Loudon and the district of Bethlehem. Loudon was incorporated as a township in 1773, from what was previously known as Tyringham Equivalent, a tract granted to the proprietors of Tyringham, as an equivalent for losses sustained by them. It had an average length of seven miles from north to south, and three miles from east to west, comprising an area of about 13,000 acres, 2,944 of which lay at the bottom of ponds, and was bounded as follows: North, by Becket, east, by Blandford, south, by West Granville, now Tolland, and west by Bethlehem. The latter section was incorporated as a district, June 24, 1789. It was originally called the "North Eleven Thousand Acres," with reference to Southfield, which was called the "South Eleven Thousand Acres," and which was also incorporated as a district, June 19, 1797, and united with Sandisfield February 8, 1819, and both of which tracts, with the exception of a few individual grants, belonged to the four towns of Tyringham, New Marlboro, Sandisfield and Becket. The "North Eleven Thousand Acres," or Bethlehem, was about four miles square, bounded north by Becket, east by Loudon, south by Sandisfield, and west by Tyringham. The tracts thus described, then, Loudon and Bethlehem, were incorporated, under the name of Loudon. This name was retained only for a short period, however, for at a town meeting held in May, 1810, it was proposed to have the name changed to Mountville, "or by some other name, at the discretion of P. Larkson, Esq.," who was at that time their representative in the general court. In June he obtained for the town its new name, selecting Otis, in honor of Harrison G. Otis, of Boston, then speaker of the House of Representatives. As Bethlehem was three miles shorter than Loudon, and Sandisfield extended as far east as Bethlehem, the north-east corner of Sandisfield is only about half a mile south of the center of Otis, thus appearing on the map to greatly overlap the township.

The surface of the territory, lying among the highlands as it does, is elevated and broken, rendering much of the land unfit for purposes of cultivation, while the soil is not, in general, of a good quality, except for grazing purposes, as the rocks, being of a granitic character affords but small contributions to it by disintegration. Tilley's mountain is the highest peak, affording a fine view of the beautiful scenery with which the town is replete. The Farmington river flows a southerly course through the central part of the town, affording, with its tributaries, many excellent mill-sites. It rises in Becket, formed by the union of two streams in the northern part of that town. There are also several large, beautiful natural ponds, as Great Lake, of 335 acres, Parish pond and Rand pond, forming a chain in the eastern section of the town. They are connected by a stream called Fall river, which, after leaving the last pond, falls over a precipice of sixty or seventy feet, forming a charming cataract, after which the stream passes through a deep defile into Farmington river. Hayes pond lies in the northwestern part of the town. These bodies of water, aside from lending a charm to the surrounding landscape, afford a home for many of the finny tribe, attracting numerous disciples of Walton; There are yet remaining about 3,381 acres of woodland, the forests consisting mostly of beach, birch, maple, ash and hemlock. Pine and whitewood were once quite plentiful, but are now scarce.

The geological structure is made up almost entirely of rocks of calcareous gneiss formation. Iron ore has been mined at one place, but owing to the marshy character of the surrounding land, the enterprise was soon abandoned. Near the center of the town, or about half a mile west of it, there is a large rock having an opening or cavity in it, where crystals of quartz and iron pyrites have been found. The cavity in this rock was formed, it is said, in a singular manner. About one hundred years ago, the tradition affirms, Daniel Summer, while passing in the vicinity of this rock, heard a sudden loud explosion, so violent as to hurl fragments of rock a distance of fifteen or twenty rods. Investigation discovered this rock, with its newly made fissure, black and discolored. It was supposed the explosion was caused by the combustion of hydrogen gas.

In 1880 Otis had a population of 785. In 1883 the town employed thirteen female teachers in its public schools, at an average salary of $18.84 per month. There were 175 school children in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $1,111.55.

OTIS CENTER (p. o.) is a post village located in the central part of the town, on Farmington river, along which it extends for nearly a mile. It has two churches (Congregational and Episcopal), one hotel, town-hall, which contains a town library and school rooms besides a hall, two stores, tin shop, blacksmith shop and about twenty dwellings.

EAST OTIS is a hamlet located in the southeastern part of the town on very uneven ground. It has a saw-mill, blacksmith shop, hotel, and about half a dozen dwellings.

WEST OTIS (p. o.) is a hamlet located in the southwestern part of the town. It has a church (Baptist) and two dwellings.

Clark Chandler's saw-mill, located on road 12, on Farmington river, has been owned by Mr. Chandler about thirteen years. He runs it about nine months in the year.

William Tinker's tannery, located about a mile north of Otis Center, on Farmington river, employs five men. The power here was first used in 1785, though for operating a tannery only since 1830.

William H. Stow's saw-mill, located on Farmington river, about a quarter of a mile north of Otis Center, is said to occupy one of the oldest water-powers in the town. Mr. Stow is a resident of Winsted, Conn.

Fay & Williams's saw-mill, located at Otis Center, manufactures lumber, shingles, lath, etc., doing a large business and employing a number of men.

Henry B. Norton's saw-mill, located at East Otis, does a large amount of custom work.

Isaac L. Bristol's rake factory, located on road 2, was first used as such in 1845. The saw-mill just above it was first used about 100 years ago.

The settlement of the town was commenced about 1851, by a few families locating in the eastern part of Loudon, though the precise date of their migration is not known. Among the first settlers were David, Stephen, and Isaac Kibbee, soon after followed by Paul Larkeom, Dan Gregory, Jeremy Stow, Ephraim Pelton, George Troop, Ebenezer Trumbull, Jacob Cook, Timothy Whitney, Jonathan Norton, and Smith Marcy. The Kibbee's and Larkeom were from Enfield, Conn., Pelton from Greenville, Whitney from Petersburg, Norton from Suffield, and Marcy and Troop from Woodstock, Conn. At a later period Bethlehem began to be settled, its first inhabitants being Daniel Sumner, Thomas Ward, Phineas Kingsbury, Adonijah Jones, Ebenezer Jones, Miles Jones, John Spear, John Plumb, James Breckenbridge, and Robert Hunter, most of whom were emigrants from Palmer. The Jones, however, were from Connecticut, and accessions to the settlement were made from time to time from that State. In 1791, at the taking of the first census, the returns show the town to have had 605 inhabitants. Ten years previous to this, however, in 1781, Loudon had only forty-seven men capable of bearing arms, as the town at that time was called upon for three men for service in the army, and the names given in from which they were to be selected only aggregated this number. This shows that the settlement must have been rapid during that decade, owing, probably, to the close of the war and return of peace.

In 1774 the first vote for a move towards establishing educational facilities was taken. During this year, also, was made the first interment known to have occurred in the old cemetery in the southeastern part of the town, though there were probably burials there at an earlier date. The first road, or path, made through the town was in 1759, by Gen. Amherst and his army, while on their way to Albany, from Boston. He stayed one night each at Westfield, Blandford, Sandisfield, and Monterey. For many years after the Revolution this road was called "the great road from Boston to Albany," and was the only road from those places crossing directly Berkshire county. Burgoyne's army, after the surrender at Stillwater, passed over this road on their way to Boston, and remained three days in Otis, where they buried one of their soldiers. A few deserters remained in the town, and an officer was left here sick. He resided here several years after, teaching school, though he finally returned to England.

John Davison, a Revolutionary soldier, was born November 28, 1763, and was one of the early settlers of this town, locating on a farm on road 29. In 1865 he came to Otis, and purchased the tannery of Jonas A. Stone & Co., which he has since operated. Mr. Tinker has held several town offices, and in 1880 was representative of the 5th Berkshire district to the general court. He has four children, one of whom, Richard, is a physician of Manchester, Conn.

Heavy Artillery and served eighteen months. He returned from the war in June, 1865, and has since been a resident of Otis. He married Ruth W. It has an area of about 27,000 acres, which was erected into a township as follows: June 2, 1762, nine townships were sold at auction in Boston, among which was "Township No. 2," whose territory included the present town of Peru and parts of Hinsdale and Middlefield, in Hampshire county. No. 2 was purchased by Elisha Jones, for £1,460. Subsequently, Oliver Hartridge, of Hatfield, became associated with him in the ownership of the grant, and in his honor it was named Partridgefield, being incorporated under this title July 4, 1771. March 12, 1783, a part of its territory was taken, in connection with portions of Becket and Washington in this county, and of Worthington, Chester and Prescott's grant, in Hampshire county, to form the township of Middlefield, of that county. The remainder of the town was divided in 1795, the western part being incorporated as the "Westerly Parish of Partridgefield," which, June 21, 1804, was erected into the township of Hinsdale. Two years later, June 19, 1806, the name of Partridgefield was changed to Peru, since which time no changes have been made in its territorial limits.

Lying upon the summit of the Green Mountain range, the surface of the town is wild, rough and mountainous, with scenery wild and romantic, but with a soil that is hard and rocky, rendering the locality poor for farming, though it is excellent for grazing and stock-raising purposes, while it has 2,398 acres of valuable woodland. The highest point of land is French's mountain, rising to a height of 2,239 feet, near the center of the town, and affording a prospect that is grand and extensive. It was an important station during the late trigonometrical survey of the State. There are a number of streams, though they are small, as they have their source here, flowing east into Hampshire county, and west into Hinsdale. This water-shed is so remarkable that the water from the roof of the Congregational church, at Peru village, finds its way from one side into Westfield river, while from the other it unites with the Housatonic.

The rocks that make up the geological structure of the town are principally of gneiss and mica-slate formation, though the town has a quarry of excellent limestone.

In 1880 Peru had a population of 403. In 1883 it employed twelve female teachers in its public schools, at an average salary of $18.60 per month. There were seventy-two children in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $616.67.

PERU, a post village located on a hill near the central part of the town, at the junction of roads 21, 15, 13 and 22, has a church (Congregational), town house, store, and half a dozen dwellings.

Robert McCray's saw-mill, located on road 16, operated by both steam and water-power, was built about forty years ago, though there has been a mill on the site for a hundred years. Mr. McCray manufactures lumber, shingles and lath.

Jewett H. Geer's saw-mill, located on road 32, built in 1860, is operated by steam and water-power. Mr. Geer manufactures lumber, shingles and cloth-boards. His was the first steam power ever in the town.

The settlement of the town was commenced in 1766, by Henry Badger, from New Jersey, and by Nathaniel Stowell, who came in about the same time, from Connecticut. About this time, also, Peter, Daniel and Nathan Thompson, from the eastern part of Massachusetts, located in the town, and were followed soon after by Ebenezer Pierce. The first town-meeting was warned by William Williams, the warrant being directed to "Cornelius Thayer of Partridgefield, in the county of Berkshire, yeoman," and was held August 13, 1771, at the dwelling of Nathan Watkins. The list of officers chosen on this occasion was as follows: Nathan Fisk, moderator; Nathaniel Stowell, town clerk; Cornelius Thayer, Michael Darling, and Capt. Francis Miller, selectmen and assessors; Cornelius Thayer, treasurer; Ebenezer Southland, constable; Henry Badger, sealer of weights and measures; James Watkins, sealer of leather; David Miller, Nathan Watkins, Phineas Watkins and Peter Tompkins, highway surveyors; Jedediah Benton and Thomas Whitney, fence viewers; Abraham Blackman and Daniel Walker, field viewers; Ebenezer Pierce and Henry Badger, Jr., tything men; Thomas Miller and Daniel Chapman, wardens; Wilson Torrey and Moses Little, deer Reeves; Edward Kibby and Josiah Fish, hog reeves; and Sylvanus Smith and John Lesuer, surveyor of clapboards and shingles.

The first team to cross the mountain into the town was in 1767, the route taken by them subsequently becoming the turnpike from Albany and Pittsfield to Northampton and Boston. The church was organized in 1770 and the first church building erected in 1780. Several of the inhabitants served in the war of the Revolution, among whom were Capt. Nathan Watkins, Joseph Badger, and Nathaniel Stowell. These and many others belonged to the company of minute men who marched upon the Lexington alarm, under the command of Watkins. They were enrolled in Col. John Pater-son's regiment, stationed at Fort No. 3, in Charlestown, at the time of the battle of Bunker Hill.

William, Amasa, Thomas and Lemuel Frissell, four brothers were among the very earliest settlers of Peru. Lemuel located on road 9, where J. P. Sennett now resides, and died there. He reared five children. His son, Frank, passed his life on the homestead, and built the house which Mr. Sennett now occupies. None of Lemuel's family survive. Thomas located on the place where E. E. Keeler now lives, on road 7, where he resided until his death. He, also, had a family of five children, none of whom are living except Statira, who became the wife of William Bowen, and resides on Peru hill in the village. Amasa, who resided on road 7, in the house now owned by Mr. Mattoon, of Lenox, was thrice married, having by his first wife four children, viz.: Judeth, who was a missionary to the Indians, and died in Arkansas; Mason, a graduate of Williams college, who became a lawyer, removed to Missouri, where he became a county judge, and died there; John, who graduated from Williams college with the degree of A. B., in 1831, became a physician and surgeon and now resides in Wheeling, West Virginia; Socrates was a farmer who passed most of his life in Peru, but died in Middlefield. Amasa had, by his second marriage, two children, Amasa C. and Elizabeth. Amasa C., a minister, is in New York city, in the employ of the American Tract Society, and Elizabeth married and removed to New York city, where she died. Socrates, son of Amasa, married Mary Scott, of Peru, and reared a family of ten children—Emerson, Addison, Mason, Mary, John, Dwight, Edward I., Martha, Ralph, and Joseph B. Of these Emerson married and had born to him a family of three children and is now living in Worthington, Hampshire county; Addison died in infancy; Mason is a physician and dentist in Minneapolis, Minn., and reared two children; Mary became the wife of Joseph Knight, removed to Lakeville, Conn., and had five children, dying in 1883; John, who resided in Kansas, was twice married, reared a family of five children, and died in 1884; Dwight, who resides on road 17, married Ann Eliza Rockwell, of Peru, and had born to him seven children, four sons surviving; Edward I. died in Florida during the war; Martha resides, with her second husband, in Chester, Mass., and has had two children; Ralph, a hardware merchant in Syracuse, N. Y., married in Eastern Massachusetts, and has had three children; Joseph B., a resident of Clinton, Ia., has a family of four children; William, brother of Amasa Frissell, had a family of three children, and died in Peru.

David Brown was one of the early settlers in Peru, coming here from Rhode Island. He was the father of four children,—Solomon, Daniel, Oliver and Sally. Solomon married Sally Gilbert and was blest with a family of eleven children—Elijah, Dolly, Rhoda, Cynthia, Orrin, Allen, Electa, John, Reuben, Urial and Sarah, and died in Peru. Elijah died in Pittsfield, having reared a family of seven children; Dolly married in Hinsdale, had three children, and moved to Illinois, where she died; Rhoda, who had a family of five children, was married and died in Hinsdale; Cynthia has been twice married and is now living with her second husband, in Cheshire. She has no children; Orrin, a resident of Peru, has been twice married, rearing nine children; Allen, who married in Canada, is living with his third wife, and has had eleven children; Electa, who married and died in Pownal, Vt., had five children; John was twice married, became the father of ten children, and is now living in Hinsdale with his second wife; Reuben, who had six children, married in this town, but is now a resident of Minnesota; Urial married in Vermont and has had seven children. He now resides on road 2; Sarah, who married in Pownal, Vt., where she now resides, has had seven children; Daniel, son of David Brown, removed to Hinsdale, where he died, having had eight children born to him. Olive, who married and resided in this town, but died in Hinsdale, had nine children. Sally, who made her home in Canada, died there, having had a family of nine children, making ninety-one descendants of David Brown.

Nathaniel Stowell, who immigrated to Peru, from Pomfret, Conn., between 1764 and 1768, accompanied by three sons, located on the place now occupied by Dea. Stowell. He reared four sons and six daughters—Cyrus, Henry, Daniel, Azel, Molly, Clara, Lucelia, Experience, Lois and Aletheia. Cyrus, born in Connecticut, was twice married, having by his first wife one child, and by his second, four. He was a farmer, and represented Peru in the legislature for thirty years. Cynthia, his first child, married Capt. Elisha Rockwell and lived and died on the old homestead, on road 13. Henry was twice married, having by his first wife twelve children, Austin, James C., Hiram, Caroline, Franklin, Aletheia, Cynthia, John M., Henry E., Susanna, Esther A. and Margaret P. Of these Austin married and died in 1825. James C. was married three times, having, by his first wife one son, who is a resident of Hartford, Conn. A daughter by his second wife is married and is also a resident of Hartford. James C. is now residing on road 25 with his third wife, Harriet Bacon, of Peru, by whom he has had one son, who died in the army. Hiram, brother of James C., died at the age of twenty-four. Caroline married Elijah Wentworth, of Hinsdale, and had two sons, both of whom are married, Merrick living in Chatham, and Milo in Hinsdale. Franklin married, for his first wife, Lydia Graves, of Middlefield, and reared three children,—Almond, who resides in Candor, N. Y.; Austin, who married Hyla C. Watkins, of this town, by whom he has seven children, and now occupies the farm formerly occupied by his father, Franklin, off road 18; and Lydia J., wife of Dwight Geer, of Middlefield, who has three children. Franklin married, for his second wife, Sarah Bowen, of this town, who died in 1878 childless. Aletheia married Horace Streeter, of Hinsdale, and had four children, and removed to New York State where she died. Cynthia, widow of Elijah Wentworth, of Hinsdale, has had two children, and is a resident of Hinsdale. John M. married Melissa Ferguson, by whom he had three children, two being dead, and a daughter now residing in Blandford, Mass. He had, by his second wife, Elizabeth Smith, of Becket, one child. They have also adopted a son, Charles I. Stowell, who resides with them. Henry E. married Betsey Stannard, of Lee, who is now dead, and was the father of nine children. Susanna is now dead. Esther A. married, had one child, and removed to Worthington where she died. Margaret P., wife of Seldon Ferguson, was the mother of three children. She removed to Hinsdale and died there. Hervey married for his second wife, Mrs. Jerusha Herrick, who died November 5, 1883, at the age of ninety-six, and who bore him one child, which died young. Daniel, brother of Hervey, reared a family of six children, and removed to Illinois, where he died. Azel married in this town, reared seven children, and immigrated to New York State where he died. John M., son of Azel, married in Kentucky. He is Mayor of Milwaukee, Wis., and has had three children, two now living. Molly married David Ide, had a family of six children, and resided on the farm, on road 18, where Austin Stowell now resides, both Molly and David dying there. Clara, who married and went to New York State, had four children. Lucelia married and removed to New York, dying there. Experience also married and moved to New York, where she died. Lois became, by her second marriage, the second wife of David Ide, of Peru, and died there. Aletheia was the second wife of Rev. John Leland, pastor of the Peru church. Cynthia had five sons and one daughter, Lorenzo, Pitt, Cyrus, Eunice, Dwight and Jarvis. Lorenzo died single in Peru; Pitt went to the West; Cyrus married Mary Pierce, and removed to New Hampshire; Eunice married and removed to Hinsdale; Dwight married and resides in Northampton; Jarvis married in North Adams, where he now resides and has a family of two children. He is judge of the district court. The 105 descendants of David Stowell here recorded doubtless fall short of the true number.

Amasa Rockwell, who removed to Peru from Connecticut, about 1780, and located on road 13, where T. Grace now resides, was married three times, having by his first wife six children, Elisha, Polly, Levi, Haven, Martha and Amasa. Elisha, whose whole life was passed in Peru, was the father of nine children. Polly married in Hinsdale, had a family of ten children, and died there. Levi married in Peru, afterwards emigrating to Ohio, where he died. Haven was married, lived and died in Ohio. Martha died when a young lady. Amasa, Jr., married in New London, Conn., and died there. Amasa, Sr., reared by his second marriage four children, Julius P., William H., Enretta, and John C. Julius P. married in Lanesboro, lived and died in Pittsfield. William H. married in Hartford, Conn., and removed to New York city, where he and his wife died. Enretta has been twice married, both husbands being now dead. She resides in Chester, Mass. John C. married in Hartford, Conn., and is now a resident of Pittsfield. By his third marriage Amasa had two children, a son, who died in infancy, and a daughter, Ann Eliza, who married Dwight Frissell, residing on road 17, and has had seven children, four sons of whom are now living.

Col. Joseph Thompson, from Brimfield, Mass., came to this town soon after the Revolution, but left his family here about a year afterwards to look after some land which he had purchased in Ohio. He had a family of two sons, Amherst and Artemas, and four daughters. Artemas built the house where William S. and Sylvester S. Brown now reside, and kept a tavern here eight or ten years. He was the father of six children. His father, Amherst, born in Brimfield, Mass., came to this town with his father. He reared a family of ten children, Sally, Joseph, Abigail, Amherst, Jr., Almira, Smith, John, Lovina and Angeline. One died while young. Sally married and had a family of eleven children, removed to Ohio, and died there. Joseph, who lived and died in Peru, had two children. Abigail married and removed to Wisconsin, where she died, having had a family of five children. Amherst, Jr., married in Northampton and finally removed to Chicago, Ill., where he died. He reared six children. Almira married and went to Michigan, where she still lives. Smith married in Windsor, and has always resided here, on road 20, upon his father's farm. He has two children. John, president of the Chase National Bank, in New York city, has three children. Lovina, who married in Plainfield, but subsequently removed to Michigan, is the mother of five children. Angeline married in Montreal, where she now lives and has three children.

Steward Shumway, born in 1807, came to Peru from Belchertown, Mass., about 1826, and married Mary Leland, of Windsor, where he has since resided, rearing a family of eight children,—Charles S., Caroline M., Catherine, Caroline M., 2d, George D., Henry L., Edwin and John W. Charles S. died on board ship, while going from Australia to South America. Caroline, Catherine and Caroline, 2d, died when young. George D. moved to Ohio, where he married and still resides. Henry L. also married and resides in Ohio. Edwin married Julia Norcott, of Becket, for his first wife, and Charlotte P. Edwards, of Windsor, for his second, and resides on road 21. John W. died here, at the age of twenty years.

The Congregational church, located at Peru village, was organized by eight or ten of its original members, in 1770, Rev. Stephen Tracy, from Norwich, Conn., being the first pastor. Their first house of worship, a wood structure, erected in 1780, was superseded by the present edifice in 1808.

This building will comfortably accommodate 600 persons, and is valued, including grounds, at $4,500.00. The society has eighty-nine members, with Rev. J. M. Lord, pastor.

PITTSFIELD, the shire town of the county, lies in the western-central part of the same, in lat. $42^{\circ} 27'$ and long. $3^{\circ} 45'$, bounded north by Lanesboro, east by Dalton and Washington, south by Washington, Lenox and Richmond, and west by Hancock. Owing to conflicting grants, the township became the joint property of Col. Jacob Wendell, of Boston, Col. John Stoddard, of Northampton, and Philip Livingston, of Albany. Col. Wendell was an ancestor of the late Wendell Phillips and of Oliver Wendell Holmes, and both he and Stoddard were prominent actors in the early Provincial proceedings. Colonel Stoddard was one of those to open the settlement of Sheffield, to establish the mission at Stockbridge, and was also a commander of militia during Queen Anne's war. In consideration of this and other services the general court granted him, in 1734, one thousand acres of "unappropriated lands in the county of Hampshire," as a reward for his "great services and sufferings for the public in divers journeys to Albany, and the eastern parts, upon public affairs; his serving in war with good success; his transactions with the Canadian and other western Indians; and his entertaining of them at his own house without any expense to the Province." The act was passed by the legislature, December 17, 1734, and was duly confirmed, though the report of the survey was not submitted until June 22, 1736, giving the bounds of the grant as follows:—

"Lying on the main branch of the Housatonic river, about sixteen miles north of Capt. Konkapot's house; beginning east ten degrees, south eighty perch from two hemlock trees, marked (which trees stand upon a ridge of upland running northerly), and coming to a point a few rods from said trees, which are about ten rods from sand bank on the east side of said Housatonic river, just above Unkamet's or Autankamet's road, where it crosseth said branch; and, from the end of the aforesaid eighty perch from said trees, it runneth north ten degrees, east two hundred and forty perch; thence west ten degrees, north four hundred perch; thence south ten degrees, west four hundred perch; thence east ten degrees, south four hundred perch; and thence north ten degrees, east one hundred and sixty perch, to the eastern end of the first eighty perch."

It seems, however, that Mr. Stoddard considered this as not adequate compensation for his "great services and sufferings," placing his estimate at about a full township. With this idea in view, then, he not only extinguished the Indian title to his 1,000 acres, but also that to a large area adjoining it, corresponding nearly with the land comprised within the area of Pittsfield of to-day.

In the meantime, and before the Colonel was able to procure legislative confirmation of his newly acquired acres, they were granted to other parties, under circumstances as follows : In June, 1735, Boston petitioned the general court for a grant of "three or four townships" of the wild land of Hampshire county, "to be brought forward and settled as the circumstances of the petitioners might seem to require, or upon such conditions as the court might deem meet," to assist that town in its heavy expenditures in supporting the poor and maintaining its free schools.

This request was favorably received by the court, and three townships were granted, under title of Boston townships 1, 2 and 3, No. 1 corresponding with Charlemont of to-day, No. 2 with Coleraine, and No. 3, with Pittsfield. These grants were made June 27, 1735, and in June of the following year, 1736, township No. 3 was purchased at public auction by Col. Jacob Wendell, he paying £1,320 therefor. In September, 1738, the township was surveyed by John Huston, a Northampton civil engineer, and December 8, 1738, his plot of the new town was accepted by the general court, its bounds being described as follows:—

"Beginning at a stake with stones about it, the south-east corner, nigh a small Run of water, about a mile and a Half East Housea Tunnick River; from said Stake the line extends North 20° 462 chains 31 links to a Hemlock tree marked on a Hill, the north-east corner; From thence the line runs west 20° 520 chains to a Beach tree marked upon a steep Hill, with stones about it, the north west corner; From thence south 20° west 462 chains 31 links to a Hemlock Standing by a little brook, marked with stones about it, being the south-west corner; From thence east 20° south 520 chains to the Stake and stones first mentioned, which said Township is lying about five miles north-north-east From the Indian Town on Housatunnick River, in the County of Hampshire."

These bounds not only covered Colonel Stoddard's 1,000 acres, but also the additional territory he had purchased or leased of the Indians, and nearly two years elapsed, after the confirmation of Wendell's title, before these conflicting claims were adjusted; but in the mean time, a third party, Philip Livingston, of Albany, N. Y., was introduced as an interested party, as explained in the following extract from the mutual agreement between them:—

"Whereas the said John Stoddard hath not only a just and complete title to the thousand acres aforesaid, but hath also, at great expense, purchased several grants and leases from the natives, of the lands above described; and afterwards, this very day [March 29, 1741], the said Jacob Wendell, and the said John Stoddard, for an amicable settlement of their mutual claims and interests in the township aforesaid, agreed that the said Jacob Wendell should have two-thirds of the thousand acres aforesaid, and the said John Stoddard should have one-third of the rest of said township; * * * * and whereas also, the said Jacob Wendell, in all these transactions, purchased as well for Philip Livingston, of Albany, in the Province of New York, Esq. (by agreement not mentioned therein), as for himself, in equal halves, and, in his purchase and after-gratuities to the natives for their satisfaction and other charges upon the premises, disbursed the sum of £14,016, 3s, 3d, and for that now hath two third-parts of that whole tract of land surveyed and platted as aforesaid; now, therefore, know ye, that the said Jacob Wendell, in faithfulness to his trust aforesaid, and in consideration of the sum of $\text{£}758, 1\text{s}, 7\frac{1}{2}\text{d}$, in hand, received of said Philip Livingston in full of his part of said purchase-money and other disbursements aforesaid, doth hereby convey * * * * to the said Philip Livingston one-half of his above-mentioned interest."

The cost of the township was thus, allowing Stoddard's public services to count in ratio of Wendell's purchase money, $\text{£}2,174, 4\text{s}, 2\text{d}, 2\text{ far}$.

The proprietors immediately began their efforts to settle the town, but were peculiarly unfortunate. Livingston succeeded in inducing seventy Dutchmen, from Albany, to come into the town, but when they learned they were not to be allowed to pick the land they were to purchase, they immediately returned. Huston, the surveyor previously mentioned, also turned his attention to colonizing, and succeeded in inducing a number from Westfield to come on and purchase of Livingston the forty lots the Dutch colony had refused, they paying therefor $\text{£}1,200$. In the mean time troubles on the other side of the ocean were brewing, which resulted in war between France and England, in 1744, practically putting a stop to all further efforts towards forming a settlement, and it was not until 1749 that any further attempts were made. Colonel Stoddard had died the year previous, while misunderstandings and mistakes relative to ownership of property had made land-titles very insecure; this fact, when another influx of settlers arrived in 1752, led, June 23, 1753, to a petition being presented the general court "from the inhabitants of the township on the Housatonic river, commonly called Pontoosuc," praying for directions and assistance in unravelling the tangled skein, in response to which the court incorporated them as "The Proprietors of the settling-lots in the Township of Pontoosuc." From this time forward the name Pontoosuc was universally adopted, though previous to this the town had also been styled Wendell, or Wendell's Town, and sometimes Wendell and Stoddard's Town. But in 1761 the name was changed, and Pontoosuc became the incorporated town of Pittsfield, the act being approved April 26th of that year, the name of the town being selected in honor of the English statesman, William Pitt.

The surface of Pittsfield is moderately uneven, perhaps just enough so to afford a pleasing diversity, though it is almost entirely surrounded by mountain ranges, forming, as it were, an elevated basin of rare loveliness and fertility, with six sparkling lakelets glistening brightly in contrast with its varying tints of color and shade. But to the description of the beautiful scenery of this section we have already devoted considerable space, beginning on page 20, where we have quoted from a far more competent pen than ours. The principal stream is the Housatonic, which is formed just south of the village of Pittsfield, by two branches which come down from Lanesboro and Windsor. The other streams are Unkamet, Lulu, Smith, Phelps and Shaker brooks, with some others, affording many valuable mill privileges.

The six lakes spoken of above are to the pleasing landscape which Pittsfield presents, what dimples are to the cheek of beauty, where "smiles hide and linger." Lake Onota, lying in a pretty upland basin, a little more than a mile west of the village, is the largest, and is, indeed a handsome sheet of water. Before it was enlarged to serve as a reservoir, in 1864, it was a mile and three-quarters long, and three quarters of a mile wide, having an area of 486 acres, now increased to 683. This enlargement, while it of course increased the usefulness of the lake, also destroyed much that was of interest to the curious. Previous to this a causeway divided the waters into two independent lakes, the smaller one, about thirty-four acres in area, being formed by a beaver dam across its outlet. On the western shore the action of ice had thrown the scattered pebbles and bowlders into a wall, whose regularity was such as to lead to the tradition that it was built by the Indians, behind which to hide while shooting deer; and it is certain that it had been used for this very purpose, if not by the aborigines, by the early white inhabitants. The enlargement of the lake has submerged all this, though it has increased its picturesque features. The hill upon the southwestern shore affords a magnificent view, and is also an historical spot, as it was fortified during the old French and Indian wars.

Pontoosuc, the next in size, lies upon the town's northern border, the larger part of its surface extending into Lanesboro. This body of water had, also, its area changed, in 1867. Previous to this it was a mile and a quarter long, and at its broadest point three-quarters of a mile wide, covering an area of 425 acres. It now covers 575, the increase being chiefly in Lanesboro. This is an extremely handsome sheet, and its environs are picturesque in the extreme, while the view across it, in either direction, is surpassed by few. The Indian name of the lake was Shoon-keek-moon-keek, about which "Godfrey Greylock" has woven a beautiful Indian legend, in his Taghconic. It has also borne the name of Framingham pond, Lanesboro pond, North pond, and "Joe Keiler's farm." This latter name was derived from the anecdote that a wag of that name once bargained it away and actually made a deed of it, to a New York citizen, who mistook it, when covered with snow and ice, for a level expanse of land.

Richard lake, in the southwestern part of the town, lying partly in Richmond, was formerly nearly circular in form, having an area of ninety-eight acres; but in 1865 it was enlarged to 250 acres. Upon the old maps it is called South pond, and near it is marked another small body of water, long since drained, designated as Rathbun's pond, in reference to Vallentine Rathbun, who, about the year 1760, built clothiers' work near it.

Silver lake is the name given the pretty little sheet of water just east of the village. It now covers about sixty acres, having been enlarged in 1843, as one of the reservoir's of the Pittsfield Cotton Factory. It was known among the early settlers as Ensign's pond, from Jacob Ensign, who built the first fulling-mill in Pittsfield, and owned the land along the eastern borders of the lake. In later days a hat factory was erected on its northern shore, whence it took the name of Hatter's pond.

Goodrich lake about a mile east of Silver lake, is another secluded lakelet of about thirty acres. It appears on the old maps as "Sylvan lake." The meadow in which it lies was, on the earliest town plans, named "Unkamet's," after the celebrated Indian of that name. The present name of Goodrich is derived from one of the early settlers, who owned tracts of land in the vicinity.

Morewood lake is a lovely little dimple of about thirty-five acres, lying about two miles south of the village, and just east of South mountain—"a gem-like, crystal water, hidden among groves interlaced with frequent picturesque paths, that often debauch upon sunny lawns or gravelly beaches." It has for many years been the favorite haunt of some of the most celebrated men in politics and literature. It is located in the grounds of a broad-halled mansion, which has successively been the home of Henry VanSchaack, Elkanah Watson, Thomas and Robert Melville and the Morewoods, and has successively borne the names of all these owners. A few rods east of this there is another small lakelet, covering perhaps an acre or so, lying in the midst of a fine grove.

The geological structure of the town is made up principally of rocks of limestone formation, though there are some deposits of quartz and mica-slate in the eastern and southern parts, respectively. There is also considerable talcose-slate in the western part, extending over from the immense beds located in Hancock.

In 1880 Pittsfield had 13,364 inhabitants, and in 1883 the town employed five male and seventy-three female teachers in its public schools, to whom was paid an average monthly salary of $102.00 to males and $33.90 to females. There were 2,732 school children in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $27,700.00.

(THE PARK—PITTSFIELD.)

PITTSFIELD, the "City of Parks," and county seat of Berkshire, is a beautiful, pleasant and enterprising post village located in the central part of the town, with the two branches of the Housatonic lying, one on its eastern and the other on its western side. To the visitor its broad streets and walks, almost arched with the foliage of elm and maple, its public buildings and business blocks, its handsome stores, elegant residences and many evidences of public spirit and enterprise will at once find way into his favor, while a further acquaintance with its many beauties will force him to concur with "Godfrey Greylock" that it is "indeed a fair town; and, standing in the center of that magnificent panorama of hills which compose the county, it is embosomed in beauty. Branching from its central elm-shaded green, delightful avenues invite one into most picturesque regions." And these avenues, too, that so suggestively invite one to pleasant drives, extend into broad, fine carriage-ways which, take what direction you will, afford drives that in interest and beauty are excelled by none in the county.

Pittsfield village has a population of about 12,000 souls, among whom are men of might in politics, in literature, and in manufactures. It covers an area about a mile square, and requires only a vote of acceptance to become an incorporated city, as a bill passed the legislature several years since granting the town a city charter. It is, however, specially incorporated as "The Fire District." This act of incorporation was originally established for the support of a fire department, but afterwards was empowered to build and control water-works, sewers, sidewalks, and the like, and to maintain street-lights. The principal manufactures are woolens, cottons, machinery, clocks, tacks, etc.

The beautiful square in the center of the village was formerly the village green. The first attempt toward its improvement was made in 1824, and during the following year Mr. Edward A. Newton became very much interested in the enterprise. Many citizens joined him, and in 1827 the beautiful shade trees that now adorn it were planted. Improvements from time to time have since been made, a fine soldiers' monument and a fountain erected, until the fine park shown by the accompanying engraving has grown out of the the old "village green," or "common," where stood the Old Elm tree whose memory is dear to all of the elder citizens of Pittsfield, and whose lofty head, age and the lightning's scathing brand obliged the woodman in kindness to lay low in 1861, after having stood for nearly two centuries. From this little gem of a park branch North, South, East and West streets. To these wide, shady, well-kept avenues, and the handsome residences that line them, the village is largely indebted for its far-famed beauty. The residences are mostly spacious and handsome, and surrounded by beautiful lawns and shrubbery and magnificent trees. Among the prominent residences and other buildings may be mentioned, on West street, the W. C. Allen place, the Crook farm, the residence of A. J. Waterman, and the Bigelow and Governor Briggs homesteads; on South street, the residences of F. E. Kernochan, Rev. J. L. Jenkins, Frank W. Hinsdale, Hon. S. W. Bowerman, Josiah Carter, T. Harold, H. M. Peirson, the two Campbell places, Miss Salisbury's school and the high-school building ; on North street, the Berkshire Life Insurance building, the Central block, England's new building, the Academy of Music, St. Joseph's church, and many other fine structures, besides the residence of Thomas A. Oman, commanding a grand view of the northern valley, with Greylock's cloud-capped peak in the distance, and the Maplewood Institute grounds ; and on East street, the Athenæum, court-house, First Congregational church, St. Stephen's church, and the residences of the late Thomas Allen, the late Ensign H. Kellogg, Mrs. T. F. Plunkett, J. R. Wariner, E. D. Jones, Senator Dawes and others. The house of Mrs. Plunkett has also an undying charm, in that at the head of its broad stairs stood the clock which Longfellow immortalized in his poem, "The Old Clock on the Stairs." It was the summer home of the father-in-law of the great poet, and in it he spent many happy hours. Among the other residences that are striking in their beauty, are those of James H. Hinsdale, Thaddeus Clapp, Mrs. A. C. Joslyn, O. W. Robbins, and Col. Walter Cutting, and also Wendell Hall, Mrs. E. G. Baldwin's school for boys, all on Wendell avenue. Gold avenue has Mr. Learned's "Elmwood," J. L. Colby's "Chestnut Villa," and the residence of the late Judge Colt, and others. On Fenn street is the Methodist church, a grand brick structure. On Appleton avenue are the residences of James W. Hull, Dr. W. E. Vermilye and Mrs. John B. Ayers. But this catalogue might be greatly lengthened, and still omit many fine homes, while just beyond the village limits are many other fine places. Among these, to the southeast, is the Oliver Wendell Holmes place, owned by John A. Kernochan, and on the same road is Col. Richard Lathers's beautiful "Abby Lodge." South of this village is the summer house of the Moorewoods, mentioned on a previous page; north may be found "Spring-side," one of the most beautiful places in Pittsfield; just beyond it the summer home of the Davols, of New York; and still a little further north, George Y. Learned's attractive home; east is Mrs. Pollock's "Grey Tower," Mrs. Henry Chickering's residence, and just off the North Adams road, W. F. Milton's residence; and west is Mr. Buckingham's summer home, with unrivalled views. "Jubilee Hill," located in the western part, so-called from the "Berkshire Jubilee," held thereon in August, 1844, commands an enchanting view in all directions, and also has several elegant residences.

(COURT-HOUSE—PITTSFIELD.)

The town has also good banking facilities, several good hotels, and an excellent supply of water and gas.

GAS WORKS.

The Pittsfield Coal Gas Company was incorporated in 1853, but was not organized until April 4, 1854, the original capital being $40,000, which has been increased twice—once to $50,000 and again to $62,500. The chairman of the first meeting was George S. Willis, and the clerk, Robert W. Adam. The first president was Thomas F. Plunkett, with Robert W. Adam secretary and-treasurer. F. E. Taylor was elected treasurer in 1855, and upon his removal from town William R. Plunkett was elected treasurer and has had the active management of the company ever since. Robert W. Adam was elected president in 1856, and has held that office continually since. Among the persons who have been directors are Thomas Colt, Theodore Pomeroy, W. B. Cooley and C. C. Bulkley. At the commencement $4.00 per thousand was charged for gas. During the war the price was advanced to $5.00 per thousand; since that time it has been gradually reduced, until it is now $3.00, with a liberal discount allowed for prompt payment. The first superintendent was John Faulkner, who, at his death, was succeeded by his brother, Robert Faulkner. George S. Dunbar, the present superintendent, was employed in 1869. The works have been improved from time to time, and were much enlarged in 1873, about $34,000.00 being expended in new pipe and a new holder or gasometer which holds 70,000 cubic feet of gas. The capital stock was increased at that time $12,500.00. The company has for the last twenty years been very successful, and has claimed to furnish gas of as good quality, and at as low a price, as any other inland town in New England.

ASHLEY WATER WORKS.

The scarcity of good water was early a source of annoyance, owing to the prevalence of rocky ledges beneath the soil, rendering it almost impossible to sink wells that would afford any but surface water. The feasibility of constructing works so that an adequate supply might be afforded, was agitated before the beginning of the present century. The first effort was made by Charles Goodrich, who constructed an aqueduct upon his farm, which, however, proved a failure. The next enterprise in this direction was in 1795, when Simon Larned, John Chandler Williams, William Kittredge and Joshua Danforth were incorporated as "The Proprietors of the Water-works in the Middle of the Town of Pittsfield." This company erected works, but they seem not to have been very successful, and though repeated efforts were made, it was not until 1855, when the present works were erected by the Fire District, that any thing like success was attained. Water was taken from Lake Ashley, on the summit of Washington mountain, at a distance of six and a quarter miles from the village, affording a head of about 700 feet. Since then, in 1873, the "lower reservoir" was erected, and still later the supply was increased by water from Sackett's brook. The works have now about fifty miles of mains, while the village has seventy-six fire hydrants. The total cost of construction has been, according to the statement in Smith's History of Pittsfield, as follows:—

Original construction.....	$50,000.00
For re-laying and extending pipe prior to 1866.....	14,000.00
Extension of pipes after 1866.....	22,917.53
Re-laying street mains after 1866.....	28,772.63
New twelve-inch mains.....	45,423.32
Raising dam at Lake Ashley.....	2,186.88
Lower reservoir and dam in 1873.....	13,172.60
Addition of Sackett's brook.....	18,329.94
Total*.....	$194,802.90

BANKS.

Soon after the opening of the present century, when banking institutions were springing up in almost all of the little New England towns, Governor

*This total, however, was given in 1876; the entire expense up to the present time, July, 1884, has been $201,000.00.

Strong, in February, 1806, chartered the Berkshire Bank, the incorporators named being Simon Larned, Timothy Childs, Joshua Danforth, Daniel Pepoon, David Campbell, Jr., James D. Colt, Jr., Thomas Allen, Jr., Theodore Hinsdale, Jr., Ebenezer Center and Joseph Merrick. The capital stock was fixed at $75,000.00, all to be paid in gold and silver coin previous to October 6, 1806, and the issue of bills was restricted to $150,000.00. The bank was organized July 5, 1807, by choosing the following directors: Simon Larned, John W. Hulbert, Joshua Danforth, and Daniel Pepoon, of Pittsfield; Joseph Goodwin, of Lenox; Andrew Dexter, of Boston; and James D. Colt, Jr., of Pittsfield. Simon Larned was chosen president, and Ebenezer Center, cashier. A neat banking house was built where the Athenæum building now stands, and business was carried on until 1810, when the bank, owing to the dishonesty of Andrew Dexter, made a very bad failure. It seems that Mr. Dexter, to carry on gigantic (for those times) financial schemes in Boston, connected himself with country banks, from which to keep supplied with money. He represented to the directors of the Berkshire bank that he wished $200,000.00 in their bills, simply to place on deposit to satisfy the law in regard to private bankers, and not to be taken from the original packages nor put in circulation. The result of this unbusiness-like procedure is obvious. The directors found themselves in Lenox jail, in 1811, imprisoned for debt. When they were liberated, six gentlemen who, a few years before, were accounted among the most prosperous in Berkshire, returned to their homes pecuniarily ruined.

The Agricultural Bank was chartered in 1818, and is still doing a lucrative business. The incorporators named in the act were Nathan Willis, Joseph Shearer, David Campbell, John B. Root, Thomas Gold, Theodore Hinsdale, Jr., Lemuel Pomeroy, Henry C. Brown, Samuel D. Colt, Josiah Bissell, Jonathan Allen, Timothy Childs, Henry H. Childs, and Phinehas Allen. The capital was fixed at $100,000.00, and the par value of the shares at $100.00. Books were opened for the subscription to stock March 9th, and on the 27th of April, the stock being all subscribed, the stockholders unanimously chose the following board of directors: Thomas Gold, Nathan Willis, Josiah Bissell, Samuel D. Colt, and Henry C. Brown, who subsequently elected Thomas Gold, president, and Ezekiel R. Colt, cashier. The bank originally conducted its business in the building erected by the Berkshire bank; but in 1853 it removed to the building east, and in 1868 took up its present quarters in the Berkshire Life Insurance building. In 1851 the capital stock was increased to $200,000.00, and in 1865 it was made a National bank. Its present capital is $200,000.00 with a surplus fund of $250,000.00, the officers being J. R. Warriner, president; J. N. Dunham, vice-president; Irving D. Ferry, cashier; and J. R. Warriner, Jabez L. Peck, Edwin Clapp, J. N. Dunham, William R. Plunkett, Josiah Carter and W. M. Crane, directors.

The Pittsfield Bank was chartered in April, 1853, with a capital stock of $150,000.00. The first meeting of the stockholders was held in May, 1853, when the following directors were chosen: David Carson, John V. Barker, Gaius C. Burnap, Robert Pomeroy, Henry Stearns, Thomas Colt, and George W. Platner, who elected David Carson, president, and Junius D. Adams, cashier. In March, 1854, the capital was increased to $300,000.00, and in May, 1857, to $500,000.00. In June, 1865, it was re-organized, as the Pittsfield National Bank, with an authorized capital of $1,000,000.00. The bank has now a capital of $500,000.00, with a surplus of $200,000.00. The officers are Julius Rockwell, president; John V. Barker, vice-president; Henry Colt, Z. Crane, Jr., A. J. Waterman, James M. Barker, C. V. Spear, John D. Carson, and D. A. Clary, directors; E. S. Francis, cashier, and Henry A. Brewster, teller.

The Berkshire County Savings Bank was incorporated in 1846, the original incorporators being Henry Shaw, Thomas A. Gold, Thomas F. Plunkett and Charles Sedgwick. These incorporators met on the 28th of March, when forty gentlemen from all parts of the county were elected associate members of the corporation. April 29th the following officers were elected: Henry Shaw, president; Charles M. Owen, Phineas Allen, Samuel Rossiter, Sanford Blackinton, vice-presidents; Thomas A. Gold, secretary; and Jason Clapp, Jabez Peck, Thomas F. Plunkett, Thaddeus Clapp, George W. Campbell, Solomon L. Russell, Comfort B. Platt, Stephen B. Brown, Zenas M. Crane, Henry W. Bishop, George W. Platner, Samuel Gates, John C. Russell and Socrates Squier, trustees. At the first meeting of the trustees, June 3, 1846, James Warriner was chosen treasurer. The first deposit was made July, 11, 1846, by David Stockbridge, the amount being $25.00, and since that time the institution has been very successful, its assets, July 1, 1884, being $2,037,395.73. The present officers are Julius Rockwell, president; William T. Filly, George N. Dutton, Charles W. Kellogg, and F. W. Hinsdale, vice-presidents; Robert W. Adam, treasurer; and John R. Warriner, secretary.

The Third National Bank commenced business June 1, 1881, with a capital of $125,000.00. Although a new institution, the management includes tried and careful business men, insuring confidence from the start, and it receives its share of the banking business of the town. The officers are Henry W. Taft, president; Byron Weston, vice-president; Ralph B. Bardwell, cashier; and Henry W. Taft, Byron Weston, E. D. Jones, S. N. Russell, Charles W. Kellogg, John T. Power, J. Dwight Francis, William H. Sloan and Levi A. Stevens, directors.

EDUCATIONAL.

The common schools of the township will compare favorably with those of any other township in Western Massachusetts. There is no record of any appropriation for educational purposes before the incorporation of the town in 1761; and indeed the settlement was so much interrupted by the French and Indian wars, that there was little opportunity for any. But at the meeting of 1762, £22, 6s. were raised and divided equally between the East and the West ends. This was a start in the right direction, but the schools were not much more than an apology for such for many years, and it was only through a strong current of opposition that the shackles of old ideas and customs were broken off, admitting the more modern and progressive plans that have brought up the schools to their present standard. The schools, except in the center districts, were taught by men in the winter, and by women in the summer, until later years, when it was discovered that children can be managed by other than brute force, or through fear of the birch and ferule. In 1849 there were fifteen school districts in the town. The plan of abolishing the district system in accordance with the views of the State Board of Education was constantly pressed upon the town, but was stoutly resisted by most of the outer districts; and in that year, 1849, Hon. Edward A. Newton offered as a compromise, a resolution that the school-houses of the several districts, many of which were unfit for their purpose, should be re-built by the town. The resolution, with the amendments to it proposed in town meeting, was referred to Calvin Martin, Abel West and James H. Dunham. The committee reported that the town ought to procure a plan or model for all the school-houses so that all should be alike except as to size; and that they should be built by the town, the districts giving the old buildings—the houses to be built two each year, and the first in the districts where they were most needed. The districts were to furnish sites and keep the buildings in repair. The report was adopted and all the school-houses in the town were re-built in the course of a few years, and in 1869 the district system was abolished. In 1874 a system of graded schools was established for all except a few outer districts. The system as at present established consists of a high school, a first grammar school, two secondary grammar schools, intermediate and primary schools. Aside from these there have been, and still are many private schools and institutions of learning. Among the present are Chickering's Commercial College, Miss Salisbury's school for young ladies, Maplewood Institute, St. Stephen's Classical and Mathematical school, and Miss M. E. Goodrich's select school. Among the institutions that have attained prominence in the past, may be mentioned the celebrated Berkshire Medical College that flourished for so many years, and the Berkshire Gymnasium, the latter of which built up the magnificent buildings and grounds of the present Maplewood Institute.

THE BERKSHIRE ATHENÆUM.

The trustees of the Berkshire Athenæum were incorporated March 24, 1871, "for the purpose of establishing and maintaining, in the town of Pittsfield, an institution to aid in promoting education, culture, and refinement, and diffusing knowledge by means of a library, reading-rooms, lectures, museums, and cabinets of art, and of historical and natural curiosities." Previously established libraries and cabinets were combined in their hands, so that the Athenæum now has a library of 16,000 volumes, an historical and art museum, and a fine mineralogical cabinet, each with a large number of rare and interesting specimens, while the reading-rooms are supplied with reviews, magazines and newspapers. In 1874 the Athenæum building, located on Bank row, was commenced, one of the finest buildings in the town, and one of the finest for the purpose in the State. Its very solid foundation was built in the autumn of that year, and the superstructure was nearly completed in the following year. Funds for building it were donated by the late Thomas Allen, of St. Louis, Mo., a native of Pittsfield, on condition that the town should furnish the site and make the library a permanent institution. It is a much admired specimen of the richer Gothic style. The chief material is the dark blue limestone of Great Barrington, left with a rock face, and laid in courses, while the same stone hammered, and thus becoming a lighter blue, forms a portion of the dressing. The remainder of the ornamental stonework is of the red Longmeadow freestone, and the red granite of Missouri; the latter of which is almost identical in character with the Aberdeen granite of Scotland. The frontage of the building is ninety feet, and the general depth sixty feet. A projection in the rear gives a depth of eighty feet to the main library-room, which is thirty feet wide. The following is a list of the principal pecuniary bequests, donations, etc., to the Athenæum up to 1880:—

To this, however should be added other pecuniary donations and bequests from the Allen family and others, making the total of the Athenæum's property, foot up considerably over $200,000.00.

CEMETERIES.

In the early years of the settlement the dead were buried in some convenient spot near the family residences, many of which "family burial-grounds" can still be traced. At the first meeting of the Plantation, in 1753, a committee was appointed to look after the construction of a meeting house, and also to "look out a place or places for burying the dead." But by whom, when or how the site of the first meeting-house or the burial-ground was finally fixed, is not known. The meeting-house commons and the grave yard, however, were soon merged in each other, covering all the space embraced within North street, the old line of East street (including the present Park place), a line drawn past the north side of the Baptist church, and another drawn near the west side of St. Stephen's to meet it at right angles. This ground continued in use until 1834, being for that time the exclusive resting-place of the dead of the town, with the exception of a yard in the east part, and two, used at different times, in the west part, all of limited size. That at the east part, in which lie buried the remains of the first white woman who made her home in the town, still remains, and is cared for respectfully; the same is true of the second burial-ground at the west part; but the first is overgrown by woods, and is only recognized by a few sunken and moss-covered head-stones, which may be seen by the traveler, on his left hand, as he begins to ascend the mountain on the road to Lebanon Springs. The present cemetery association was incorporated as the "Proprietors of the Pittsfield Cemetery," in 1850, and was organized April 8th of that year, with Calvin Martin, president; John R. Warriner, vice-president; James H. Dunham, treasurer; and Elias Merwin, clerk. The association has about 140 acres of land lying just north of the village, about a quarter of which is used for burial purposes, and which is tastefully laid out and decorated, and contains some fine monuments and tombs. The late Hon. Thomas Allen, who was president of the association at the time of his death, April 7, 1882, made a bequest in his will of the sum of $5,000.00 for the purpose of erecting a suitable gateway at the main entrance of the grounds, which was accordingly done during the past summer.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Pittsfield has also one of the finest and best regulated fire departments in the State, outside of Boston, consisting of 195 members, made up largely of the leading people of the town. It has two steamers, five separate companies, and five buildings. The chief engineer, George S. Willis, has held the office since 1881. His father, Col. George S., and his grandfather, General Nathan, were also engineers, the latter being one of the original organizers of the department. In the winter of 1882 the present fire alarm telegraph system was completed, at a cost of $5,000.00.

ALMS HOUSE AND HOUSE OF MERCY.

The Pittsfield Alms House and Insane Asylum is located on road 29, about three miles west of the village, and is under the charge of R. G. Hermance. The building is a large, neat structure, with ample accommodations for one hundred inmates, and is surrounded by a farm of eighty acres.
 During the past year, 1884, the average number of inmates has been thirty, twelve of whom, on an average, were insane.

The House of Mercy, a finely appointed and well-regulated hospital, located at the intersection of North and Tyler streets, was established in 1874. Rev. Dr. John Todd originated the charity, and in a brief time interested several ladies of Pittsfield, who were ripe for the work. To raise money for carrying into effect their plans, the ladies got up a bazaar, from which they realized a net profit of about $6,000. The first location of the institution was in small quarters on Francis street, but with the acquirement of means for the purpose, the present building was erected in 1877. The directors of the charity have laid out about $12,000 in land, building, and some furniture, and now have a fund of about $6,000. The money used every year comes from annual subscriptions and other donations, from bequests, and entertainments given in benefit, conducted by the officers of the institution. The late gift of a fine mortuary chapel to the Hospital is a notable act of charity by Mrs. Rebecca F. Coffing, of VanDeusenville. The chapel is erected in memory of her late husband, John H. Coffing. It cost about $1,400, and is located adjoining the House of Mercy. In the rear part of the building is the autopsy room; in the front part, the audience room, having large double windows on three sides and capable of seating fifty to sixty people. It is provided with chairs and reading desk, and is heated from a fire-place. On the chimney, above the fire-place, is a tablet of polished black marble, with this memorial inscription:—

IN MEMORIAM

JOHN H. COFFING

OF VAN DEUSENVILLE.

IN LOVING REMEMBRANCE OF HIS GENEROUS

PURPOSES TOWARDS THE

HOUSE OF MERCY,

THIS CHAPEL IS ERECTED BY HIS WIFE,

REBECCA F. COFFING.

1884.

The House of Mercy is under the immediate charge of Miss Anna G.
 Clement, as matron, the physicians in attendance rendering their services gratuitously. Patients who are able to pay for services, however, are obliged to do so.

the town, the railroad history, sketch of the Berkshire Agricultural society,* something of the early cloth manufacture, war record, the erection of Pittsfield into a shire town, a description of the court-house and jail, etc., have been given in the county chapter, so we will omit further mention of these subjects here. The churches will be noticed on a future page. Aside from the village of Pittsfield, there are a number of small villages located in different parts of the town, most of which have grown up about the several manufacturing establishments, and take their name from them or from their owners. Among these are the following:—

PONTOOSUC (p. o.) is the name given the village about the Pontoosuc and Taconic mills, just north of Pittsfield. The village is sometimes locally divided, however, the neighborhood in the immediate vicinity of the Pontoosuc mills taking its name therefrom, and that in the vicinity of the Taconic mills, near where the postoffice established about a year ago is located, being called Taconic. Aside from these, there are on this road, between Pittsfield and Lanesboro, Bel Air, Eveningside and Wahconah, while just east of the village is Morningside.

WEST PITTSFIELD (p. o.) is the name given the small village of Shakers, in the southwestern part of the town, though it is more commonly known as Shaker village.

COLTSVILLE (p. o.) is a small village in the northeastern part of the town, having a station on the Pittsfield & North Adams railroad.

BARKERSVILLE lies a little southeast of West Pittsfield, while northeast of it lies Stearnsville and Lower Barkersville.

The Pontoosuc Woolen Manufacturing Company was incorporated March 2, 1826, and the company was organized and officers chosen March 2, 1827, with Henry Shaw as the first president, and is, therefore, one of the oldest incorporated woolen companies in Berkshire. David Campbell, Jr., the first agent, died in June, 1835. In April, 1836, George W. Campbell was elected agent, and was succeeded in December, 1841, by George Campbell, Socrates Squier being elected president at the same time. In November, 1861, Mr. Squier sold his interest to Hon. E. H. Kellogg, who afterwards sold part of it to the other stockholders, and succeeded him as president. Thaddeus Clapp, the present agent and superintendent, became a stockholder in May, 1862, and in January, 1863, his interest was increased by a transfer of more shares. He was elected to his present position in January, 1865. J. Dwight Francis became a stockholder in May, 1864, and was elected treasurer and assistant superintendent in January, 1865. The company made from its organization up to about 1834, plain broadcloths and satinets in a variety of colors, when they commenced the production of drab carriage cloths, running

* In our sketch of this society on page 26, the accidental omission of two words, "one of," has made us say what we would not—that is, that the society was the first organized in the country. It was not, but was among the first, and its plan was universally adopted by other organizations of the kind.

entirely on this class of goods until 1860, excepting for a brief interval, when part of the machinery was used to run blue and black cloths for clothing purposes. In 1860 they commenced the manufacture of Balmoral skirts, and the "Pontoosuc Balmoral" was known throughout the country as the best. They commenced making blankets in 1865, and to-day nearly every traveler throughout the continent who uses a Pullman or Wagner sleeper has for his covering a specimen of the Pontoosuc blankets. During the past year the company have erected an addition 78x35 feet, containing elegant offices and a large packing-room. They are now running twelve sets of cards, fifty broad looms, and give employment to 250 operatives, their annual product being about $600,000.00.

The Bel Air Manufacturing Company now occupies the mills at Bel Air originally erected by Spencer & Churchill and E. M. Bissell, as a cotton-mill. The original proprietors were unsuccessful, and the property passed into the hands of the Pittsfield Woollen Company, who made great improvements, erected new buildings and operated the mills up to 1871. July 24, 1873, Frank E. Kernochan, Hon. Edward Learned and Edward McAlpine Learned were incorporated as the Bel Air Manufacturing Company, with a capital of $100,000.00. They immediately commenced operations, running on fine fancy cassimers, and last year produced nearly 150,000 yards of 6-4 width, representing about $500,000.00. They give employment to about 170 hands, eight sets of cards and forty broad Crompton looms.

The Taconic Mills.—These mills, located at Taconic, were built by a corporation known as the "Taconic Mills," in 1856. The main building is a wooden structure, 50x150 feet, four stories in height. The company commenced manufacturing in 1867, continuing until 1873, when business was suspended until 1880, the mills lying idle. During the latter year it was leased by the present firm Messrs. Wilson, Glennon & Co., who manufacture fine union cassimeres. They operate eight sets of cards, thirty-four broad and thirty-six narrow looms, giving employment to 125 hands.

The Wahconah Flouring Mills.—These mills, located at Wahconah, were erected by Caleb Goodrich, and consist of a three-story stone building 44x64 feet, and a three-story wooden building 32x80 feet. The stone building was erected for turning works, and the wooden building as a woollen-mill. In 1859 the property was purchased by Clark, Bulkeley & Co., and changed into flouring-mills. In 1861 the firm was changed to Clark, Cole & Powell, in 1865 to Cole & Powell, and in 1875 became the sole property of the present owner, Otis Cole. He has kept fully up with the modern improvements in this class of manufacture, so that he now produces about 6,000 barrels of choice flour per annum, also 1,500 barrels of rye flour and grinds about 100,000 bushels of coarse grain.

Two years later Otis R. Barker was admitted to the firm, and April 14, 1884, Charles died, since which time it has been operated by the two surviving brothers. The original mill was added to, improved, etc., as their business increased, and in 1869-70 they built a new mill. In December, 1865, they purchased of D. H. Stearns the mill at Lower Barkersville, and now run both. They employ 280 hands.

The Berkshire Life Insurance Company ranks among the first of this character of institutions in the country for soundness, economy of management, and upright and liberal dealing with claimants and policy-holders and in all that is creditable, reliable and popular. It was incorporated in 1851, and since 1861 has not enforced a forfeiture of its policies in cases when from any reason members have failed to pay premiums when due. Under the present perfected system, in all such cases when premiums have been paid for two years, and are then discontinued, without any action on the part of the policy-holder, the policy is reduced to a proportionate part, and is continued for this part, and is paid at maturity in accordance with its terms and conditions. The action of the company is in strict compliance with the laws of the commonwealth, and policy-holders receive a protection greater in degree than the laws of any other State secure them. The growth of the company has been a healthy one; it is careful in the selection of its risks, favorable above many other companies in its rates, prompt in adjusting claims, and it merits the confidence and patronage of the people. Their fine building, located on the corner of North and West streets, is alike the pride and boast of the town. It is built of Nova Scotia sandstone, and was erected in 1867-'68. The present officers of the company are William R. Plunkett, president; James M. Baker, vice-president; and James W. Hull, secretary and treasurer.

The Berkshire Mutual Fire Insurance Company is one of the oldest incorporated institutions in the county, and is among the oldest fire insurance companies in the State. It was established in 1835, after having first secured the $50,000.00 advance insurance required by its charter, with Nathan Willis, Edward A. Newton and Ezekiel R. Colt as associate incorporators, and chose its first board of seven directors on the 28th of May. On the 30th the directors elected Nathan Willis, president, and Parker L. Hall, secretary. With such men as incorporators—the fathers of the town—it is not surprising that the company has stood all the shocks of business and is to-day among the staunchest of home companies. It confines its business to the four western counties entirely, has assets amounting to $181,000.00, of which $53,000.00 is cash accumulation. The present officers are J. L. Peck, president, and J. M. Stevenson, secretary.

EARLY SETTLEMENT.

As we have stated on a previous page, no permanent settlement was effected until 1752. Though there were many attempts made, the conflicting claims to sound land-titles, and the unsettled condition of the country attendant on the French and Indian wars, thwarted all efforts. But just prior to the year mentioned efforts were again made, and were attended with success.

When the township was plotted by Capt. Huston, in 1738, two roads, each seven rods wide, were laid out, intersecting each other near the center of the township. One of these, now East and West streets, ran from boundary to boundary; the other, in that part of its course which is now North street, extended two hundred rods above the crossing, and on the old direct line of South street, four hundred and six rods below it. A third road, four rods in width, was laid out parallel with the first, and two hundred and two rods south of it. East of its intersection with South, is now Honasada street, and upon Honasada street (road 36) was commenced the first permanent settlement in Pontoosuc, or Pittsfield.

During the summer of 1752, the year accounted as the birthplace of the town, Solomon and Sarah Deming, from Wethersfield, came on to make the first settlement, one horse serving for both, Sarah riding on a pillion behind her husband. She was then a brave young good-wife of twenty-six years, the first white woman to call the beautiful hills of Pittsfield, home. Mr. Deming's farm was on the north side of Honasada street, in the eastern outskirts of the township, now the farm of Moses G. Tracy. Here they lived in a log cabin, which stood near where the bee-house of Mr. Tracy now stands, and the old well they built soon after is still in use. Subsequently Mr. Deming built a framed house, the first erected in the town, a story and a half building 38x15 feet, and which is now standing. Mr. Deming died here at an advanced age, Mrs. Deming surviving him until 1818. The farm passed into the hands of Robert Stanton, who built the large house for an hotel, and removed the old one to serve as an "L" thereto. Stanton in turn sold the farm to High-sheriff Brown, who rented it to Marlborough Wells, who with eight children had come from Preston, Conn., in 1822, and for two years had occupied the Sackett place opposite. Here he kept the "M. Wells Inn" for six years, and the farm was long known as the "Wells place." Finally, however, it has come into the hands of the Tracy family.

The room which Mrs. Deming occupied during her later years, and in which she breathed her last, is about 20x18 feet in size, occupying the north-east corner of the ground floor of the new building. Here is the little fireplace that afforded her light and warmth, and swinging within it the crane whereon she did her cooking, while to the left is the tall cupboard which served as her larder. The unpretentious furniture which served Mrs. Deming in her frugal home was considered of no value at the time of her death; but the remanant which now remains in the museum of the Athenæum could not be purchased at any price. The remains of this good "mother of Pittsfield," are resting in the little burial place near by, and over the grave the citizens of the town have erected a neat marble obelisk to her memory, which bears the following legends:—

Nathaniel Fairfield came into the town next, locating where the two branches of the Housatonic unite, just south of the village. He had first visited the town in 1748, and had made some improvements on his farm, and now, in the summer of 1752, he was bringing his new wife to their new home, the journey serving as their wedding tour. The young couple were accompanied by a yoke of oxen and a dray bearing their household goods; and, pursuing their way by the aid of marked trees, they reached the house of Solomon Deming on the third evening, and there passed the night. During the same summer, also, Zebediah Stiles found companionship in a like humble home, at what is now the corner of West and Onota streets. Then, also, came Charles Goodrich, "driving the first cart and team which ever entered the town, and cutting his way through the woods for a number of miles." It is related by tradition that he "reached the last of the Hoosac summits which he had to pass, just at nightfall; and fearful of missing the path if he attempted to proceed in the dusk, tied his horses to a tree, and kept guard over them all night against wild beasts, walking around to prevent himself from falling asleep, and munching an apple, his sole remaining ration, for supper."

During this year, also, there came into the town Abner and Isaac Dewey, Jacob Ensign, Hezekiah Jones, Samuel Taylor, Elias Willard, and Dea. Josiah Wright; and in 1753 they were followed by Stephen and Simeon Crofoot, David Bush and Col. William Williams. In 1754 Eli Root, Ephraim Stiles, William Wright, and some others; but the French and Indian war again broke up the settlement, the settlers flying to Stockbridge for security, in company with the Lenox settlers, as is detailed in the sketch of the town of Lenox.

For four years after this the settlement made but slow and difficult progress, though most of those who had joined the negira returned, probably, within two years. Three small forts were erected for the protection of the inhabitants. One, Fort Anson, was built in 1754, by Col. William Williams, upon the commanding eminence on the southwest shore of Lake Onota. Another, called Fort Goodrich, though in reality nothing but a block-house, was erected in 1756, by Charles Goodrich, about two miles south of Fort Anson. Goodrich was appointed commander of this, with the rank of sergeant. The last one was built in 1757, and stood between Honasada street and the river, near the bridge, upon the land of Nathaniel Fairfield, from whom it took the name of Fort Fairfield. In 1758, there were about twenty log cabins in the town, and a meeting of the proprietors in September is recorded. Between this date and 1764, the following became settlers: Samuel Birchard, Daniel Hubbard, Daniel and Jesse Sackett, Jonathan Taylor, David and Oliver Ashley, William Francis, Gideon Gunn, Joshua Robbins, Ezekiel Root, Gideon Goodrich, James Lord, Charles Miller, Thomas Morgan, Daniel and David Noble, William Phelps, John Remington, Phinehas Belden, Solomon Crosby, Israel Dickinson, Elisha Jones, John Morse, David

Roberts, Aaron Stiles, Israel Goddard, John and Caleb Wadham, Aaron and Phineas Baker, William Brattle, Col. James Easton, Benjamin and Josiah Goodrich, Moses Miller, Joseph Phelps, Amos Root, John Williams, Rev. Thomas Allen, James D. Colt, Ezra and King Strong, Dr. Colton, Rufus Allen, John Strong, and some others, who were followed soon after by Joseph Allen, David Bagg, Lieut. Moses Graves, Woodbridge Little, Col. Oliver Root, Ebenezer White, and others. In 1791, when the first United States census was taken, the town had 1,992 inhabitants.

At the first meeting of the proprietors (as proprietors) a part of their business was "to choose some person or persons to make exchange of a part of the school lot for some part of Dea. Stephen Crofoot's lot, so as to accommodate his mills, and to see what the proprietors would give Dea. Crofoot for setting up the mills." It appears that the water privilege which Dea. Crofoot wished to occupy was within the limits of the school lot. This movement was in 1753, but the building of the mill was delayed some years, though eventually the town granted Dea. Crofoot the use of the privilege for several years, and he built the mill and gave bonds to keep it in repair for the benefit of the inhabitants. A fulling-mill was put up by Jacob Ensign, in connection with the same establishment. Crofoot's lease expired in 1778, when the town sold the mill-privilege to Ebenezer White. It remained in his hands, and in those of his son, until 1842, when it was purchased by Thomas F. Plunkett.

The first town-meeting was held in the forenoon of the 11th of May, 1761, at the house of Dea. Crofoot, which stood near the west end of Elm street. The only business transacted was the election of the following officers: David Bush, moderator; William Williams, clerk; David Bush, treasurer; David Bush, William Williams and Josiah Wright, selectmen and assessors; Jacob Ensign, constable; Gideon Goodrich, David Bush and Eli Root, highway surveyors; Nathaniel Fairfield and William Francis, fence-viewers; Simeon Crofoot, sealer of leather and of weights and measures; Solomon Deming and David Noble, wardens; and John Remington and Reuben Gunn, deer-reeves.

Among the following biographical sketches, we have endeavored to give, in a brief, concise way, a sketch of as many of the early settlers and prominent citizens of ancient and modern times as our space would possibly admit, though we are conscious that many who have taken a prominent part as builders of Pittsfield's history, and many whom we pass by with regret, are of necessity omitted.

Charles Goodrich, whom we have previously mentioned as bringing the first team into the town, was a member of the provincial congress, a member of the general court a number of years, and a justice of the court of common pleas. He lived here sixty-three years, and died November 16, 1816, aged ninety-six years.

Col. William Williams, who was among the early settlers of the town, was a chief justice of the court of common pleas, judge of probate, and a representative of the town for many years. He died April 5, 1788, aged seventy-five years.

Israel Stoddard, son of the famous Col. John Stoddard, and an early sheriff of the county, was born at Northampton in 1741, and graduated at Yale in 1758. He married Eunice, daughter of Col. Israel Williams, and settled in Pittsfield, where his father had such a large interest in lands. He was appointed a justice of the peace in 1765, was a major in the Berkshire regiment, and received high consideration on the score of his own merits, as well as the social standing of his family. At the outbreak of the Revolution he naturally took the conservative side, and was so free in the utterance of his sentiments that he came to be regarded as a bitter Tory. And when the authorities of Pittsfield undertook to deal with him in the early part of 1775, he fled to New York. He returned, however, after a short period, but continued to be watched and regarded with suspicion for two or three years longer. At length he gave in his adhesion to the "United States of America," and was a volunteer at the battle of Bennington, in 1777. He died at Pittsfield, June 27, 1782.

Woodbridge Little was born at Colchester, Conn., in 1741, graduated at Yale in 1760, studied theology, and, it is said, preached for a time in Lanesboro; but he afterwards took up the study of the law, was admitted to the bar at the April term, 1764, and probably settled in Pittsfield about that time. He was made a justice of the peace in 1770, and seems to have been actively engaged in his profession up to the time when business in the courts ceased. He was a decided loyalist in the early part of the Revolution, fled to New York with Maj. Stoddard, and was afterwards arrested and temporarily imprisoned, but subsequently made his peace with the Whigs and was a volunteer at the Battle of Bennington, in 1777. He appears to have been sincere in his convictions, and to have taken the loyal side conscientiously. But after 1777 he adhered faithfully to his new alliance, and was so fully restored to the confidence of his fellow citizens that he was chosen selectman in 1781, and for several successive years. He did not resume the practice of law in the re-organization of the courts, but continued to take a lively interest in church and state affairs, allying himself with the Federalists, as was inevitable with his conservative tendencies. He died July 21, 1813, leaving no children, and by will gave the bulk of his estate to Williams college.

Daniel Jones was born at Weston, Mass., July 25, 1740, graduated at Harvard in 1759, was admitted to the bar in Berkshire at the December term, 1761, and was the first lawyer who settled in Pittsfield. He was son of Colonel Elisha Jones, who had a large interest in the town. His older brother, Elisha, was a settler here, and was nearly related to the Williams and Jones families in Stockbridge, all of which will account for his taking up his residence here. The family were mostly loyalists and Elisha, Jr., became a refugee, and his estate was confiscated. Another brother, Isreal, was later a highly respected citizen of Adams. Daniel Jones remained in Pittsfield but a short time, though the records of the court seem to show that he had sufficient inducements to prolong his stay. His name does not appear in the records of the April term, 1763, and in December of that year he married Lydia, daughter of Maj. Elijah Williams, of Deerfield, and removed to Hinsdale, N. H., where he was a reputable lawyer and judge, dying in 1786 and leaving descendants who are widely scattered.

Col. John Brown was born in Sandisfield, October 19, 1744, graduated from Yale in 1771, studied law in Rhode Island, and commenced practice in Pittsfield in 1773. He was elected a delegate to the provincial congress, was a member of the general court, and in December, 1775, marched at the head of a regiment of militia to Mount Independence. After the battle of Bennington, being sent by General Lincoln with a detachment to surprise the garrison at Ticonderoga and Mount Independence, then in the hands of the British, he made himself master of the outposts, took an armed ship, several gun-boats, 200 batteaux, a quantity of arms and ammunition, and re-took a standard and about one hundred American prisoners. Not being able to capture the forts, however, he returned to General Lincoln with his booty. He was killed at Stone Arabia, in Palantine, N. Y., in an ambuscade of Canadians, Tories and Indians, on his birthday, October 19, 1780, at the age of thirty-six years.

Rev. Thomas Allen was born at Northampton, Mass. January 17, 1773. He was educated at Harvard, graduated in 1762, studied theology under the instruction of Rev. Mr. Hooker, of Northampton, and on the 18th of April, 1764, was ordained as the first minister of Pittsfield, where, during a ministry of forty-six years, he labored to promote the temporal as well as the spiritual welfare of the town. Mr. Allen was simple and courteous in his manners, zealous in matters of belief, warm in his attachments, and frank in his reproofs of those he considered in the wrong. His frankness and zeal sometimes exposed him to the charge of indiscretion. Convinced that the American Revolution was founded in justice, he engaged in it upon a principal of duty. He was chairman of the committee of correspondence, chosen by the town in 1774. Constitutionally ardent and intrepid, he was impelled in those trying times to take up arms in his country's cause. When a detachment of Burgoyne's troops had penetrated as far as the vicinity of Bennington, he marched with the volunteer militia of this town to meet and repel the invasion. Before the attack was commenced, being posted opposite to that wing of the enemy which was principally composed of refugees, who had joined the invaders, he advanced in front of our militia, and in a voice distinctly heard by those Tories, in their breast-works, exhorted them to lay down their arms, assuring them of good treatment, and warning them of the consequences of a refusal. Having performed what he considered a religious duty, and being fired upon, he resumed his place in the ranks, and when the signal was given, was among the foremost in attacking the enemy's works. He was a Colonist in sentiment, and in ecclesiastical government, a Congregationalist, believing that Congregationalism in the church was analogous to republicanism in the state. On principal he was opposed to Presbyterianism and Episcopacy, as he was to aristocracy and monarchy in civil government. He died February 11, 1810, aged sixty-seven years. During his ministry 341 were admitted to the church.

Colonel Simon Larned, who came here in 1784, was born at Thompson, Conn., in 1756. He was an officer of merit in the Revolution, represented this district in congress, was sheriff of the county many years, and was colonel of the 9th U. S. Infantry during the war of 1812. He died here November 16, 1817, aged sixty-one years.

Colonel Oliver Root, another early settler, came from Westfield. He served as a soldier in the second French war, was an officer in the Revolution, and was with Colonel Brown when he was killed, in 1780. He died May 2, 1826, aged eighty-five years.

Thomas Gold, a distinguished lawyer of his time, was born in Cornwall, Conn., graduated from Yale in 1788, and settled here in 1792. He held various town offices and was president of the agricultural society and of the Agricultural bank.

Hon. Timothy Childs, M. D., was born at Deerfield, in 1748, entered Harvard college, studied medicine, and in 1771, at the age of twenty-four years, commenced practice in Pittsfield. He entered the army in 1774, and did not resume his practice here until 1777, which he continued until within a week of his death, which occurred February 20, 1821, at the age of seventy-three years. He represented the town many years in the legislature, was a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, and president of the district society, composed of fellows of the State society. His son, Dr. Henry Halsey Childs, born in 1783, graduated from Williams college in 1802. He became one of the most prominent and honored citizens of the town. He was one of the most active and energetic promoters of the Berkshire Medical Institution. The school which was located in the old Pittsfield hotel, went into operation in 1822. In April, 1863, at the age of eighty years, Dr. Childs resigned his professorship though he retained the presidency from 1837 during the life of the institution. The war and other causes, together with the better facilities afforded by the heavily endowed city schools, served to depress the school here, and the institution was practically closed in 1867-68, and in 1871 the building was sold to the town, which remodeled it for the use of its high and grammar schools. J. E. A. Smith says of this school in his History of Pittsfield: "In an existence of forty-four years it had graduated eleven hundred and thirty-eight doctors of medicine, who held a rank in their profession equal to that of those sent out by any college. It had had a large share in the advancement of medical science and the elevation of medical character. It had attracted to Pittsfield in its faculty and others, persons of culture, who had adorned the society of the village while they mingled with it, and left it the better for their presence. And, when it could no longer creditably perform the work which was entrusted to it, it gracefully yielded the place to those who could."

Hon. Ezekiel Bacon, son of John Bacon, was born at Stockbridge in 1776, graduated from Yale, and came to Pittsfield in 1806. He was a member of the State legislature in 1805-06; chief justice of the court of common pleas in 1813; first comptroller of the United States treasury from 1813 to 1815; and representative in congress from 1807 to 1813. He subsequently removed to Utica, N. Y., and was a delegate to the constitutional convention of 1821.

Hon. George N. Briggs was born in Adams, April 12, 1796. He commenced life by learning the trade of a hatter; spent one year in an academy; studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1818; was a representative in congress from 1831 to 1843, officiating during the twenty-seventh congress as chairman of the committee on the postoffice; and from 1844 to 1851 was governor of the State. From 1853 to 1859 he also held the position of judge of the court of common pleas, having been a member of the State constitutional convention of 1853, and registrar of deeds from 1824 to 1831. He was a trustee of Williams college for sixteen years, and was a noted advocate of the temperance cause. He died in 1861, from effects of an accident received from a gun.

Theodore Pomeroy was born in Pittsfield, September 2, 1813, and died here September 26, 1881, aged sixty-eight years. He was the eighth of the twelve children of Lemuel and Mrs. Hart Pomeroy, his father being a grandson of Gen. Seth Pomeroy, an officer of note in the French and Indian war and one of the four selected by the general court of Massachusetts at the opening of the Revolution to command its armies, which position he modestly declined, however, giving as a reason his advanced age; but he served with credit at Bunker Hill, and subsequently as colonel, until he died in camp at Peekskill, N. Y., in February, 1777. The Pomeroy family, however, had also a civil record quite as honorable as its military. Eltweed and Eldred, the first of the family in America, are recorded in Dorchester, where they first settled, as "men of independent and liberal minds, in good circumstances and of respectable standing," and such, as a rule, their descendants have ever since been. The branch of the family of which Theodore was for many years previous to his death the head, have been manufacturers or artizans of exceptional skill and enterprise, for seven generations—or, including his sons and successors, eight. Eldad, the son of Eltweed, having received a grant of 1,000 acres of good land in Southampton, as an inducement for him to establish himself there as a gunsmith and blacksmith, the grant being still in the possession of one branch of the family. Seth Pomeroy, before he was made a general, also lived at Southampton and carried on his art as a skillful manufacturer of firearms.

Lemuel Pomeroy, the father of Theodore and grandson of General Seth, is one of the most noted in the annals of the family, and was also one of the most noted and enterprising of the citizens of Pittsfield. He was born in Southampton in 1778, and came to Pittsfield in 1799, bringing with him the very anvil which his ancestor, Eldad, had carried up the narrow Bay Path from Windsor to Southampton, and which his descendants still preserve among the most precious of their many heirlooms. He first established himself here as a blacksmith, but in 1806 he entered upon his ancestral business, the manufacture of firearms. His small musket factory he soon enlarged so as to be able to contribute several thousand stand of arms annually to the supply of the national army and to the militia of the several States, until 1846, when the government, with his advice, began to manufacture its own arms. The income from this lucrative business he devoted for the most part to building up in the face of innumerable obstacles, one of the feeble early woolen manufactories until it became one of the most successful and respected in the State. This enterprise at last brought him in large profits, though near the close of his life Mr. Pomeroy is said to have remarked that his "experience as a woolen manufacturer had been a hand to hand conflict with obstacles, now of one kind, now of another," and that as to the results, "he would gladly exchange all his profits for two per cent. upon the outlay."

Lemuel Pomeroy was also a man of great public spirit. He erected extensive buildings to enable his son-in-law, Prof. Dewey, the distinguished naturalist, to establish the great school known as the Berkshire Gymnasium, and which were finally occupied by the Maplewood Young Ladies' Institute, another flourishing educational institution. He also built the town-hall—a good one for its day—the town furnishing the site, and being a partner with his heirs in its ownership to a late day. Indeed, there was scarcely and public movement in Pittsfield in which he did not have a prominent part and generally a controlling influence; but that of the largest interest, and for which the people of Pittsfield owe his memory the deepest gratitude, was his influence in securing the route of the Western, now the Boston and Albany, railroad through the town, in preference to one further south. The result of this spirit of enterprise, public and private, was that in 1839 he had invested largely in various species of property, from a church edifice to workman's cottage, and was conducting the most extensive business in Berkshire county, taking it in all of its branches. In that year, having purchased the interest of his partner and kinsman, Josiah Pomeroy, in the woolen factory, he admitted as partners his sons Theodore and Robert, the firm name being Lemuel Pomeroy & Sons. Lemuel, Jr., his eldest son, was afterward connected with the famous blast furnace at Copake, N. Y., being then his father's principal assistant in the musket factory, while Edward, the youngest, being not twenty-one years old, was a practical iron worker.

Theodore Pomeroy was at this time twenty-six years old. He had been educated at the Pittsfield Academy and at the Gymnasium of his uncle, Prof. Chester Dewey. In 1831, at the age of eighteen, he began his business education as his father's clerk in the Pomeroy factory, there thoroughly fitting himself for the position which he was soon to assume and occupy to his life's end. In 1849 his father died, leaving a large estate, and a will in which, after properly providing for other members of the family, he made his three sons, Theodore, Robert and Edward, then resident in Pittsfield, his residuary legatees. The will further provided for the continuance of the business by these sons, under the firm name of Lemuel Pomeroy's Sons, Theodore being at the head of the firm. In 1878 the business had increased to mammoth proportions, and the old firm, L. Pomeroy's Sons, was dissolved, Theodore purchasing the interest of Robert, Edward having sold his interest to them several years previous. Theodore continued the firm name, and his son, S. Harris, attaining his majority soon after, he admitted him as a partner. In addition to the woolen mills, the store, fine residence and other valuable real estate connected with them, Mr. Pomeroy, at his death, owned a large interest in the Greylock mill, at North Adams, and was president of the company, as well as a large amount of other property of different kinds variously distributed. He was one of the principal founders of the Pittsfield bank, and from its organization to his death was one of its most valued directors, and was also for many years a director of the Berkshire Life Insurance Company. Mr. Pomeroy neither sought nor accepted political office, though whenever the manufacturers of the country met in council he had a high place among them, where the utmost confidence was placed in his judgment and wisdom, and on these occasions he showed abilities which would have well fitted him for either legislative or executive positions. Perhaps the greatest tribute one could give his memory is to quote the following remark, from one who knew him best: "In whatever relation Theodore Pomeroy is considered, those most highly esteemed him who knew him most intimately and truly." Mr. Pomeroy married three times, as follows: In 1836, to Fannie, daughter of Hon. Ezekiel Bacon, of Utica, N. Y., but formerly of Pittsfield, who died in 1851, by whom he had two children, who died in infancy; in 1852, to Mary, daughter of Col. Silas Harris, of Pine Plains, N. Y., who bore him six children, of whom Fanny (Mrs. W. L. Brown, of North Adams), Margaret H. (Mrs. W. P. Washburn, of Chicago), Mary (Mrs. Frank Russell, of Pittsfield,) and S. Harris are living. She died in 1863. In 1866, he married Laura C. Knapp, of New York, who bore him two children, one of whom, Theodore L., is now living. She survives him.

Hon. Henry L. Dawes was born in Cummington, Mass., October 30, 1816, graduated at Yale in the class of 1839, was admitted to the bar in 1842, and commenced practice at North Adams, where, for a time, he edited the Transcript. While a student he taught school and edited the Greenfield Gazette. He represented North Adams in the legislature of 1848, 1849 and 1852, and in the constitutional convention of 1853. In 1853 he was elected to the State senate. He was district attorney of the western district from 1853 until elected to the thirty-fifth congress, in 1857, wherein he served as a member of the committee on Revolutionary claims; was re-elected to the thirty-sixth congress, serving on the committee on elections; re-elected to the thirty-seventh congress, serving as chairman of the committee on elections; re-elected to the thirty-eighth congress, serving on same committee, and to the thirty-ninth the same, also serving on that on weights and measures. He was also a delegate to the Philadelphia "Loyalist's Convention" of 1866, and re-elected to the fortieth congress, serving again at the head of the committee on elections. In 1874 he declined a re-nomination, and in the following session of the legislature was chosen a United States senator, which office he now holds.

Hon. Henry Chickering, son of Rev. Joseph and Sarah A. Chickering, was born at Woburn, Mass., September 3, 1819, and died at his residence in Pittsfield, March 5, 1881, aged sixty-one years and six months. When Mr. Chickering was three years of age his parents removed to Phillipston, Mass., where he received a common school and academic education, and later, after a short term in the Phillips Academy, at Andover, he entered the printing office of Gould & Newman, of Andover, to learn the printer's trade, being then fourteen years of age. In 1844 he purchased the Transcript, of North Adams, continuing his connection with that paper until 1855, during which year he took up his residence in Pittsfield, having, in 1853, purchased an interest in the Eagle of this place, which he retained until his death. On the formation of the Republican party, Mr. Chickering identified himself with it, attending the first Republican convention held in the State, and earnestly sustained its interests during his remaining life, having also been a prominent and influential member of the Whig party. When the party came into power, in 1861, he was appointed postmaster in Pittsfield, a position he retained for twenty years, or until death released him from earthly duties. In 1833-54, during the administrations of Governors Clifford and Washburn, he was a member of their councils, and from 1860 to 1868, when he resigned, he was a trustee of the Reform school, at Westboro. In 1843, Mr. Chickering became a member of the Congregational church of Phillipston, was a deacon of the church at North Adams for many years, and in 1860 was elected a deacon of the first church in Pittsfield, retaining the office until 1873, when he resigned. He was also for many years a prominent member of the Masonic order, having united with the LaFayette Lodge, of North Adams, in 1851, his first step in that direction. In 1863 he received all the degrees of the Scottish Rite, up to and including the thirty-second, and in September, 1880, was elected to the rarest of the Masonic degrees, the thirty-third. Mr. Chickering was twice married, his first wife being Miss Martha Newton, of Phillipston, who died in 1843, after a wedded life of about eighteen months, leaving a son who survived her three years. In October, 1844, he married Miss Elvira P. Allen, of Bowe, Mass., who survives him, having borne him three children, John A., Sarah C., and William H., only the latter of whom is living, a rising lawyer of San Francisco, in partnership with a son of Judge Thomas, of Boston.

Edwin Clapp, son of Jason Clapp, was born in Pittsfield, May 1, 1809, and died here July 27, 1884. His father came to Pittsfield, from Northampton, in 1802, and established the afterwards famous carriage manufactory in Pittsfield about the time of Edwin's birth, and in which Edwin became a partner. Mr. Clapp took an active interest in town affairs, was among the first in most important public undertakings, and took an especial interest in the fire department, of which he was for many years a member. Mr. Clapp was twice married, first to Miss Emily, daughter of Capt. Jabez Peck, who bore him three children, all of whom died young, and next to Miss Mary, daughter of the late Calvin Martin, who survives him with one daughter, one child having died in infancy.

Josiah Carter, a native of Portland, Me., who settled here in 1841, formed a partnership in 1846, with Capt. Curtis T. Fenn, (a dry goods merchant here since 1814,) under the title of Fenn & Carter, as dealers in carpets and paper hangings. They carried on business for twenty-five years on Bank row. In 1871 Mr. Fenn died, but the old firm name was retained until 1882, when Edgar T. Lawrence was admitted to partnership, under the firm name of Carter & Lawrence. This is the oldest carpet store in town. Mr. Carter has been town treasurer several years, is one of the directors of the Agricultural national bank, the Berkshire Life Insurance Company, the Berkshire savings bank, having been a director of the life insurance company since its organization.

Nathan G. Brown, born at Preston, Conn., January 27, 1818, came to Pittsfield, July 20, 1838, as a supply contractor, for the contractors who were building the Albany & Boston R. R. He married Sarah Brown, of this place, November 25, 1841, and has always been more or less engaged in manufacturing business both in this place and in Curtisville. He was a member of the legislature from this place in 1862 and 1863, and has held many important town offices, being always actively identified with town affairs. He was also one of the prime movers in organizing the Kellogg Steam-power Company, and was its first president. He was appointed special sheriff in 1880, re-appointed in 1883, and is now one of Pittsfield's largest land owners and taxpayers. He has three children, Agnes M., Charles H. and Jessie L.

Jacob Stewart was born in New Baltimore, Greene county, N. Y., February 7, 1820, learned the carpenter's trade, and in 1847 came to Pittsfield, and has been engaged in the builders' trade since. He married Margaret Roberts, and has three sons, two of whom live in Pittsfield.

Stephen V. R. Daniels was born in Stephentown, N. Y., February 28, 1813, and came to Pittsfield in 1839, locating in the village. He married Louis D. Hart, of Pittsfield, in November, 1836, rearing three children—Clara, who was born in 1849 and died in 1845; Emma L., born in 1849, and Ella I., born in 1851. Emma L. is the wife of Ralph B. Bardwell, cashier of the Third National bank, and has one child, one, Bertie B., having died at the age of four years. Ella is the wife of Henry R. Peirson, of the firm of Peirson & Son, hardware dealers of Pittsfield. Mrs. Daniels died September 4, 1877, aged sixty-nine years. When Mr. Daniels first came to this town he engaged in the bakery business on West street, which he continued ten years, during which time he commenced the business of wholesaling flour and grain, which he continued twenty-seven years. Mr. Daniels had also dealt largely in real estate, and now resides with his son-in-law, Mr. Bardwell, on Daniel's avenue, the street named in his honor. He has served on the finance committee of the savings bank for the past four years, and has been tendered offices in the local affairs of the town, though he has never accepted the honor, preferring to leave those offices to those who could better afford to devote the time to their faithful discharge.

Dr. Oliver Brewster, one of the officers in the regiment commanded by Colonel John Brown at the battle of Stone Arabia, in the Mohawk Valley, N. Y., in October, 1780, was a surgeon, the only officer not from Pittsfield, his home at that time being at Partridgefield, now Peru. He was born in Lebanon, Conn., April 2, 1760, and died February 12, 1812, at Becket, Mass., where, after leaving the army, he began, and continued till death, the practice of medicine. His father was of the fifth generation of Elder William Brewster, of the Plymouth colony, and his mother was of the third generation of Governor William Bradford, of the same company. He was a godly man, and in the absence of a pastor, his solemn counsels to his patients, and his fervent prayers with and for them were blessed to their good. He was a faithful physician and successful, particularly in acute diseases. He fell in an apoplectic fit at a house where he was making a professional visit, dying in six hours later.

Dr. John Milton Brewster, the only son of Dr. Oliver Brewster, was born at Becket, Mass., October 22, 1789. Graduating at the Boston Medical School in 1812, he arrived at home the very day his father died, and at once succeeded him in the practice of his profession. After a busy life of nine years at Becket, and sixteen years at Lenox, where he held some positions of trust, he removed to Pittsfield and continued his profession thirty years more, making in all fifty-five years. Here he owned and occupied one of the oldest houses of the place—now 23 East street, still unchanged, and built previous to 1790, by Colonel Simon Larned, paymaster of the United States army. He was among the most active early anti-slavery men of this town, a genial christian man, respected and beloved, living to a good old age, being nearly eighty at his death, May 3, 1869.

Dr. Oliver Ellsworth Brewster, oldest son of Dr. John Milton Brewster, was born at Becket Mass., January 31, 1816. He graduated at Williams college in 1834, and at the Berkshire Medical college four years later, commencing then to practice, in company with his father, in Pittsfield. In August, 1861, he received a commission from the surgeon-general of Massachusetts to appoint such surgeons as he deemed competent to examine recruits for the government service in Western Massachusetts, he himself ex-aming those raised in Pittsfield and vicinity, which position he held till August, 1862, when he was commissioned surgeon of the 40th Regt. Mass. Vols. From the beginning of the war he had earnestly desired to serve his country, and it was his patriotism which induced him to leave a practice of over twenty years, lucrative and constantly increasing, and all the comforts of his delightful home, for the trials, hardships and dangers of camp life. Just before the regiment was ready to start he was authorized to go at once to the battleground, taking or sending other surgeons to help care for the great numbers wounded at the second Bull's Run battle. In the army his habits of purity, simplicity, unostentatiousness, were at first much in his way; but after he became known, both officers and men saw that he was a conscientious, painstaking officer, guided by stern principle, holding to his own judgment when he knew it to be right, which others at first differing from him would often acknowledge. After serving the 40th regiment thirteen months, he was honorably discharged October 3, 1863, on account of severe sickness. On recovery he resumed practice, held some positions in town, and was president of the Berkshire Medical Association at his death, September 12, 1866, at the age of fifty. He was a christian man, of noble, generous impulses, delighting in the society of his friends, to whom he was deeply attached, succumbing to death after a week's sickness of his army trouble, no earthly physician being able to cure him who had been skillful in caring for others, very many of them gratuitously. His two elder sons also served their country in the war of the Rebellion.

Gen. William Francis Bartlett was born in Haverhill, Mass., June 6, 1840, the son of Charles Leonard Bartlett, and descended from a line of honorable ancestry of the Revolutionary period. He, in 1861, then a junior in Harvard College, not yet twenty-one, enlisted as private in a militia company, and in July was commissioned captain in the 20th Mass. Regt., and went immediately into active service. By the death of his superior officer in the battle of Balls Bluff, in October, he became acting lieutenant-colonel. In 1862 he was shot in the knee, while in charge of a picket line before Yorktown, and was obliged to have the limb amputated. This would have ended the military life of a less heroic man, but as soon as able he accepted the duties of organizing and took command of the 49th Mass. Regt., nine months' men, and was its honored and beloved commander until, in the battle of Port Hudson, in May, 1863, his left wrist was shattered by a bullet, and he was forced to return home in advance of his regiment. His next position was colonel of the 57th Mass. Regt., of three years men, and he led it to the field in Virginia in 1864, where they participated in the battle of the Wilderness, in May, and he received a wound in the head. In June he was made brigadier-general. In July following, he was taken prisoner at the battle of Petersburg, and taken to Libby Prison, was exchanged in September and took charge of the 1st Div. 9th Corps of the Army of the Potomac, and in 1865 brevetted major-general. All this occurred before he was twenty-five years of age. He was married to Agnes, eldest daughter of Col. Robert Pomeroy, of Pittsfield, in 1865, and went with her to Europe where he renewed an acquaintance with Garibaldi, which in his boyhood had begun, and had inspired his youthful mind with a worship for the Italian hero, and an ardor for military affairs. He lost no occasion in the years following the war to speak words of reconciliation between the men so lately arrayed in battle against each other, and by his open hearted sincerity and honest patriotism he gained such a place in the hearts of his fellow countrymen as few can acquire though they live to twice his years. He died in Pittsfield December 17, 1876, leaving a wife and six children.

Caleb Goodrich, a native of Wethersfield, Conn., and a tailor by trade, came to Pittsfield previous to the Revolution. He was quarter-master in the Continental army, and was present at Burgoyne's surrender. He died about three weeks subsequent to his return home. Of his ten children, Maj. Butler and Orin remained in Pittsfield. Orin learned the carpenter's trade, but became a farmer. He married Lydia Sackett, and was the father of eight children. He married, for his second wife, Mary Bagg, by whom he had one daughter, now Mrs. Gilbert West. Chauncey Goodrich, who resides on South street, at the age of eighty-six, is the oldest son now living. He has been for twelve years one of the selectmen. Orin was for many years a member of the board of selectmen, and represented Pittsfield in the legislature six or seven years. Maj. Butler Goodrich married Lydia White, and had eleven children. His son George W., a farmer on road 12½, has lived in his present residence seventy-one years. He has one son in the customs department, in China, and a daughter, Mrs. Henry T. Dunham, in Norwich, N. Y.

Robert Merriam, a descendant of Robert Merriam who emigrated to this country from England about 1620, came to Tyringham about 1775, where he resided until his death. His son, Robert, Jr., was born in 1782. He was a carpenter and joiner by trade, married Hannah Walker about 1800, and located on a farm on West street, in Pittsfield, where he remained until his death, in 1839. But one of his nine children married, and but one, Lorenzo, who owns the homestead on West street, survives. A brother, William, married Lucy Fairfield, and reared two sons.

Frazier Luce, oldest son of Trustian Luce, was born in Pittsfield, November 7, 1807. Becoming lame from a fever sore when a boy, he adopted the life of a peddler, for which he proved very capable, displaying a marked degree of financial ability, and acquiring an ample competence. He continued in his chosen business until 1850, when he began speculating in western land, and at the time of his death, in 1869, was a large real estate owner. He married A. M. Schofield.

Deacon Almiron D., son of Deacon Daniel H. Francis, was born in Pittsfield, May 11, 1807, and has always resided here. He married Lucy Churchill for his first wife, by whom he had three children—Lucy M., Henry M., and James Dwight. His wife died in 1868. He afterwards married Mary E. Merrill. Mr. Francis was a carpenter for several years. After working for Gordon McKay some years he purchased Mr. McKay's interest in the machine shop, and formed a partnership with John E. Dodge, who, after several years, retired from the firm, David H. McCleary succeeding him. Mr. Francis has been a deacon of the Baptist church for the past twenty years.

William Renne was born in Dalton, Mass., July 27, 1809. His education was limited, and he entered the paper-mill of Zenas Crane at the age of twelve years, where he remained eight years, when he came to Pittsfield and began the manufacture of neck stocks, being the first person to engage in that business, and in which he continued about twelve years. He also manufactured Clough's Columbian Bells several years. Mr. Renne is widely known as the inventor of "Renne's Magic Oil," which he placed on the market in 1854, continuing with large annual sales until 1877, when he sold out to S. W. Warner, of New York. He has been a member of the Methodist church about sixty years.

Ebenezer Dunham, born in Northampton in 1806, came to Pittsfield in 1821, when but a boy, and was apprenticed to his uncle, Jason Clapp, to learn the coachmaker's trade. He married Martha B. Carey, of West Brookfield, Mass., in 1832, and began business for himself about a year later, locating on the spot where the Academy of Music now stands. In 1843 he erected the shop on North Pearl street, where his sons are now engaged in business. In 1874 he purchased the Jason Clapp shop, and, with his son George, worked both shops until his death, January 15, 1883, on Melville, corner of North street. He reared six children, all surviving him—George C., in Middletown, Conn.; Maria B., Charles, and Samuel, in Pittsfield; Edward H., in Elyria, Ohio; and Mrs. Ella G. Hudson, in St. Louis, Mo. Mr. Dunham was one of the founders of the South Congregational church.

John C. Parker, son of Linus Parker, was born in this town in 1822, and married Lydia A. Goodrich, December 8, 1856, by whom he had two sons and one daughter. He was a baker for a number of years, but the latter part of his life was given up entirely to town trusts, and to the settlement of estates, as executor, guardian, and trustee. He was assessor eight years and a selectman six years, also a prominent Free Mason. He died December 8, 1881, on the twenty-fifth anniversary of his marriage.

Jabez and Elijah Peck, sons of Elisha, one of the early settlers of Lenox, came to Pittsfield, Jabez in 1818, and Elijah in 1828, and engaged in mercantile business on East street. Elijah, born in Lenox, in 1791, married Harriet Isbell, rearing seven children, Mrs. N. P. Davis, Miss Julia H. and Charles O. Peck, of this town, now living. Elijah and Jabez began the manufacture of satinete warp in 1847, which mill is now owned by Jabez L., son of Jabez, who is also largely engaged in manufacturing cotton yarns and flannel cloths. Elijah Peck died October 5, 1878, and Jabez died March 11, 1867. Jabez was, for many years the largest tinware manufacturer in Pittsfield. He was born in Berlin, Conn., in 1780.

Amos C. Barber, from Russell, Mass., came to Pittsfield in 1833, and entered the paint shop of Jason Clapp, where he learned the trade, and in which business, and in the same shop, he had continued fifty-two years. He painted the carriage presented by the city of Boston, to Franklin Pierce just previous to his inauguration as President, and another which was exhibited at the first World's Fair in London, about 1850-55. Mr. Barber married Harriet Parker in 1840, and reared three sons, one of whom, Theodore H., of Concord, N. H., survives. Mr. Barber is now living with his second wife, Susan Aldrich, of Worthington.

J. M. Holland, a native of West Farms, N. Y., came to Pittsfield in 1830 and learned the painters' trade, returning to New York, where, after a residence of three years, he again came to Pittsfield and established himself in business, building the house in which he now lives, in 1842. He married Mary E. Lavery, three of his six children, George A., Walter B., and Mrs. William Gamwell, residing in town. Mr. Holland does an extensive business in his line.

Hon. E. H. Kellogg, son of Elisha Kellogg, was born in Sheffield in 1812. He graduated from Amherst in 1836, and began the practice of law in Pittsfield in 1838. He was also later engaged in the manufacture of woolen goods. In 1841 he married Caroline L., daughter of David Campbell, the union being blest by three daughters, Elizabeth C. and May, who became successively, each the wife of William R. Plunkett, Esq., and both of whom are now dead; and Caroline, wife of William E. Cushing, of Cleveland, O. Mr. Kellogg was chosen representative several times, first in 1843, was twice speaker of the House, was once president of the Agricultural Bank, director of the Saving Bank, and holding many town offices.

George W. Foot, born at Chester, Mass., in 1830, came to Pittsfield where he learned the mason's trade of Lewis Stoddard, with whom he afterwards entered into partnership, the firm continuing until Mr. Stoddard's death. Mr. Foot formed a partnership with Edgar Hodge for a short time, since which he has been alone in business. Many of the finest buildings in Berkshire county, among them, Peck's and Russell's mills in Pittsfield, L. L. Brown's paper mill in Adams, Weston's mill in Dalton, and Smith's paper mill at Lee, were built by him.

Jacob Stewart was born in Baltimore, New York, in 1820, and came to Pittsfield in 1847, where he has since worked at the builders' trade. He married Margaret Roberts, and had a family of three sons, who reside in Pittsfield.

Charles M. Whelden, born in Boston, Mass., in 1821, was the son of Quaker parents. His father being a brass and iron worker, he was brought up to that trade, but having a taste for the druggist business he engaged in this at the age of twenty-six. In 1841 he became a member of the "Washington Light Guards," at Boston, in 1850 joined the "Ancient and Honorable Artillery." He came to Pittsfield and purchased the drug store of Peck & Olds, in 1851, which he conducted until 1874. In 1853 he joined the Pittsfield Guard, Co. A, 3d Division, as sergeant, becoming captain in 1859, which office he held until 1860. He went in the 8th Mass. Regiment as a volunteer staff officer in April, 1861, at the close of the three months term service he became a recruiting officer, and, in conjunction with Major A. M. Brown, raised companies in Berkshire county, three of which were mustered into the 10th Regiment. He afterwards labored incessantly raising men for the United States service, until October, 1861, when he began to raise the Western Bay State Regiment, under Maj.-Gen. B. F. Butler. In November he had raised several companies and was mustered into the United States army as lieutenant-colonel, and November 18, 1861, commander of camp Seward (now the Agricultural Fair grounds at Pittsfield). In January, 1862, he went in command of the regiment then numbered 31st Mass., to Ship Island, and when Gen. Butler entered New Orleans, his command was the first to land. After the transfer of his command from the United States to the Mass. roll, Gov. Andrews refusing, from personal motives, to give him a commission, he resigned his position, and served on Gen. Butler's staff while in New Orleans. Afterwards becoming a provost marshal general of the department of Virginia, where he served until the close of the war.

William Pollock was born in Renfrewshire, Scotland, in 1808. In his youth he learned the trade of a cotton spinner, in which he became an adept, and accumulated sufficient capital to bring him to Canada in 1835, where he tried farming, but soon after entered the employ of Gershom Turner, proprietor of a small cotton mill near Troy, N. Y., in which Mr. Pollock soon became superintendent. He was also employed by James, son of Gershom Turner, to start another factory at East Nassau, N. Y. About 1840 he hired a small factory of George C. Rider, at Adams, Mass., entering into partnership with Nathaniel G. Hathaway, and they were enabled, in 1842, to purchase the mill. In 1845 they purchased the mill privilege just below their mill and erected the "stone mill" now owned by the Renfrew Manufacturing Company, which mill has since been somewhat altered. In 1848 Mr. Hathaway sold out his interest to Hiram H. Clark, and in 1855 Mr. Pollock purchased his partner's interest, and conducted the business in his own name until 1865, when he received his nephews, James Renfrew, Jr., and James Chalmers, into partnership. The following year the mill privilege and the land now owned by the large brick mill of the Renfrew Manufacturing Company, was purchased, and soon after the foundations of the mill laid. Mr. Pollock removed to Pittsfield in 1855, where he resided until his death. He also became a large stockholder in the Taconic Wool Company, the Pittsfield Wool Company, Washburn Iron Company of Worcester, and the Toronto Rolling mills in Canada. He was for several years president of the Pittsfield Bank, a trustee of the Berkshire Life Insurance Co., a director in the Western Massachusetts Fire Insurance Co., and a State director of the Western, now Boston & Albany railroad. On the organization of the 49th Regt. Mass. Vols., in 1861, he equipped at his own expense, one of its companies, known as the Pollock Guard. His first wife, whom he married in Scotland, died before his removal here, leaving one daughter, who became the wife of Benjamin Snow, of Fitchburg, Mass. His second wife was Lucy Gillson, of Adams, by whom he had one daughter deceased. He was united a third time in marriage, to Miss Susan M. Learned, sister of Hon. Edward and George G. Learned, of Pittsfield, and daughter of Edward Learned, contractor of the Boston Water Works. She now resides in Grey Tower, built by Mr. Pollock before his death. Mr. Pollock visited Europe in 1866, and died shortly after his return, at Fifth Avenue Hotel, in New York city, December 9, 1866, in his fifty-ninth year. Mr. Pollock achieved a distinguished reputation as a manufacturer, and amassed a large fortune.

Noah B. Barrett, of Richmond, went to Hinsdale with his parents when young, where he spent most of his lifetime on the farm now owned by his son, Gilbert A. He died in 1881, at the residence of his son, H. N., in Pittsfield.

Hosea Merrill, born in Hebron, Conn., in 1861, came to Pittsfield at the age of nineteen, locating where the government paper mill now stands. He served in the Revolution, being sentinel at the time that Major Andre was shot, and was wounded. He married Sarah Phillips, rearing nine children—four sons, farmers, locating in Pittsfield. One son, Ayers P., was a physician and surgeon in the regular army, and located at Natchez, Miss. Philip was born in this town, October 12, 1790, and married Frances A. Stanton, rearing four children, all now living. He was a large farmer, and died in 1873. His son, John C., born in 1820, married Elizabeth Childs, and has six children. He was representative to the general court in 1867, and has held other offices for years.

Thomas D. Thompson came to Pittsfield about the time of the Revolution, in which war he served as soldier. He lived and died near the village, and had a family of four children. Thomas D. Thompson, of Dalton, is a descendant.

Joseph W. Russell, now residing in Pittsfield, was born in Sunderland, Franklin county, Mass., March 17, 1811. He married Myra Taylor, of Hawley, at South Deerfield, in 1835. In 1838 he removed to Dalton, where he lived until 1876, rearing six children, three of whom are now living—E. J. Russell, of North Adams; Lucy E. Barrett, of Hinsdale; and Martha A. Russell, of Pittsfield. Joseph W. Russell was for nine years chairman of the board of selectmen, of Dalton, and served the town in some capacity nearly every year of his residence there.

John C. West, son of Abel J., came to Pittsfield from Vernon, Conn., and began business here as boot and shoe merchant, in 1836, under the firm name of John C. West & Co., Jabez and Elijah Peck being associated with him as partners. In 1839 this partnership was dissolved, and Mr. West, in company with Doria Tracy, now of Toledo, Ohio, began a general mercantile business on the corner of North street and Park row, where the former has since been located. Mr. Tracy withdrew from the firm in 1844, when Mr. West's younger brother, Gilbert, was taken into partnership, since which no change has been made. So Mr. West has now the honor of being longer in business here than any other merchant now in Pittsfield. He has been a selectman twenty years, being chairman of the board nineteen consecutive years, and has also represented the district in general court several terms. As chairman of the board of selectmen, he had much to do with raising the town's quota of soldiers during the late war.

The First Congregational church.—December 9, 1763, the town decided to invite Rev. Thomas Allen, of Northampton, to preach to them on probation, and under his ministration was formed "The Church of Christ in Pittsfield." On the 7th of February, 1764, "a number of members belonging to different churches" met at the house of Deacon Crofoot—Rev. Samuel Hopkins, of Great Barrington, Rev. Stephen West, of Stockbridge, and Rev. Ebenezer Martin, of Becket, being also present. A Confession of Faith and a Covenant were drawn up, and signed by eight male members, "who then and there united so as to form a Church of Christ in this place." These eight original members were Stephen Crofoot, Ephraim Stiles, Daniel Hubbard, Aaron Baker, Jacob Ensign, William Phelps, Lemuel Phelps, and Elnathan Phelps. Col. Williams, Capt. Goodrich, and other prominent citizens were connected with churches in other places, but, a few months later, joined this church. In 1817, upon the reunion of the parish, which was divided in 1809, the name of the First Congregational Church was adopted in place of the old designation. The first church building stood directly in front of the site occupied by the present church. It was a plain, angular, framed building, two stories in height, forty-five by thirty-five feet, and twenty feet high, with peaked roof and square windows. Its broad side faced the street, while in the middle of its south, east and west sides were doors of the same Quakerish fashion as the windows. Plain and barn-like though this building was, however, it was commenced in 1761, and not finished until 1770. At its "raising" the workmen were voted four shillings per day for their services, though they were paid only three shillings, the fourth being reserved "to pay for the rum and sugar" used. In 1793, a new building was erected, and in 1853 the present stone structure took its place, the chapel being built in 1870. The original cost of the buildings was $28,000.00 for the church, and $21,300.00 for the chapel, the former being capable of seating 1,200 persons and the latter about 600, while the entire property is now valued at $75,000.00. The church has 484 members, with Rev. Jonathan L. Jenkins, pastor.

The Methodist Episcopal church, located on Fenn street, was organized in 1791, by its first pastor, Rev. Robert Green. The first church building, erected in 1828, gave place, in 1872, to the present elegant brick structure which was erected at a total cost of $115,000.00. It has accommodations, including lecture room, for 1,600 persons, and is valued, including grounds, at $120,000.00. The society has 682 members, with Rev. George Skene, pastor.

The Baptist church.—A small Baptist society was formed here in 1772, under the ministrations of Valentine Rathbun. In 1780, he and his people joined the Shakers, though they only remained three months, when Mr. Rathbun renounced their doctrines, but was not able to re-collect the whole of his flock, though the church had, in 1786, twenty-four members. About 1798 it became extinct, and on the 27th of October, 1800, a new society was formed, with sixteen members, the organization taking place at the house of John Francis, who became their first pastor, the first communion being observed August 3, 1801. But it was not until December 27, 1849, that the church became a regularly incorporated body. Their first church building was erected in 1827, and was succeeded by the present structure, located on North street, in 1850. The society is now in a prosperous condition, with Rev. E. O. Holyoke, pastor.

St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal church, located on Park place, was organized according to law in 1830, consisting of one male and two female members only. Rev. Edward Ballard was installed as the first rector, and in 1832 the present fine stone building was erected, at a cost of $14,000.00. It will seat 400 persons and is valued, including grounds, at $25,000.00. The society now has 280 communicants, with Rev. William W. Newton, rector.

The Second Congregational church.—In 1846, the colored people of Pittsfield, belonging to the various churches and congregations, came together and formed the Second Congregational church with twelve members. Rev. Dr. Todd, Hon. E. A. Newton, and other gentleman, took an active interest in the new church, and mainly through their efforts the present church building was re-constructed from an old Wesleyan Methodist church, being dedicated in the month of February of that year. Rev. Henry Highland Garnet, then of Troy, supplied the pulpit for a few Sabbaths, and was succeeded by Rev. Thomas P. Hunt, of Philadelphia, who remained a little over a year. In 1849 they called Samuel Harrison, then a theological student, to labor as a missionary. In 1850 he was licensed to preach, and August 13th, of that year, he was ordained as pastor of the church, a position he now holds. During the war he served for a time as chaplain of one of the Massachusetts regiments. He has been pastor of the church continuously for the past twelve years. The society now has about fifty members, their church building and property being valued at $2,500.00.

South Congregational church.—November 12, 1850, a colony of 130 persons was organized as the South Congregational church, being dismissed from the First church for that purpose, Rev. Samuel Harris, D. D., being ordained as their first pastor. Their first church building was destroyed by fire when nearly completed, and another was immediately built in its place, which was dedicated the day after the organization of the society, so that the building, considering the loss, cost $15,000.00. It is located on South street, will seat about 750 persons, and is valued, including grounds, at $14,000.00, while the society has also a parsonage valued at about $5,000.00. The society now has about 320 members. Its pastors have been, since Mr. Harris, Revs. Charles B. Boynton, D. D., Roswell Foster, Samuel R. Dimock, Edward Strong, D. D., Thomas Crowther, William Corruthers, and C. H. Hamlin, the present incumbent.

St. Jean LeBaptiste French Roman Catholic church.—About the year 1869, Rev. Mr. Lemarque, assistant pastor of St. Joseph's church, collected the considerable number of French Catholics in town, into a congregation by themselves, to whom he preached in their own language. When the congregation of St. Joseph's took possession of their new church, the French Catholics purchased the old church, a neat, commodious wooden building. The present pastor is Rev. A. L. Desaulniers.

(ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH AND PARSONAGE—PITTSFIELD.)

St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church.—The first Catholic services were held here in 1835, at the house of a Mr. Daly, on Honasada street, by Rev. Father O'Callahan, of Vermont. From that time until 1839 Father O'Callahan visited Pittsfield yearly until 1839, and was succeeded by Rev. John D. Brady, as mission priest, who, in 1844, bought of Henry Callender a lot on Melville street for a church and burial-ground, and the church was built that year. In 1854 the present pastor, Rev. Edward H. Purcell, was called to the charge. In 1864 the present fine stone structure on North street was commenced, the first ground being broken in July, and the corner-stone laid August 20th, the church being consecrated November 20, 1866.

The German Evangelical Lutheran church.—In 1859, when the Protestant German population of Pittsfield was about 400, arrangements were made by a portion of them for divine service in their own language. These services were at first held in private houses, and with occasional visits by clergymen from New York. But in April, 1859, Rev. Augustus Grotrain, a learned and able minister of Albany, accepted a call, and organized the German Evangelical Lutheran Church of Pittsfield. The town subsequently granted a pleasant site in the corner of First street burial-ground, where their church was erected, at a cost of $2,274.00, and which was dedicated September 14, 1865. The present pastor is Rev. John D. Hægar.

RICHMOND lies in the western part of the county, in lat. $42^{\circ}22'$ and long. $3^{\circ}39'$, bounded north by Pittsfield and Hancock, east by Lenox, south by West Stockbridge, and west by the state line. The story of the original purchase of the town of the Indians, the re-creation of the township, division of territory and changes of name have all been mentioned in connection with the sketch of Lenox, on page 207, to which we refer the reader.

The surface of the town is broken and picturesque, the central part, however, being a charming valley extending north and south, with the highlands and mountains rising on the eastern and on the western borders. This depression into valleys and uprising into rugged mountains has been accomplished when nature was in her happiest mood, and she has left evidence thereof in the charming scenic beauty for which the town is so justly celebrated. The high altitude, also, fanned by the pure upper strata of air, renders the town remarkable for its healthfulness, while the arable, productive land yields a plentiful reward to the toils of the husbandman, so that Richmond is almost exclusively an agricultural district, containing not even a hint of the crowded village or still more crowded city. Numerous springs and rivulets abound, imparting unusual freshness to the verdure and salubrity to the atmosphere, though there are no large streams. Near the center valley is formed the water-shed of the town, from which the streams flow into Richmond pond, and south into the Housatonic. In the northern section are Ford, Roye's, Tracey and Plummet brooks, while in the southern section Cone and Griffin brooks, flowing southerly, unite and form Williams river, a tributary of the Housatonic. Perry's peak, lying in the northwestern part of the town, is the highest summit of one of the largest mountain masses in the Taconic range, which, like many of the others, has several minor prominences. It rises 1,030 feet from its base, which itself has an altitude of 1,050 feet above sea level. From it may be obtained one of the grandest, most extensive and most picturesque views afforded in the county, extending to Greylock on the north, Mount Washington on the south, the Catskills on the west, and the Hoosac on the east. "In the south the Taconics raise their noble dome against the sky, while nearer, for an interval, they present the appearance of pyramidal summits, the conventional form in which the abstract mountain range is represented, but which this rarely assumes to the eye, and never in reality. The far off Catskills can sometimes hardly be told from the massive clouds which overhang and mingle with them. At the western foot of the mountain in New York, gleams Whiting's pond, better known as Queechy Lake, one of the prettiest lakelets among the hills. Upon the other side one looks down upon Richmond pond, another pretty sheet of water, and moreover, a favorite with sportsmen. Eight miles away may be seen the spires of Pittsfield. Scattered all about are points of individual interest; but it is the grand coup d'œil, which it affords in several directions, that gives Perry's Peak its celebrity."

Geologically considered, the formative rock of the township is talcose-slate, limestone and mica-slate, the first underlying the western part, and the latter the eastern part, with the limestone region between them, where are found numerous deposits of iron ore. Richmond also is famous in scientific circles for its well-defined course of the "Richmond boulder train." This is a range of boulders of a peculiar chloritic schist, extending across Richmond and on southeastward, from Try's hill, in Columbia county, New York, and which were first discovered, or accounted for, in 1842, by Dr. Reed. These rocks were evidently dropped by floating ice during the glacial period. Some of them weigh many tons, while others are nothing more than pebbles. In Richmond, this trail of rocks is about three miles wide on the west line of the town, while in the eastern part it may be reduced to two miles. They are found most numerous near the center of the current, and at the west base of the acclivities over which the current passed, where, as appearances indicate, the barque that floated them ran aground, and threw ballast over-board to top lighten, so as to pass through shallow water. Sometimes we find them on the ridges, scattered plentifully, as though they, by dragging the bottom, had been stopped in their course. On the east side of Lenox mountain, near the road passing from West Stockbridge to Lenox, are some thirty of these rocks lying in confused order, as though, in passing away from the mountain, the transporting power had made a fearful plunge, and left a part of its burden.

In 1880 Richmond had a population of 1,124. In 1883 the town employed one male and five female teachers in its public schools, paying an average monthly salary of $24.00 to the male and $26.54 to the females. There were 286 school children in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $1,231.96.

RICHMOND (p. o.), a hamlet containing one store and also a station on the Boston & Albany railroad, located a little southwest of the center of the town, is the nearest approach to a village the town has. The postoffice was established here in 1806, and has since been in the hands of only three families, named Branch, Pierson and Williams, a Williams having had the office for the past forty-five years.

Richmond Furnace (p. o.) located in the southwestern part of the town, is a small settlement located about the works of the Richmond Iron Company, being mostly employees of that concern. They have also a small store here for their accommodation, though most of the trading done by the inhabitants of the town reaches Pittsfield.

The Richmond Iron Company was originally organized as early as 1829, though it was not incorporated until 1842. Originally the company engaged in smelting only at the Richmond furnace, to which was added, at the time of incorporation, the Van Deusenville furnace, in Great Barrington, and in 1863 the Cheshire furnace, of Cheshire, was added. The company has two ore-beds in Richmond, and also charge of one of the Leet beds in West Stockbridge. In Richmond, the company employs fifteen men at the furnace, fifty men in their mines near the furnace, and thirty men in their mine located on road 37. All the company's furnaces have been rebuilt, enlarged and improved, however, so that they now produce about 12,000 tons of iron per annum, giving employment to 700 hands. William H. Barnum, of Lime Rock, Conn., is president of the company, George Church, of Great Barrington, treasurer, and R. A. Burget, of Cheshire, agent.

The settlement of the town was commenced in 1760, by Capt. Micah Mudge and family, who located in the southeastern part of the town, near the Stockbridge line, and his daughter Elizabeth was the first white child born in the town. Mr. Mudge and his family remained there alone during the summer, but, in the autumn, Ichabod Wood, from Rehoboth, moved in, and settled on the lot where the Congregational church now stands. There, three miles apart, these two settlers spent the long and rigid winter that followed. In 1761, Elijah and Isaac Brown, John Chamberlin, David Pixley, Joseph Patterson, and David, Timothy and Aaron Rowley moved in with their families, and settled in the southern and southwestern part of the town. In 1762 the settlement was extended into the western part by Joseph and Paul Raymond, and into the southeastern part by John and Daniel Slosson. In 1763 the eastern part was settled by Prince and Jonathan West, Jacob Redington, Stephen Benton, John Higby and John Bacon, and the northern part by David Rossiter and Benjamin Merriman. From this time forward the settlement increased rapidly, the population reaching its maximum about 1791, which was 1,255 souls. The Congregational church of Richmond, located in the Central part of the town, was organized in 1764, with sixteen members. Since that time, covering a period of nearly 120 years, the church has had only five settled pastors. In 1765 Rev. Job Swift was settled, and remained until 1774. The church was then without a pastor for ten years, though the pulpit was constantly supplied. In 1784 Rev. D. Perry was installed. He had a most successful pastorate of thirty-two years, and died surrounded by his children and children's children, blessing each one with prayer and benediction in his last hour. In 1819 Rev. Edwin Dwight was installed, and remained eighteen years. Rev. E. L. Clark accepted a call in 1838, and remained fourteen years. Rev. C. J. Renshaw was installed in 1853, and remained seven years, when he died. In 1869 Rev. Lupton W. Curtis was called, and has remained the pastor since. During Mr. Perry's pastorate there were three or four revivals of very great power, and as a result nearly 200 were added to the church. During Mr. Dwight's pastorate there were three seasons of great interest, and from two of them 130 were added to the church membership. The first church building, a small wood structure, was built in 1766. This was superseded in 1795 by another structure, erected by the town at a cost of $4,000.00, which was used until November 1, 1882, when it was destroyed by fire. In its place has been erected the present fine structure, finished in 1883. It will seat 250 persons, cost $9,000.00, and is now valued, including grounds, etc., at $11,000.00. The society now has forty members, under the pastoral charge of Rev. William Stevens, of West Stockbridge.

SANDISFIELD lies in the extreme southeastern part of the county, in lat. $46^{\circ} 6'$, and long. $3^{\circ} 54'$, bounded north by Monterey and Otis; east by Otis and Tolland, in Hampshire county, south by the Connecticut line, and west by New Marlboro and Monterey. The town was originally granted in 1735, to a company of men from Worcester and Middlesex counties. They petitioned the general court for a grant of four townships. Their petition was referred to a committee, and on January 15, 1735, Edmund Quincy, Esq., from the committee of both houses, gave in the following report, which was accepted:—

“That there be four townships opened upon the road between Westfield and Sheffield, and that they be contiguous to one another, and either join to Sheffield or to the township [Blandford] lately granted to the proprietors of Suffield, each of the contents of six miles square; and that there be sixty-three home lots, laid out in a compact and defensible form, in each township, one of which to be for the first settled minister, one for the second settled minister, one for schools, and one for each grantee, who shall draw equal shares in all future divisions; that the grantees be such petitioners as have not been grantees or settlers for the seven years next preceding, and give security to the value of £40 each for a performance of the usual conditions; and that a joint committee of five be appointed for this purpose.”

These townships were given no names, but were designated as Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4, Sandisfield receiving the “No. 3,” the three remaining ones, in their numerical order, being Tyringham, Marlboro and Becket. After these grants, however, another petition was presented by the proprietors praying for a supplementary grant, as compensation for losses sustained in extinguishing the Indian title to the territory, the petition being as follows:—

“PROVINCE OF THE MASSACHUSETTS BAY. } ”

“To His Excellency Jonathan Belcher, Esq., Captain General and Governor In Chief, To the Honorable His Majesties Council and House of Representatives, In General Court assembled at Boston, November 30, 1737:

“The Petition of Nahum Ward and Ephraim Williams, Esqrs., for themselves And the Rest of the Proprietors of the four new Townships Lately Granted by this Court, Lying Between west-Field and Sheffield, In the County of Hampshire:

“Most Humbly Shows That upon Your Petitioners Beeing admitted Grantees They Paid into the Hands of the Honorable Committee of this court the Sum of Twelve Hundred Pounds, for Defraying the charge of Surveying Said Towns, and other Necessary Charges, as Also that there might be a Sufficient Sum of Money in Hand Ready To Purchase the Land of the Indian Owners, In Case there should Bee occasion, as was then apprehended there would be. That in Order to Cultivate a Good agreement with the Indian Owners of Said Lands, and that they might have No Grounds of uneasiness, They did, By the Advice of Said Honorable Committee, Make a Purchase of Said Lands, with Some Adjoining, of John Pophonnawok v. s. Konkapot the Chief of the Housatonnoc Tribe, and Sundry other Indians, which Deed is Duly Executed and acknowledged before the Honorable John Stoddard, Esq., the Consideration being Three Hundred Pounds which Sum they Have Actually paid, which is over and above what any other Grantees have paid, and, indeed, is What your Petitioners did not all first Expect; that your Petitioners Humbly apprehend they are Equally entitled to the Justice and Favour of the Government as the Grantees of other new towns are, and that therefore they Should not be Exposed to pay the Purchase of their Lands themselves. But, inasmuch as there is a Quantity of Broken Lands Included within their deed, more than Said four Townships, They therefore most Humbly pray that your Excellency and honors would, of your known Justice and Goodness, Be Pleased to take the case and Circumstances of your Petitioners, So peculiar in its nature, into your Consideration, and Grant the Relief In the Premises By making them a Grant of the Lands as are Included in the deed aforesaid, in Consideration of their paying Said Sum off money or such other manner as may be consistent with your Pleasure, and that Said Deed may be approved and fully Ratified, and as in Duty Bound Shall ever pray.

“ NAHUM WARD.

“ EPHRAIM WILLIAMS.”

The prayer of this petition, it seems, was granted, and a compensation allowed of two tracts of 11,000 acres each, which were called “The North Eleven Thousand Acres,” and the “South Eleven Thousand Acres.” The former tract was erected into a district, with all the privileges of a regularly organized town, except that of electing a representative to the legislature, on the 24th of June, 1789, under the name of Bethlehem, and June 19, 1809, it was taken, in connection with other tracts, to form the township of London, which name was changed to Otis, June 13, 1810. The “South Eleven Thousand Acres” was also formed into a district, June 19, 1797, under the name of Southfield, and February 8, 1819, annexed to Sandisfield, which had been incorporated March 6, 1762, under its present name, given in honor of Samuel Sandys, Lord Sandys, who in 1761 was made first Lord of Trades and the Plantations. The town has also had several other changes in area since, the first occurring April 9, 1838, when a tract of 11,000 acres of unincorporated land was divided between it and Otis; May 4, 1853, it received another slight increase, when a portion of the boundary line between it and Tolland was defined; and April 24, 1875, it lost a portion of its area, which was annexed to Monterey, though it has now one of the largest areas in the county.

The surface of the town is hilly and undulating, being finely diversified by valleys, ponds and streams. Farmington river is the principal stream, flowing a southerly course through the eastern part of the township. It receives several other streams, the principal of which are Sandy brook, Silver brook, Buck-hill and Clam rivers, all flowing a southeasterly direction. Spectacle pond and Little Spectacle pond, having 113 and 78 acres area, respectively, and joined by a narrow strait, lie in the northern part, they being so named from the articles their form resembles. The soil, though various, is generally of a good quality, and especially well-adapted to grazing purposes. The hills attain a considerable height, though they are not abrupt, rising into large swells. Seymour mountain, in the southern part, is one of the larger elevations, having an altitude of 1,698 feet, while in the southeastern part is situated Hanging mountain. The latter is rather a remarkable curiosity, as on its southeastern side a craggy wall three hundred feet in height overhangs the river, from which large masses of rock sometimes come crashing down with terrific violence. The rocks entering into the geological structure of the territory are almost entirely of gneiss formation.

In 1880 Sandisfield had a population of 1,107. In 1883 the town employed five male and fifteen female teachers in its public schools, to whom was paid an average monthly salary of $32.00 to males and 20.05 to females. There were 221 school children in the town, while the whole amount raised for school purposes was $1,500.00.

SANDISFIELD, a post village, is located in the western-central part of the town.

The settlement of the town was commenced in 1750, by Thomas Brown. He was soon after joined by his father, Daniel Brown, with his numerous family. Daniel, who was born near Boston, but had lived for a long time at Enfield, Conn., was foremost in the public affairs of the town and owned much of the land. The settlement was then increased by the arrival of a number of families from Wethersfield, Conn., and adjoining towns, and also a number from the towns below Plymouth, on Cape Cod. It was not until March 6, 1762, however, that the town was incorporated. The first child born was Lot Smith, August 7, 1757, he being so named from the proprietors having promised to give him a lot of land in honor of the first birth; this promise they failed to keep, however. At the taking of the first census, in 1791, the town had a population of 1,581 souls, or 474 more than is shown by the returns of 1880.

SAVOY lies in the northeastern part of the county, in lat. 42° 35' and long. 3° 59', bounded north by Florida, east by Franklin and a small part of Hampshire counties, south by Windsor and west by Adams and Cheshire. The territory confined within its limits originally formed No. 6 of the ten townships sold at auction by the general court, June 2, 1762, and was purchased by Abel Lawrence for £1,350, though he was subsequently released from his bargain on the grounds that the land turned out to be greatly inferior to what it was represented to him to be. Nothing was done with No. 6, then, until April 25, 1771, when it was granted to William Bullock, who appeared as agent for the heirs of Capt. Samuel Gallup and his company, in compensation for services they rendered in a Canadian expedition in 1690, during King William's war. It seems that a grant of a township had previously been voted them, but it was located so as to fall within the limits of New Hampshire, so No. 6 was given instead. Col. Bullock located his grant, a tract equal to a territory six miles square, mostly south of Bernardston's grant, though a narrow strip lay along the east of it, and a larger portion north and northwest of it. The irregular tract thus located was at first called Guilford, and later the early settlers called the portion south of Bernardston's grant, being about three-quarters of the whole, New Seekonk. New Seekonk, then, with parts of other grants, was incorporated under the name of Savoy, after a beautiful town in Switzerland, February 20, 1797, the act of incorporation bounding the township as follows:—

“Beginning at the southwest corner of Hawley [in Franklin county] and running north 18° east 2,060 rods to Cold river; thence westward on the line of the channel of the said river 1,245 rods, to the line of Bernardston's grant; thence on said line north 82° west 780 rods to the line of Adams; thence on the said line south 10° west 1,060 rods; thence north 80° west 240 rods to the line of Cheshire; thence on said line south 3° east 446 rods to a saddle and stones; thence south 47° west 330 rods to the line of Windsor; thence south 72° east 1,723 rods to the first-mentioned boundary.”

Savoy is a mountainous town, containing much that is beautiful in the way of scenery, but is much better adapted to grazing than grain-raising. A large part of the territory is still covered with forests, giving employment to a great many men in the manufacture of lumber and charcoal. The best lands are located in the southern part of the town. The highlands of the town constitute the water-shed between the tributaries of the Deerfield, Westfield and Hoosac rivers, and the streams, though small in size, by their rapid descent afford many excellent water-privileges. The geological structure of the territory is made up principally of mica-slate, chlorite-slate and gneiss.

In 1880 Savoy had a population of 715. In 1883 it employed two male and ten female teachers in its public schools, at an average monthly salary of $22.00 for males and $18.00 for females. There were 137 school-children in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $412.40.

SAVOY (p. o.) is a hamlet located in the southern part of the town.

SAVOY CENTER (p. o.) is located in the central part of the town.

The first settlement in the town was made in 1777, by a man named Bobinett, who located near the “coal-kilns.” What became of him, or how long he remained here, is not known. During the same year Capt. Lemuel Hathaway, from Taunton, located in the southern part of the town, and was soon after followed by others, who located in the northern part, one on what is known as the "Dunham lot," another on land now owned by Leonard McCullock, in what is known as "New State," another on the "Goff place," and another on the hill north of Savoy village. The troubles attending the Revolutionary period greatly retarded emigration, though at the close of the war there were thirty-five families in the town, as follows: Lemuel Hathaway, Daniel Wetherel, William Wilbur, Joseph Williams, Joseph Williams, Jr., William Williams, Thomas Williams, Loved Eddy, and Zachariah Paddleford, from Taunton; John Bourne, Joseph Bishop, Comfort Bates, Abial Dunham, Michael Sweet and David Matthews, from Attleboro; Simeon Hodges and Snellem Babbitt, from Norton; Peleg Hathaway, Nathan Sherman and a Mr. Reed, from Middleboro; Peter Bennet and Elizur Edson, from Pelham; Joshua Felt, from Easton; James Nelson, from Brimfield; William Ingraham, from Rehoboth; Nathan Haskins, from Shutesbury; Samuel Rogers and William Tolman, from Sharon; William Bowen, from Warren, R. I.; Samuel Reed, Shubael Fuller, Azariah Heath, Joseph Putney, a Mr. Murphy and a Mr. Hamlin, from some part of Connecticut. The subsequent history of these men, briefly stated, is as follows:—

The families of the two Hathaways remained in town, and many of their descendants still reside here.

William Williams kept the first hotel in the town, obtaining his license in 1794. The Williams families kept hotel and lived in the town for many years.

The Eddy and Paddleford families were also represented in town, for the greater portion of the time since it was settled. The Paddlefords lived for some time in what is now called the "Brier."

Mr. Bishop became discontented and after a short time removed to Adams.

Mr. Bourne's descendants still reside here. John Bourne, born in 1783, was the first male child born in the town. Caleb Bourne, of this family, was for many years a teacher and a prominent man in the town.

Simeon Hodges came here in 1777, and the Hodges of North Adams are his descendants.

Snellem Babbitt, who came here in 1787, became a leader in public affairs and held most of the town offices. He died in 1854, in his ninety-fourth year. His son Edward also became a prominent leader in public matters, while other members of the family were noted as professional and business men.

The Shermans located in the "New State," where the different branches of the family have constituted a majority of the population. Among these were Abial, Jacob, Joseph and Seth. Jacob died in 1873, and members of his family are the only Shermans now in the town.

Nathan Hotchkiss was an early settler, the first settled minister, and received the ministerial right of 380 acres, reserved by charter. His descendants formed a large portion of the population in the district known as the "Spruce Corner."

Mr. Dunham settled in the northern part of the town and left many descendants.

"Some of the older families in the south part of the town, were the Ingrahams, Bowkers, Bateses, Blisses and Sturtevents. William Ingraham was one of the original settlers, and an influential citizen. Obadiah Ingraham, son of William, was for many years owner of a grist-mill at the Hollow, and was also a deacon in the church. His son, David Ingraham, is now town clerk in Savoy. The Bowkers were well educated, all of them attaining honorable positions in society. The only male survivor of the Bliss family now living in the south part of the town, is William Bliss, a cabinet maker. William's son, Duane, is extensively engaged in the lumber business in Nevada. Of the Bates family, S. W. Bates, alone, resides in town. The Sturtevents came to Savoy in 1811, since which time they have been an influential family. Simeon Goff was the first of this name in the place. The only village is in this part, on a branch of the Westfield river. It has generally supported two stores, two churches, and for some time two hotels, kept by the Hathaways, Bowkers, Halls and others. In 1849 there was a flourishing lodge of the I. O. O. F., called Green Mountain Tent. In 1850 the "Hollow" was one of the most prosperous of the hill villages in Berkshire county. Since that time, like other hill towns, its prosperity has declined; however, a spirit of enterprise still exists, indicated by improvements of late.

"In the southeastern part of the town the older families were those of Benjamin Carpenter, who settled where Elbridge Ingraham now lives, and was the ancestor of the Carpenters now residing in this section; of Mr. Mirick, from New Bedford—Allen and Noah Mirick, his sons, still reside in the place; of the Remingtons, and of Capt John Deming, who came from Wethersfield, Conn., in 1811. Mr. Deming had several children, of whom Rev. Amos Deming is yet living here. The 'Elder' is in his eighty-eighth year, and for many years pastor of the Baptist church in this place, has baptized over 200 persons and officiated at 142 weddings. He now lives with his sons, Mark and Amos, enterprising farmers and manufacturers of boxes.

"In the part of the town now called Savoy Center, lived Consider Hathaway and his family; the Millers—Samuel, Barnard, Nathan and William, who were naturally strong and hardy people, and of whom William kept a hotel on the corner now owned by William Sherman—there now being four families of the name in Savoy; and the Carters, who were business men in their day, though none are living here at the present time. The William Carter place is now owned by Lorenzo Shaw, of Cummington, who built here a steam saw-mill, and, for a short time, carried on an extensive lumber business.

"In the 'New State' were the Shermans, the Fish families, who owned an edge-tool shop near Cold river, northeast of W. W. Burnett's place, the Bliss, Roberts, Simmons, and Bridges families. Bradish Dunham, who lived where Horace Ford now resides, was one of the foremost men in the town, taking an active part in all public affairs. Able Carpenter came to Berkshire county in 1787. Abel's son, Philo Carpenter, was born in Savoy February 27, 1805. When about twenty-three years of age he went to Troy, N. Y., and afterwards to Chicago, Ill., buying land in that place when it was but a village of log houses. He established the first Sabbath-school, and delivered the first temperance lecture in Chicago. He has become wealthy, and has lived to see the city he helped build one of the most prosperous cities in the Union. Mr. Carpenter has given $100,000.00 for religious and educational purposes. His brother, the late Abel Carpenter, was also a resident of the same city. We might also mention other families of this section, among them the Cains, of whom Dea. James Cain is the oldest living representative; Daniel Estes, a former sea captain, a history of whose adventures would make an interesting volume; and of William Perkins, a Universalist preacher and grandfather of Rev. O. P. Gifford, the eminent Baptist preacher of Boston. The Tylers have left the town and their farm is now owned by Dennis Haskins, who has near here a slate manufactory, furnishing employment to a number of persons.

"In the 'Brier' were the Dunhams—Daniel and his sons, Alvin and Orin, who still reside on the place; the Pollys, of whom Asa is the oldest now living here; the Snows,—Simeon, Russel and Harmon,—all intelligent and respected citizens; Rev. Nathaniel McCulloch, who was a resident of this section from about 1800 until his death, in 1867. He had a large family, though only three of his children remain in the town. Four of his sons are preachers, in the Western States. The families of Augustus Maynard and the late Ephraim Walker have lived here for many years. The Joslyns, Rings, and Carpenters, former residents, have nearly all disappeared. In 1841, Russel Snow, Ezra Stearns and J. B. Cudworth built a tannery near where E. J. Crandall's saw-mill now stands, which was afterwards owned by Alvin Cudworth, and finally by Timothy Baker, who carried on the business until 1860, when it was given up. Mr. Baker now lives in Adams. From 1866 to 1870 a large lumber-mill was in operation here, owned by parties in other towns. The lumber business is now carried on by Asa and Hovey Polly, E. J. Crandall and N. B. Baker.

"In the 'Spruce Corner' and the eastern part of Savoy, the early settlers were Josiah Blanchard, Asel Horton, who came from Windsor in 1800, and E. Leonard, who came in 1806. The Leonards were from Raynham and were descendants of the Leonards who owned the house in which the head of King Philip, the famous Indian warrior, was exhibited after he was slain in battle. Among the later residents were Nelson Wing, Ethan Maynard, Josiah Tilton, who came from Goshen in 1817, and the Barton families. This is a pleasant region, some of the buildings lately erected giving the place a neat appearance. A saw-mill is owned by J. W. Bourn, and Rev. H. K. Flogg, an Adventist preacher residing here a greater part of the time since 1863, has a printing office, established lately, for the purpose of issuing tracts, etc.

"The families of Mr. Phillips, father of Dr. H. P. Phillips, of North Adams, the Walkers, Leonards, and others, lived on the road leading north from Savoy Hollow, over the hill known as 'Fifty-one,' from the number of the original lot. Since the introduction of the modern system of building roads in the valleys this road is little used and the region is nearly depopulated. The same may also be said of the old road by Ezekiel Fuller's. Yet this is not an indication of decline, since better advantages are afforded in the valleys."

Daniel Dunham, who cleared the farm known as the Alvin Dunham farm, reared a family of four sons and three daughters. Job Dunham, brother of Daniel, also an early settler, has no representative in Savoy, but he has two grandsons who are both enterprising lawyers, one, Henry J., residing in Stockbridge, and the other, James N., of Pittsfield. They have a cousin who is president of the board of trade in Chicago, and who is also a member of Congress.

Nathan Haskins, from Shutesbury, the first pastor of the First Baptist church, was present with his wife at its organization, June 24, 1786. He had born to him three sons and six daughters, all of whom are now dead; but Shadrack is represented here by his children, Samuel, Levi, Mary A., and Mrs. Lydia Maynard. Samuel, by Dennis, living in the northern part of the town; and Levi by Alvin, Henry N., and Shadrack T.

John Bourne was born at Attleboro, Mass., in 1750, and came to this town immediately after his discharge from the Revolutionary war, March 1, 1779. In 1782, he married Louisa Nash, by whom he had six sons and one daughter, nearly all of whom located in Savoy, and all of whom are now dead, excepting Cyrus, who resides with his nephew in Savoy. John Bourne, Jr., born in 1783, the first male child born in the town, is now represented by Welcome Bourne. John, Jr.'s, brother Caleb is represented by Franklin C. and his descendants. Two of John's sons served in the war of 1812. Caleb Bourne was a classmate with William Cullen Bryant at Plainfield.

Benjamin Carpenter, with his brother-in-law, William Ingraham, from Rehoboth, located on Bullock's grant in 1783. Mr. Carpenter reared twelve children, all of whom are now dead, excepting the youngest, Charles, who is the only representative of the Carpenters in Savoy. When Mr. Carpenter first came to the place, he was obliged to travel ten miles to Cheshire, where was located the nearest grist-mill. Benjamin was for some time deacon of the First Baptist church in Savoy.

William Ingraham, one of the early settlers, reared a family of five sons and three daughters, none of whom are now living. He is represented in Savoy by his grandsons, Alvin and Eldridge, sons of Obadiah, who reside upon the place cleared by William, and by his grandson, the town clerk, David Ingraham, son of Obadiah, who represented Savoy in the State legislature in the years 1853 and '54.

Moses Bliss, who served in the war of 1812, came to Savoy from Rehoboth about 1792, but, tiring of the place, moved away in about a year. About a year or two later his brother Daniel settled on the place now owned by his grandson, Azariah E., which place has always remained in the Bliss family. David had four sons, none of whom are living.

Samuel Miller, from Adams, located in the western part of Savoy about 1796 or '98. He reared six children of whom there are representatives in the place—Daniel and his son, Duane D., Calvin, son of Bernard, and his children, and Alden, son of Eldridge. Daniel married a daughter of Rev. N. McCulloch, first pastor of the Second Baptist church in Savoy, and has had three sons, H. E., from whose history of Savoy we have obtained much valuable information; Duane D., Jones V. and a daughter, Vestella C.

William Perkins, born in Taunton, Mass., came to Savoy in 1798, locating first in the southern, and afterwards in the northwestern part of the town. He reared four sons and three daughters, only three of whom are now living, and but one, Ambrose B., in Savoy, on the old homestead.

Wilkes Walker married Ruth Bliss, of Rehoboth, in 1796, probably settling in Savoy sometime between that year and 1800, locating south of the old Babbitt place. Of a family of six children, only two daughters, Mrs. Huldah Bardin, of Stamford, Vt., and Mary in Illinois, are living. A grandson, Ephraim J., son of Ephraim, and a great-grandson, Gordon J., are the only descendants now residing in Savoy.

Jacob Sherman, Jr., came to Savoy from Middleboro, his native place, about 1800, and located in the northern part of the town, near where his father, Jacob Sherman, had located a year or two previous. Jacob, Jr., married Abigail Read, of Taunton, Mass., reared five sons and three daughters, dying at the age of ninety. Two daughters and two sons survive him, one only, Mrs. W. Burnett, residing in Savoy. Five of his brothers enlisted in the War of 1812, but Jacob, Jr., being lame, was unable to join, teaching, instead, in the early public schools. Abigail, sister of Mrs. Burnett, resides in Adams.

Simeon Goff, from Rehoboth, removed to this town about the year 1800, settling in the southern part of the town. Of a family of eight children, none survive, and there are but two representatives in town, Louis Goff being represented by his son Louis, and Cromwell by his son Nathan E., a merchant of Savoy.

John Cain, from Taunton, Mass., located in Savoy about 1805, but removed to Florida in about a year. One son, James, located in Savoy and has one son, John L., residing here. Seneca Crain, a brother of John, and a soldier in the war of 1812, also settled here, and has one son living here.

Willis W. Burnett, grandson of Daniel Burnett, Sr., who located in Florida in 1806, resides in Savoy, where he has lived most of the time since coming of age. He has a family of five children—Ella F. Greenslet, Fidelia A. Haskins, Emma F. Blanchard, Alfred W., who resides with his father, and Herbert W. Daniel has three other grandsons also residing in town, Liberty L., Theodore L., and George M. Burnett.

Ethan Maynard, born in Shrewsbury, settled on a place a little east of the central part of Savoy, near the year 1807. He had seven sons and two daughters, all but one of whom, the late Mrs. Allen Merrick, are living. All married and settled in Savoy, but some have since removed from the town. Ethan Augustus, Albert, Otis, Ambrose and Urbane still reside here. William Maynard located in Savoy about the same date as his brother, Ethan, Sr., settling near him, in the eastern part of the town. Of a large family, none reside in town, but he is represented here by a grandson, Eber L.

Rev. Philip Pierce, a Baptist minister, came to Savoy, from Swanzey, about the year 1807, locating in the southwestern part of the town. A family of three sons and six daughters were born to him, all of whom are now dead. Two sons of Philip Jr., Stillman and George F., and one daughter, Mrs. Ashley Merkins, represent the family here.

Edward Mason, a captain of militia, removed from Rehoboth to Savoy about the year 1807. He reared a family of eight children, none of whom are now living here. Mrs. Amos Deming, daughter of Edward Mason, Jr., resides in this town. Frank E. Mason, on road 35, is a descendant of Edward.

Captain John Deming, a native of Wethersfield, Conn., immigrated to Savoy in May, 1811, locating upon the place now owned by his grandsons, Amos, Jr., and Mark Deming, which place has always been in the possession of the Deming family. He had six children, all now dead, the only representatives of the family in the place being Amos, Jr., and Mark, sons of Amos Deming. Amos was a Baptist minister, who came to Savoy about two years later than his father, Capt. John, where he preached about eighteen years, and a great many years in the adjoining towns. He reared a family of ten children. John Deming was a sea captain, and also a Revolutionary soldier, serving through the whole of the Revolutionary war, being, for a time, quarter-master. He was with Gen. Israel Putnam when he made his famous ride down the hundred stone steps on his little black pony. He is said to have brought the first iron-axled wagon into town. That it was a great novelty, was proved by the statistics, telling how many happy couple it had carried to the minister to be married.

Thomas Polly immigrated from Chesterfield, to Savoy, in June, 1815, located on the place where his son, Asa, now resides. He reared a family of two sons and three daughters, of whom three, Mrs. Annie Tilton, of Michigan, Daniel, living in New York, and Asa, who resides in town, are living. Asa married Mary Blanchard, and had six children, only five now living, namely, Austin, Laura, Ford, Harvey, and Horace. Of these all except Austin reside in this town. Asa Polly and his wife have lived on the homestead over sixty years, celebrating the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage in April, 1883.

Baten Rouge, was in the Red River campaign, and at the siege of Port Hudson, and was honorably discharged in August, 1863. His grandfather, Timothy, was a Revolutionary soldier.

Rev. N. McCulloch came to Savoy in 1837, and has two daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Miller and Mrs. Mary J. Maynard, and one son, Leonard, now living in town. Leonard, who resides in the northern part of the town, has held all important town offices, was commissioned justice of peace by Gov. Banks, in 1860, which office he has held ever since, and in 1879, represented the 4th Berkshire district in the general court.

The Baptist church, located at Savoy village, was organized June 24, 1786, by the following persons, who convened at the residence of William Williams, Nathan Haskins and wife, William Williams and wife, Lucinda Wilbore, Nathan and Solomon Jay, Benjamin Bulleu, Zachariah Paddleford and Alice Reed. Nathan Haskins, the first pastor, was ordained January 28, 1789, retaining the office until his death, December 10, 1802. The first church edifice, erected in 1804, stood on the corner near the S. W. Bates place, and was removed to its present location in 1848. It will accommodate 250 persons, and is valued, including grounds, at $2,000.00. A second Baptist church was organized May 27, 1834, with Rev. N. McCulloch, pastor, though they subsequently disbanded and united with the present society. They erected a church building in 1842, which has since been repaired and fitted up as a union church. The society now has sixty-five members, with no regular pastor.

The Methodist church, located at Savoy, was organized in 1834, and their church building erected in 1835. The first pastor was A. C. Wheat.

The First Congregational society, composed of twenty members, living in Savoy and Windsor, was organized February 18, 1811, Rev. Jephtha Poole being the first pastor. Their building was erected on the line between Windsor and Savoy.

The Advents at one time flourished here quite extensively, when the doctrines promulgated by William Miller, who was a relative of the Millers of Savoy, created so much attention. Joe Smith, the Mormon prophet, also started a church, or community, here in 1810. The climate proved too warm for him, however, and he soon left for "greener" fields. The Shakers of New Lebanon, N. Y., also established here, in 1815, a community; but they, too, thought it better to migrate. The hall they erected, in which to hold their peculiar religious services, is now used as a shed on Horace Ford's place. They also erected a grist-mill, shop, etc. They remained only a few years, when they returned to New Lebanon, N. Y.

SHEFFIELD lies in the southern part of the county, in latitude $42^{\circ}6'$ and long. $3^{\circ}41'$, bounded north by Great Barrington, east by New Marlboro, south by the state line of Connecticut, and west by Egremont and Mount Washington. This town is not only interesting on account of the fine landscape and scenic beauties it presents, but it also brings forward facts which place it among the first in the county in point of historical interest, for its territory was a part of the old Housatonic townships, and within its borders was begun the first civilized settlement among the Berkshire hills. But the story of these Townships, the first settlement, building of the first road, the part the town served in the Shays Rebellion, railroad history, etc., have all been mentioned in the county chapter, with still further notice in the sketch of Great Barrington, and in that of Stockbridge, so it will not be necessary to recapitulate at this point. In 1733 the Lower Township was set off and incorporated as a town, eight miles long, north and south on the river, and wide enough to include seven miles square, according to the grant of 1722, and was called by the general assembly by the name of Sheffield, in honor of Sheffield, England. It extended north to Great Barrington bridge. Though the length was liberal for eight miles, it would seem the township could not then have been considered as extending as far west as the present line of New York. It was not until twenty seven years after, June 30, 1761, that Sheffield was reduced to nearly its present size, and the Upper Township incorporated as the township of Great Barrington. Several minor changes have been made in the town's area since, however, as follows: Parts were annexed to New Marlboro June 19, 1795, February 7, 1798, and April 19, 1871, while parts were annexed to Egremont February 22, 1790, and February 16, 1824.

The surface of the town is beautifully diversified by mountain, hill, and verdant valley, the tout ensemble forming bewitching scenery that is charming in the extreme. In the eastern and western part of the town the scenery is both picturesque and grand, while the center, through which the Housatonic pursues a slow and serpentine course, lacks not in beauty. On the western border, in the northern part of the town, is located the celebrated "Dome of the Taconics," extending into the town of Mount Washington. Mr. Hadley has given the following beautiful description of it and of the magnificent view its summit affords the beholder:—

"Two or three miles from Bash-Bish located in Mount Washington], is the Dome of the Taghconics, a lofty mountain rising, precisely like a dome, from the ridge of which it forms a part. It is, in our estimation, far superior to the Catskill, for you have, from a single spot, a perfect panorama below you; you have only to turn on your heel, and east and west, north and south, an almost endless prospect spreads away on the vision. You are the center of a circle at least 350 miles in circumference; and such a circle! The mountains that stretch along the horizon between the Connecticut and the Hoosac rivers, on the northeast, fade away as the northern Taghconics, the Berlin and Canaan mountains greet you in the northwest; and these, in turn, are forgotten as your eye falls on the dark mass of the Catskill, showing its huge proportions against the western horizon. And, then, between is such a wealth of scenery. The valley of the Housatonic, for miles and miles, spreads all its loveliness before you. There, too, are the two settlements of Canaan, and further up, a mere spot on the landscape, Sheffield; and, still further up, Great Barrington, hardly visible amid its forest of old elms; while the white cliffs of Monument mountain shut out old Stockbridge from view, and the distant spire of Lenox church closes the long train of villages. Old Saddle-Back, of Williamstown (the Greylock range in Adams, North Adams and Williamstown), stands up to its full height against the misty mountains that repose further off in the horizon—a peculiar feature of the landscape. Egrement stands alone in the valley of the Green river, but its sloping land and swelling hills present a still lovelier variety. A low line of mist is dimly seen stretching along the black base of the Catskills, so indistinct that you would scarcely observe it; and yet that is the lordly Hudson, heaving its mighty tide seaward, laden with the commerce of a nation. A mere pencil-mark in the landscape here, it gives no token of the haste and busy life on its surface. Close under the foot of the mountain, on the south, sleep the sweet lakes of Salisbury, while other lakes dot the horizon in every direction. But I cannot tell you of the prodigality of beauty which meets the eye at every turn. You seem to look on the outer wall of creation, and this old dome seems to be the spot on which nature set her great compass when she drew the circle of the heavens. A more beautiful horizon I have never seen than sweeps around you from this spot. The charm of the view is perfect on every side—a panorama, which becomes a moving one if you will but take the trouble to turn round.”

In addition to the Housatonic, here some seven rods wide, the town is irrigated by Schenab, Hubbard, Ironwork and other brooks, which furnish valuable motive power, though there are none on the Housatonic. Three mile lake, covering an area of about 104 acres, lies in the northeastern part of the town.

The geological formation of the town is of Lower Potsdam and Levis limestone formation. Specimens of asbestos pyrites, native alum manganese, and pyrotusite are found.

In 1880 Sheffield had a population of 2,204. In 1883 the town employed seven male and seventeen female teachers in its public schools, to whom was paid an average monthly salary of $29.57 to males, and $22.57 to females. There were 456 school children in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $3,578.61.

SHEFFIELD is a handsome post village located in the central part of the town on the Housatonic railroad. This village is commonly called “Sheffield Street,” as it is located entirely on one street, extending about a mile on both sides of road 45, which is here lined with magnificent elms. At the southern end of the village is a large, beautiful elm, affectionately known as “The Old Elm.” The village has three churches (Congregational, Methodist and Episcopal), four stores, one hotel, a high school building, etc., and about one hundred dwellings.

ASHLEY FALLS, a bright post village and station on the Housatonic railroad, lies in the southeastern part of the town, on roads 71 and 72. It has one church (Methodist), a hotel, two stores, harness shop, monument works, blacksmith and wagon shop, and about eighteen houses.

SHEFFIELD PLAIN is a village similar in appearance to Sheffield, located about half a mile north thereof. It has about fifteen dwellings.

John R. Stanton's saw, shingle and grist-mill located on road 30, was built by Peck & Ensign, about fifty years ago, and came into Mr. Stanton's hands in 1870.

The Sheffield cheese factory and creamery, located on road 33, gives employment to four hands, who make about 1,300 cheese per annum.

William L. Abbott's grist and flouring-mill, located on road 73, is owned by Mrs. William G. Bates, of Westfield, Mass. The mill-privilege occupied by this mill, is the oldest in the town, having first been used about 1733, the present mill being built about fifty years ago.

Albert W. Curtis's saw and flouring-mill is located on road 23, being operated by water-power furnished by the Taconic creek. The flouring-mill is a stone structure and is known as the marble mill. It was built in 1840, by Edward F. and Richard Ensign, as a paper-mill, and was used for this purpose by Doten, Mansfield & Root, until 1858, and in 1860 was converted into a flouring-mill by Ira Curtiss. Of the old paper-mill firm, the senior member, Bartlett B. Doten, is now dead. A. A. Mansfield is prominently connected with the Mount Holly Paper Company, at Carlisle, Penn, and Mr. Root is the present well-known high sheriff of the county.

It has usually, if not universally, been asserted that Obadiah Noble was the first settler in the town, and the first in the county. The facts attending this settlement have usually been given, mainly, as stated by Rev James Bradford, in the History of Berkshire, printed in 1829, as follows: "Mr. Obadiah Noble was the first white man that came to reside in Sheffield. He was from Westfield, and came and spent the winter of 1725 here with no other human associates than the Indians. In the spring he went back to Westfield, and in June his daughter, afterwards the wife of Dea. Daniel Kellogg, returned here with him. She was the first white woman who came into the town. She traveled from Westfield, when about sixteen years of age, on horseback, bringing a bed with her, and lodged one night in the wilderness, in what is now the east part of Tyringham [Monterey]."

"This statement, though in the main correct," says Charles J. Taylor, in his admirable History of Great Barrington, "is nevertheless, open to criticism. The writer has been informed, as he believes truly, that it was Matthew Noble—not Obadiah—who first came to Sheffield. Matthew was the father of Obadiah, and also of Hannah—born October 11, 1707,—who became the wife of Dea. Daniel Kellogg, May 13, 1731. Obadiah was at that time—1726—under twenty-one years of age, unmarried, and, consequently, not the father of a sixteen year old daughter. And if the pioneer who spent the winter of 1725-26 among the Indians, was the father of the young woman mentioned, he certainly was Matthew—not Obadiah Noble. This Matthew Noble, who was about fifty-seven years of age when he came to Sheffield, had a family of six sons and three daughters, all of whom appear to have removed with him from Westfield. Of his sons, Joseph, the eldest, settled in Great Barrington; Hezekiah, Matthew, Solomon, Elisha, and Obadiah all located in Sheffield. Of his daughters, Hannah married Dea. Daniel Kellogg, of Sheffield; Hester married Moses King, of Great Barrington; and Rhoda married Ebenezer Smith, of Sheffield."

We have adopted Mr. Taylor's views, and have thus, in the county chapter, given Matthew Noble the credit of being the first settler. Coming on from Westfield, he located upon the farm now owned by William A. Forbes, at the Plain, and the site of his dwelling was just above that now occupied by Mr. Forbes's residence. Among the first settlers were those of the name of Austin, Ashley, Westover, Kellogg, Pell, Callender, Corben, Huggins, Smith, Ingersoll, Dewey, Root, etc., in all about sixty, who had their lands, from 250 to 1,000 acres each, confirmed to them by the committee, by their personal attendance at Housatonic about 1733. The first town meeting was held at the house of Obadiah Noble, January 16, 1733, when Matthew Noble was chosen moderator; Hezekiah Noble, town clerk; and John Smith, Philip Callender, and Daniel Kellogg, selectmen; Daniel Kellogg, town treasurer; Joseph Taylor, and Elisha Noble, constables; Thomas Lee, Anthony Austin, and Samuel Dewey, tithingmen; Nathaniel Austin, and Obadiah Noble, fence viewers; Jonathan Root, surveyor.

At a town meeting held in Sheffield, June 18, 1776, upon a resolution offered by a committee, consisting of Colonel Ashley, Dr. Lemuel Barnard, Colonel John Fellows, Colonel Aaron Root, and Captain Nathaniel Austin, it was voted that "in case Constitutional Congress should declare the Colonies independent of Great Britain, they, the inhabitants of Sheffield, would solemnly engage their lives and fortunes to support them in their measures." At the annual town meeting, held April 3, 1876, attention was called to the vote passed, a century before,—and on motion, "it was unanimously voted that the centennial anniversary of the day be observed in a fitting manner, and accordingly, the centennial celebration was held on the 18th and 19th of the following June.

John, Philip and Nathaniel Callender, three brothers, descendants of Scotch ancestors, from Callender, of Monteith in Perthshire, were among the earliest settlers in Sheffield, coming here about 1827. Phillip was elected selectman at the first town meeting, and a deacon at the first meeting of the Congregational society. John, who located on road 14, had ten children, one of whom, Ezekiel, was a Revolutionary soldier. Heman C., a descendant of John, who located on road 14, is the only male representative of the fourth generation now living in Sheffield. He was born here June 2, 1810, and has traveled in nearly all the States in the Union. He has been engaged in the sale of clocks, and in the grocery and dry goods business. He has been married twice, and has reared two daughters and one son. Mr. Callender has spent the last thirty-eight years in his native town, where has been twice elected selectman, twice road commissioner, a school committeeman, a bank director, steward and class leader and treasurer of the M. E. church. Archie, son of Philip, married Sally Savage, and had nine children, of whom Sally married a Mr. Boardman, whose son Dwight lives on the old Callender place.

Silas Kellogg was among the earliest settlers of Sheffield, locating here about 1739, on road 6, where his grandson, George, now resides. George, who has always resided on the homestead, has been chairman of the board of selectmen five years; was the representative from the eighth Berkshire district in the legislative session of 1883, has been assessor for two years, and was president of the Housatonic Agricultural Society in 1883.

John Ashley was born at Westfield, December 2, 1709, and graduated from Yale college in 1730. He was a son of Col. John Ashley, who was for many years one of the justices of the court of common pleas in Hampshire, and one of the committee to advance the settlement of the Housatonic townships in whose lands he became largely interested, and whose estate in Sheffield ultimately descended to his son. Mr. Ashley was admitted to the bar in Hampshire county in 1732, and probably soon after settled in Sheffield, though whether he was to any extent engaged in the practice of law we have no means of ascertaining. He was an extensive land-holder and a merchant, represented his town in the legislature, was colonel of militia, and after 1753 was a justice of the peace. He acquired large wealth for the times and locality, and was enabled to supply the county with ready money towards the erection of its county buildings, in 1761. He took his stand early and decidedly upon the popular side in the Revolutionary contest, and presided at the county convention held at Stockbridge, July 6, 1774, which adopted the non-importation and non-consumption acts when the legislature of Massachusetts, undertook to govern the province under the old charter, committing the executive functions to the council. Col. Ashley was appointed, February, 1779, one of the justices of the court of common pleas for Berkshire county, but the court was not organized. He died at Sheffield, September 1, 1802, having attained nearly the age ninety-three years. Among his possessions were a number of negro slaves, which he seems to have been inclined to retain after the declaration of independence. This gave rise to the noted case of Brown & Bet, vs. Ashley, commenced by writ of replevin, at the August term of the court of common pleas in 1781. It appears that these persons were slaves of the colonel, and under some harsh provocation had fled from their master and had been reclaimed. Theodore Sedgwick, then living in Sheffield, interested himself in their behalf and this writ was the result. The defendant pleaded that the plaintiffs were his legal negro servants for life, and upon this plea the issue was joined. The plaintiffs were represented by Mr. Sedgwick and Tapping Reeve, the distinguished lawyer of Litchfield, Conn., and the defendant by Davis Noble, of Williamstown, and Jonathan Canfield, of Sharon, Conn. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiffs and the defendant appealed to the supreme judicial court, but the judgment was not reversed. It does not appear whether the case was decided upon general principles or the specified circumstances of the case. It has been claimed, we think erroneously, that the case abolished slavery in Massachusetts. The female plaintiff continued afterwards an attached servant in the Sedgwick family, and was, we suppose, the veritable "Mum Bet" of literature and history. Col. Ashley left numerous descendants, some of whom are still living in Sheffield.

John Ashley, Jr., was born at Sheffield, September 26, 1736, graduated at Harvard in 1758, was admitted to the bar at the April term, 1762, and was made a justice of the peace in 1771. The only son of his father, destined to succeed to large interests in land, and engaging early in mercantile pursuits, he followed his profession only for a few years and then appears to have abandoned it forever. He continued to be quite frequent in his attendance on the court of sessions of which he was a member, before and after the Revolution. He represented his town in the legislature, and in the militia rose to the rank of major-general, and was in command of the force which dispersed the rebels in Sheffield during the Shays insurrection, February 26, 1787. He died November 5, 1799. He was twice married and has left numerous descendants.

John Pell was a son of John Pell, of Sheffield, who came probably from Westfield. He was admitted to the bar at the December term, 1761, and practiced here in Sheffield with apparent success, if we may judge from the number of suits he brought. But it is to be feared that he fell early into graceless ways and brought discredit upon his honorable profession. As early as September, 1762, he was before the court of sessions upon his confession that he traveled on the Lord's day from the county of Hampshire through the towns of Sandisfield, New Marlboro, Tyringham and Sheffield, and he was thereupon fined 10s., to be equally distributed to said towns for their respective poor. He disappeared from the court in 1765, and though living in 1773, his subsequent history is obscure.

Theophilus Cande, a Revolutionary soldier, was born in Middletown, Conn., August 2, 1736, and came to Sheffield soon after the close of the war, locating on road 80, being the first of that name to locate in the town. He had a family of five children, Zaccheus, Samuel, Isaac, Ira and Rebecca, to each of whom he gave a portion of the homestead farm, which was made up of a grant deeded him by the State. His eldest son, Zaccheus, also served in the war, and lived and died on the old homestead. He was thrice married, and it is a singular fact that his wedded life with each wife was just seventeen years. Of his family of twelve children, Warner and Zaccheus, Jr., reside in Sheffield. Warner, residing on road 59, married Sally Sparks, who bore him six children, three of whom are living. Zaccheus, Jr., has always resided on the old farm. He married Louisa Tuttle and has had a family of three children, one of whom, Horace, resides at home and carries on the farm for his father. Hopkins T., his other surviving child, is a prosperous farmer, being proprietor of the "Crystal Hill farm." He is a member of the Housatonic and Berkshire Agricultural societies, and was a member of the examining board of both societies in 1875. He has also been elected a school committeeman six terms. Zaccheus, Jr., represented the Eighth Berkshire district in the legislature of 1866 and '67.

Derrick Spurr, formerly Spoor, one of the earliest settlers, removed from Copake, N. Y., to Sheffield in 1760, and located on road 21½, upon the farm now owned by Henry Spurr, a portion of land one mile square having been granted him by the State, which portion he subsequently divided among his four sons. He reared a family of four sons—Nicholas, Abram, John, and Isaac, and two daughters. Nicholas lived and died on road 21, upon the farm now owned by Abner Roys. Abram built near the old homestead, and the house which is over 100 years old, still stands. Isaac, who resided on the old farm, had six children, the youngest of whom, Moses, passed his entire life upon the homestead. He was a farmer, and had six children by his first wife and two by his third. His third son, Isaac, succeeded his father upon the farm, making the fourth generation to occupy the old homestead. Isaac married Mary Clark, of Salisbury, Conn., and has had two children,—George, residing on road 18, and Mary E., whose home is on Long Island. Isaac Spurr has been town assessor, is a prosperous farmer, and a highly esteemed member of the Methodist church.

Samuel Bushnell, among the first settlers in Sheffield, located on road 22, upon the farm where William Conway now resides, and reared a family. One of his sons, Samuel, Jr., born December 20, 1770, lived on road 19, upon the farm now owned by S. H. Bushnell. He married three times, rearing, in all, a family of five children. His oldest son, Samuel, was born and died on the old homestead, where he reared a family of six children. Of these, two, Samuel H. and David J., survive. Samuel H. married but has no children. David I. married Anna Bell Johnson, daughter of Captain Johnson, commander of one of the Federal gun boats, and resides in St. Louis, Mo.

Andrew Andrews came to Sheffield in 1788, when his son, Giles, was only nine years of age. Robert Dwight, son of Giles, who has always resided on his farm on road 59, has charge of the town poor.

Rev. Orville Dewey, D. D., whose father, a farmer, was among the first settlers in Sheffield, was born in 1794. After graduating at Williams college in 1814 with the first honors of his class, he spent three years at Andover Seminary studying theology at the peril of his eye-sight. Recovering from this difficulty he preached a year for the American Educational Society, when he received a call to Gloucester, Mass., after which he assisted Dr. Canning, in Boston, for about two years. In 1823 he accepted a call to New Bedford, Mass., and, while still preaching, was weekly writing for the Christian Examiner. In 1835 he accepted a second call to the Second Unitarian church in New York city, now known as the Church of the Messiah, where he remained six years, during which time he received the degree of D. D. from Harvard college. In 1848 Dr. Dewey retired from this church, to his country home in Sheffield; but, unable to remain idle, he wrote a course of twelve lectures on the "Problem of Human Destiny," which have been published and circulated all over the United States. In 1858 he took a temporary charge of the New South Society in Boston, returning again to Sheffield in 1862. He was an invalid for five years and died March 21, 1882, within one week of his eighty-eighth birthday, leaving a wife, one son and two daughters.

Dr. John Leland Miller, second son of Caleb Miller, a farmer, was born in Adams, in 1813, and attended the Berkshire Medical college, at Pittsfield, from which he graduated in 1837. The same year he went to the Belize, as surgeon for the Surveying Expedition of the United States. Being shipwrecked on the tenth of September, 1838, at Gunkey, one of the West India Islands, while on his way home, instead of returning, as he had intended, he went to practicing in Providence. After practicing here for five years he became professor of the Pittsfield Medical college, where he remained two years, going from there to Illinois college, at Jacksonville, Ill., as professor of anatomy and physiology, in which capacity he served two years. On the thirteenth of July, 1847, he was appointed surgeon of the United States Army and served to the close of the Mexican war. He became an invalid after the war, and settled on a farm of eleven hundred acres, in Livingston Co., Ill., organizing the town of Fairbury, where he lived about five years. He then returned to Pittsfield and bought a farm of 200 acres, one mile from the Pittsfield park, and now owned by Mr. Learned, lived there ten years, and removed to Sheffield where he bought another farm of 200 acres, and where he now lives. Although the doctor is an old man of over seventy, he is still frequently called in council. In 1876 he was president of the Agricultural Society of Berkshire County, and is a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, of which he has been president for several years.

Josiah Roys, a Scotchman, one of the early settlers, obtained a grant of land in Sheffield, from the State, and settled upon the farm now owned by Peter Cassidy, on road 41, being the first of the name to locate in Sheffield. One of his sons, Abner, was a cooper and farmer, residing on the homestead with his father. He reared a family of five children, four sons and one daughter. One son, Levi, who always lived upon the homestead, married Thankful Curtis, who bore him eleven children. One son, Abner, resides on road 21, and another son lives on the Curtis Land Grant. Harvey married Hannah Curtis, and has had a family of four children all of whom are living, but only one, Emily, who married John Bacon, and lives on road 53, resides in Sheffield. Mr. Roys has been assessor for several years, and was a selectman from 1840 to '50. He, with his wife, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage the fifteenth of February, 1884.

John Scoville, M.D., was born in Cornwall, Conn., July 6, 1803. He received his early education in Cornwall academy, studied medicine with Dr. Samuel W. Gold, in the same place, attended two courses of lectures at the Pittsfield Medical college, after which he attended the medical department of Brown University, Providence, Rhode Island, graduating in 1826. After practicing one year in Wolcottville, Conn.,—now called Torrington,—he removed to New Marlboro, Mass., where he practiced eleven years, after which he returned to Cornwall, Conn., having received a very urgent invitation from his former acquaintances in his native place, and his parents still living there. He practiced there for about thirteen years, having, in Cornwall and the surrounding country a very large practice, when, being about worn out, he left his practice and came to Sheffield, where, in company with Archibald Taft, he entered into the dry goods business. But, being so near New Marlboro, his former residence, he was often called into practice, until, at last, he left the store, and gave his time entirely to his profession. For the last five years he has practiced but little, except among a few of his old patients, who still cling to him. In 1850 Dr. Scoville was appointed postmaster, which office he held eight or ten years. He was justice of the peace for seven years, and has been a selectman. In 1860, he represented Sheffield in the legislature.

Levi Boardman removed from Wethersfield, Conn., in 1816, and settled in Sheffield, upon the farm now owned by Dwight and Levi Boardman, on road 7. Although a mechanic by trade, he was known in Sheffield as a farmer. He married Sally Callender of Sheffield, by whom he had eight children, Elizabeth, Sarah, Levi, Mary, Mary 2d, Emily, Dwight, and Ellen. Elizabeth, who married Levi S. Parsons, lives in Sheffield village, and has had four children. Sarah, wife of Ralph Little, lives on road 14, and has had a family of six children. Levi has reared two children, of whom one, Levi H., is a farmer, on road 7. Mary died in infancy. Mary 2d, widow of Nelson Holmer, lives on road 14. Emily, wife of Daniel Rood, lives in Connecticut. Dwight resides upon the old homestead, and has reared a family of five children. Ellen, wife of George Wilcox, also lives in Connecticut.

Henry H. Smith, M. D., youngest child of Lyman A. Smith, was born in Salisbury, Conn., August 18, 1848. In his infancy the family removed to East Sheffield, now called Clayton, where the parents and two sisters now reside. Two sisters died in childhood. In boyhood the brothers, George and Henry, attended the village school of Clayton, and the high school of Canaan, Conn. In 1870 Henry entered Carter's Commercial college, in Pittsfield, and in 1871 he began the study of medicine with Richard Beebe, M. D., of Alford, and attended medical lectures during the winter of 1872-73, in Burlington, Vt., and at Albany through the winter of 1873-74, where he graduated in 1874. For a time after, he assisted Dr. Beebe in his practice in North Egremont, and with Dr. Beebe's advice established an office in South Egremont. In the summer of 1875 he located in the adjoining town of Sheffield, where he has since practiced medicine with growing favor and success. He has taken students from time to time, six of whom have graduated from the Medical college at Albany. Of these, his only brother, George F. Smith, M. D., graduated in 1878, practiced with marked success one year in Southfield and three in Stockport, N. Y., where he died of pneumonia, June 8, 1882, at the age of 38. H. Worth Wright, M. D., of South Egremont, graduated in 1880. He possessed talent in an 'unusual degree, but came to an untimely death March 20, 1881, at the age of twenty-three years. Harry M. Burtch, M. D., son of John D. Burtch, of Sheffield, graduated in 1881, and is practicing successfully in Salisbury, Conn. D. H. Strahan, M. D., at one time a merchant in South Egremont, graduated in 1882, and began practice in Grand Rapids, Mich. Edwin B. Karner, M. D., of South Egremont, graduated in 1882, and is practicing in Stottville, N. Y. Frank L. Smith, son of Eli Smith, of Sheffield, graduated in 1882, and has since practiced in Gaylordsville, Conn. At present Dr. Smith has three students. He is enthusiastic and earnest in his profession, devoting to it the best energies, time and talent of his life.

The Congregational church, located on Main street, in Sheffield village, was organized October 22, 1735. The first minister to preach in the town was Rev. Ebenezer Devotion, who is said to also have been the first to preach in the county. Rev. John Hubbard, however, was called as a settled minister, October 22, 1735, the day the church was organized. Until 1825 the town and the Congregational society were one and the same, in action, but in that year the society became a separate organization, and, by arrangement, manager of the ministry funds. At the second town meeting, held January 20, 1733, money was raised to build a meeting-house, 45x35 feet. This was erected about three-quarters of a mile north of the present edifice, and was occupied until 1761, when a new house was built 60x40 feet, which, though it has been moved, altered and improved, is now in use. It will seat 300 persons, and is valued, including grounds and other property, at $10,000.00. The society now has 114 members, with Rev. Hiram Eddy, pastor.

The Ashley Falls Methodist Episcopal church, located at Ashley Falls, was organized about 1840, with twenty-five members, the first pastor being Rev. John Crawford. Their church building was erected in 1842, a frame building capable of seating 175 persons, and is now valued, including grounds, at $3,000.00. The society has now fifty-five members, with Rev. David Phillips, of the New York conference, pastor. When the church building was erected, in 1842, there were a few Universalist families living in the vicinity, who contributed towards the building, being accorded the privilege of holding services therein at such times as they could get preachers. The families representing this element, however, have long since passed away, by death or removals, and for the last thirty years the church has been exclusively under the care of the Methodist society, who have repaired and refitted it at least three times, the last in 1883, when they expended about $1,000.00.

The Methodist Episcopal church, located at Sheffield village, was organized by its first pastor, Rev. John Crawford, in 1847. The church building was erected during that year. It will seat 300 persons and is valued, including grounds, at $10,000.00. The society now has 135 members, with Rev. Fields Hermance, pastor.

Christ Church, Protestant Episcopal, located at Sheffield village, was organized by Major-General John G. Barnard, Joel H. Field, Oliver Peck and others, June 10, 1866, Rev. John C. Eccleston being the first rector. The church building, a handsome little structure capable of seating about 120 persons, was built in 1869, at a cost of $300,000.00. The society now has about 100 members, with Rev. Arthur H. Proffitt, rector.

The Sheffield Roman Catholic church was organized by the present pastor, Rev. John H. Murphy, in 1881, he being now assisted by Rev. Dennis T. Hurley. The society expects to build a church building during this winter (1884) and spring.

STOCKBRIDGE lies in the western part of the county, in lat. 42° 18' and long. 3° 42', bounded north by Lenox, east by Lenox and Lee, south by Great Barrington and west by West Stockbridge. In order to tell the story of the grant and incorporation of the town, one must turn back "adown the shores of time," to a period when the charming territory revelled in its pristine beautiful solitude, uncut and undefiled save by the paths of the red men.

At a session of the great and general court of the Province of Massachusetts Bay, begun at Boston on the last Wednesday of May, 1722, the petitions of Joseph Parsons and one hundred and fifteen others, and of Thomas Nash and sixty others, inhabitants of Hampshire county, were presented, asking for grants of two tracts of land on the Housatonic river. The report of the committee, to which these petitions were referred, was accepted by the general court, and received the approval of the governor on the 30th of June, granting to such of the petitioners, or others, as might be admitted by a committee for laying out and settling the lands, two tracts of land each to contain seven miles square, to be laid out on the Housatonic river, the first tract to adjoin southerly on the divisional line between Massachusetts Bay and Connecticut, the second to be laid northerly of and adjoining the first tract. This grant, as is well known, was styled that of "The Upper and Lower Housatonic Townships," comprising the territory now embraced in the towns of Sheffield, Great Barrington, Mount Washington, Egremont, the most of Alford, and much of Stockbridge, West Stockbridge, and Lee, being, however, much in excess of the territorial limits prescribed by the legislative act. On the 24th of April, 1724, Konkapot, sachem of the Stockbridge Indians, with twenty of his tribe, met the commissioners at Westfield and relin-

In 1734 Rev. John Sergeant commenced the celebrated mission and school among the Indians, locating at Great Barrington. In order that the ends of the mission might be better attained, it was desirable that the Indians should concentrate in some particular locality. Accordingly, upon petition, in which the Indians heartily joined, the legislature, in 1735, granted a township six miles square "lying north of the Upper Housatonic Township," but which the surveyor caused to overlap the said Township about 9,000 acres. This grant was given the name of Stockbridge, after Stockbridge in Hampshire county, England, and comprised the territory of which we write. As originally laid out in 1736, it was exactly six miles square, having 23,040 acres. In 1739 the town was incorporated, and retained its original area until 1774, when about 9,600 acres of the western part of the territory was severed to make the town of West Stockbridge. In 1824, February 12th, another part of Stockbridge was annexed to the newer town, and February 6, 1830, the boundary line between the two towns was again changed, so that the parent town now has an area of only 13,440 acres, or about what it had after the division in 1774.

Notwithstanding its limited territorial limits, however, "quaint old Stockbridge," whose every rood is classic ground "wreathed with storied lore," presents a gorgeousness of natural scenery that outvies that of the famous whose somnolent beauty pales before the charm of the old town's exquisite curves and "delicious surprises." Its classic shades, too, have shadowed the homes of scholars, poets, novelists and statesmen, and of wealth and refinement. Bryant, in remarking on his first visit to this locality, in 1816, speaks as follows:—

"The woods were in all the glory of autumn, and I well remember, as I passed through Stockbridge, how much I was struck by the beauty of the smooth, green meadows, on the banks of that lovely river which winds near the Sedgwick family mansion: the Housatonic, whose gently flowing water was tinged with the golden crimson of the trees that overhung them. I admired no less the contrast between this soft scene and the steep, craggy hills that overlooked it, clothed with their many colored forests."

The whole surface of the town is diversified by mountain, hill, lakelet, stream and verdant meadow, uniting the picturesque and the sublime. Along the western border are found low foot-hills of the Taconic range; in the eastern part rises Rattlesnake Peak—the Deowcook of the Indians—while Bear, Evergreen and Monument mountains rise in the southern part. The latter is famous in both story and song. It has an elevation of 500 feet above Stockbridge Plain, and attains an altitude of 1,260 feet above the sea. Its cliffs of bare, granular quartz rise perhaps 450 feet perpendicularly, or a little beetling at the top, with only a detached pinnacle, known as Pulpit

Rock, together with a few other grotesquely shaped crags, to relieve the blank wall's uniformity. But Bryant has given a very vivid description of the pile, as follows:—

“ Here is a precipice
That seems a fragment of some mighty wall,
Built by the hand that fashioned the old world
To separate its nations, and thrown down
When the flood drowned them. To the north, a path Conducts you up the narrow battlement.
Steep is the western side, shaggy and wild,
With mossy trees, and pinnacles of flint,
And many a hanging crag. But, to the east,
Sheer to the vale, go down the bare old cliffs.—
Huge pillars that in middle heaven uprear
Their weather-beaten capitals, here dark
With the thick moss of centuries, and there
Of chalky whiteness where the thunderbolt hath Splintered them.”

Bear Mountain has thrice been cleft by geological convulsions, the lowest fissure containing Icy Glen, one of the natural curiosities of the town. It is a deep, narrow gorge, the bottom of which, about an eighth of a mile in length, is thickly cumbered by enormous boulders, and the great trunks of fallen trees, all moss-covered and slippery, in the dank air and gloomy shade. The second rise is known as Laura's Rest, upon which the Hon. D. D. Field has erected an observatory, he being the owner of the peak.

But to descend to the charming lakelets. Foremost is Lake Mahkeenac, or Stockbridge Bowl, lying in the northern part of the town. It covers an area of about 500 acres, and in beauty is said to equal Lake Windermere in England, and Averill pond in Scotland. On its northern border, in a little red, scantily furnished cottage, Nathaniel Hawthorne lived when he wrote his House with Seven Gables, and the Blithedale Romance. Of this lake Mrs. Lydia H. Sigourney says, in verses composed in its honor and read at the Berkshire Jubilee:—

“ The Stockbridge Bowl ! Hast ever seen
How sweetly pure and bright,
Its foot of stone and rim of green
Attract the traveler's sight ;
High set among the breezy hills
Where spotless marble glows,
It takes the tributes of the rills
Distilled from mountain snows.”

Lake Averic, covering about sixty acres, lies a little southwest of it, while Smith's pond, a small sheet, lies on the northern border of the town. Mohawk lake, about twenty acres in extent, lies in the western part of the town, about a mile northwest of Glendale ; and Lake Agawam, a trifle larger than the latter, lies near the southern line of the town. All of these drop their waters into the Housatonic, affording some excellent mill privileges. The Housatonic is well known, both for its beauty and utility. It enters the town from the east, about a mile north of the southern boundary, flows a serpentine course west and south, then turning at an abrupt angle just above Glendale, flows a southerly course into Great Barrington, leaving the town near its southwestern corner. Its current affords excellent water-power. Several streams of minor importance unite with its waters, making up the water-course of the town. Along the streams the soil is made up of rich alluvial deposits, while most parts of the town possess a warm and easily cultivated soil. The indigenous trees are those common to the western part of the county, though the town is particularly noted for its magnificent elms.

Geologically, the principal part of the town is underlaid by limestone, though in the western and southern parts are found beds of quartz, and talcose and mica-slate. Marble of a good quality has been quarried.

Stockbridge is noted as a resort for those seeking summer homes. Nearly fifty years ago Hon. Nathan Appleton, of Boston, desiring a summer residence for himself and two daughters, bought the charming place in the bend of the Housatonic river, now owned and admirably improved by Mr. Southmaid. This was the beginning of summer emigration to these beautiful hills, and the ladies above mentioned came here yearly until they were married, one to a son of Sir James Mackintosh, of England, the other to Mr. Longfellow, the poet. West of this and the river is the charming manor of Mr. C. E. Butler, with its solid stone house looking as permanent as the hills. Near this residence Mr. Tuckerman, of New York, made a large and handsome house in the style of a French chateau, from which the views are superb. Mr. James Dwight erected a most attractive summer and winter house. Among the other residences of note are those of David Dudley Field, Henry Iverson, William S. Bullard, and Rev. Henry M. Field, of New York, and the cottage of Prof. Joy, of Columbia college, also that of William A. Tappan, upon whose grounds is located the Hawthorne cottage; Mrs. Sarah B. Cone, the Council Grove place; Samuel G. Wood, Oakwood; Mrs. C. Tappan, Tanglewood; and G. Higginson, Jr., Oakwood farm.

STOCKBRIDGE, the "Housatonic" of past generations, is possessed of more romantic beauty than any other village among the green hills of Berkshire—indeed, we doubt if any New England village can rival it in rare and fascinating aspects of rural beauty, in immediate surroundings of unwonted charms, in worthy and precious historical associations, and in the renown of noble sons and daughters. Nestled along the Housatonic in the southern part of the town, are houses and churches, its library and academy, its fountains and monuments—pretty mosaics set in the emerald of many wonderful elms. Its population of about 800 souls lends a generous life to the scene, while in summer the great cities send their representatives of fashion, of learning, literature and of business to its cool retreats and charming environs, where for a season they cast aside the depressing corpses, rush and excitement so peculiar to "America's great beehives," to breath in, physically and intellectually, the healthful air of Stockbridge. During these seasons, the brilliant apparel, dashing equipages and gay life imbue the scene with an additional charm, difficult to describe.

Among the ornaments the village points to with pride are the soldiers' monument, located on the square at the junction of Pine and Main streets; the Edwards monument, at the junction of Church and Main streets; the Indian monument, located on the site of the old Indian burial-ground; and the beautiful chime of bells near the town-hall. The latter were a gift to the town from David Dudley Field. They are located in a stately stone tower, and night, morning and midday their scnorous peals float out upon the air like beneficent orisons. Cyrus W. Field, a native of Stockbridge, has lately laid out a magnificent park on the hill about half a mile north of the Congregational church, which is also a decided ornament to the town.

GLENDALE is the poetic name given a bright little post village that skirts, the Housatonic a little over a mile west of Stockbridge village.

The first manufacturing establishment erected in the town was a grist-mill, located upon the site now occupied by the mills of S. W. Comstock, built previous to 1745. This mill served the wants of the settlers until 1762, when another was erected, by Joseph Woodbridge, just in the rear of what is now the residence of S. P. Lincoln. In 1781 another was erected, at Glendale, or Mill Hollow, as it was then called, and during the following year another was erected, at Curtisville.

The Glendale Woolen Mills.—In 1813 Lester Avery & Co. established at Glendale the manufacture of woolen goods, and half a mile further up the river a cotton-mill was built in 1815, both of which were operated by this firm for a number of years; but it was finally abandoned, on account of the dam overflowing the meadows. Later, Hon. John Z. Goodrich became interested in the property, with Samuel G. Wheeler. In 1847 the Glendale Woolen Company was formed, by an act of the legislature, having purchased for $60,000.00 certain water-privileges of Lewis C. Beach and James S. Royce. Three times the mill was burned, and once or twice Mr. Goodrich failed; but only to start again, with greater energy than before. During the war, especially in 1861, the company manufactured navy-blue cloth for the government, and also rented a mill at Lee for the same purpose. The company continued in business until 1871, when the property was leased, and in 1880, purchased by F. W. Adams, the present owner, who has made extensive repairs. He employs 160 hands and turns out about $250,000.00 worth of goods per annum, mostly fancy cassimeres.

Chaffee & Callender's paper-mill.—In 1849 F. Perry built a dam about a mile below Glendale. This was subsequently purchased by Renwe & Evans, who built thereon a paper-mill, manufacturing coarse paper. This firm was succeeded by The Hunter Paper Co., and finally, in 1872, the present firm came into possession of the works. They manufacture wrapping and bagging paper mostly, giving employment to forty hands, who turn out about 12,000 tons per annum.

M. Truesdell's Sons, of West Stockbridge, located on the outlet of Lakes Mahkeenac and Averic, are engaged in the manufacture of flocks, doing a business of about $30,000.00 per year, and giving employment to ten men.

A. S. Yale & Son's saw and grist-mills are located at Stockbridge village.

S. W. Comstock's saw, feed and planing-mills, located on Marsh brook, give employment to four men.

Hats, wrought nails and leather have been manufactured in different parts of the town, and for a number of years a smelting furnace was operated, near the southern line of the town. No enterprises of the kind are now conducted. The manufacture of hats, however, as mentioned above, was conducted in every community, the attendance of a hatter in small country towns being as necessary as that of a tailor.

Housatonic National Bank.—The Housatonic Bank, located at Stockbridge village, was incorporated in 1825, with a capital of $100,000.00. This capital, however, was subsequently increased to $150,000.00, and finally to $200,000.00. In July, 1865, it was again re-organized as a national bank with a capital of $200,000.00. It now has a surplus fund of $160,000.00 and pays annual dividends of ten per cent. Its officers are Daniel R. Williams, president; Daniel A. Kimball, cashier; and Wm. A. Seymour, teller.

Stockbridge Savings Bank.—This institution, located at the village, went into operation in 1871. It has 540 depositors, with an aggregate deposit of $180,000.00. Its officers are Mason VanDeusen, president; Daniel B. Fenn, Jr., and H. S. Dean, vice-presidents; and C. H. Willis, treasurer.

Educational.—Except the mission school established here among the Indians, which is mentioned on another page, there were no schools established in the town until 1760, when £6 6s. was voted by the town "for the establishment of an English school." The French war nearly put an end to the Indian school, in 1763, and during the following year, 1764, two school-houses were directed to be built, one on the hill and the other in the village, where F. J. Pratt's grounds are now located. Five years later, in 1769, the Curtisville district was established, and the East street district was erected in 1774, from which time a greater interest was manifested in educational projects, an interest that has never since waned. In 1866 the plan of dividing the town into school districts was abolished, for the purpose of concentrating the public educational facilities at the three villages, resulting in the erection of fine school buildings—at Glendale, in 1868; at Curtisville, in 1870; and at the village in 1872-73, all of which are arranged on the graded plan. One of the old districts, however, is still retained, being too remote from either of the business centers for the inhabitants to attend those schools.

As early as 1799 the school on Elm street, taught in a two-story building, was graded, that is, the younger people were taught on the lower floor, while the more advanced scholars were formed into a higher school, occupying the upper floor. In 1828 this higher department was incorporated as the Stockbridge Academy, Rev. Jared Curtis acting as the first principal. In 1842, this name was changed to the Williams Academy, in honor of Cyrus Williams, he having bequeathed $3,000.00 to the institution, and also remembered it in other substantial ways. In the meantime, in 1833, another building had been erected, which forms a part of the present high school building. When the district system was abolished, in 1866, the trustees of the academy made arrangements with the town, whereby the institution's funds, etc., should be turned over for the benefit of the new system, and the academy thenceforward be conducted at the expense of the town. Since that time, also, it has borne the title of Williams Academy and Stockbridge High School.

Libraries.—As early as 1790 a public library was established, which was continued until 1822. In 1814 another library was established, at Curtisville, and, later still, another at the Plain, while kindred associations, such as a lending society, reading clubs, etc., were from time to time established. But the foundation of the present fine library was laid in 1862, when, in March, Nathan Jackson, of New York, who received his education in Stockbridge, donated $2,000.00 towards the establishment of a permanent library, under stipulation that the town add $1,000.00 to the sum and also build a library building. Mrs. Francis Dwight donated a site for the building, and early in 1863 Hon. John Z. Goodrich agreed to donate the necessary funds for the building. In June, work on the structure was begun and pushed forward until its completion, in 1864, at a cost of about $5,000.00 and in July of that year the library was opened, with 3,600 volumes, which number has since been increased to 6,000.

Cemeteries.—Previous to the establishment of the Indian mission here the burial place of the Indians was on a bluff in the rear of the present residence of Col. J. F. Dwight. After the church was built here a portion of the square around it was set apart as a burial place for the Indians and whites in common. This plot has been added to from time to time until it has attained its present fine proportions. The fine fence and hedge that surrounds it were placed there in 1854. In 1834 a cemetery was set aside at Curtisville; but the ground proved unfit for purposes of this kind, so in 1874 the bodies were exhumed and removed to the Plain. There are now, aside from the one mentioned, a small enclosure in the northern part of the town, and a Roman Catholic burial place, on the west meadows.

Hotels.—It is said that the house now owned by J. H. Gourley was formerly used as a hotel, the first opened in the town, with Capt. William Goodrich as landlord. The old Stockbridge House, just opposite, however, has a just and honorable claim as a venerable hostelry, being to-day the only public house in the town. Its first proprietor was widow Bingham, and the place was opened certainly before the Shays Rebellion. It has been repaired, improved and enlarged at different times, however, so that it is now a quiet, pleasant, home-like hotel, well presided over by its genial and hospitable proprietor, Mr. C. H. Plumb.

EARLY SETTLEMENT.

Tradition places the first known advent of a white man into this territory in August, 1665, being a war party under command of Maj. Talcot, the story of which, or one story at least, is as follows:—

“A great party of Indians, judged to be about two hundred, were observed to pass by Westfield. News thereof being brought to Major Talcot, he, with the soldiers of the Connecticut colony under his command, both English and Indians, pursued after them as far as Ausotunnoog [Housatonic] river, in the middle way betwixt Westfield and the Dutch river and Fort Albany, where he overtook them, and fought with them; killing and taking prisoners forty-five, whereof twenty-five were fighting men, without the loss of any one of his own company, besides a Mohegin Indian. Many of the rest were sorely wounded, as appeared by the dabbling of the bushes with blood, as was observed by them that followed them a little further.” * * * It is written since from Albany that there were sundry lost besides the forty-five forementioned, to the number of three-score in all; and also a hundred and twenty of them are now dead of sickness.

In 1784, while excavating for the foundation of a new church edifice, under the pastorate of Rev. Dr. West, a quantity of bones were unearthed, from which circumstance and for some other items of circumstantial evidence, this spot was located as the site of the battle. This can be but mere conjecture, however, and other localities claim the same distinction, based on as plausible evidences.

The story of the interesting tribe of Indians who inhabited this locality has already been told, on page 67. Prior to the advent of the missionary, Sergeant, a single white man, a Dutchman, made his temporary home here, as an Indian trader. The Indians moved into their new town in 1736, with Rev. John Sergeant and his assistant, Timothy Woodbridge, as school-master. Here they were gradually increased by additions from Northern Connecticut and Western New York, so as to amount to about 400 souls. By agreement, one sixtieth part of the land of the township was set apart for the support of Mr. Sergeant, and the same amount for Mr. Woodbridge. Four other white families were also to be “accommodated with such part as they should see fit,” a provision intended as a means for affording society for the missionary, and also to introduce practical models of civilization to the Indians. Of the four families for whom this provision was made, two arrived in June, 1737, viz.: that of Col. Ephraim Williams, from Newtown, father of the founder of Williams college, and Josiah Jones, from Weston. At a little later period came Ephraim Brown, from Spencer, and Joseph Woodbridge, brother of the teacher, from West Springfield. Dea. Samuel Brown, brother of Ephraim, joined the party soon after. In 1749, the year Mr. Sergeant’s death occurred, the number of families had increased to twelve, comprising, besides those already mentioned, that of John Chamberlain, from Spencer ; David Pixley, from Westfield ; John Willard, from Canaan, Conn. ; and John Taylor and Jacob Cooper, from West Springfield. Of the white inhabitants, the Williamses, the Joneses, in his earlier residence Mr. Woodbridge, and, in his last year, Mr. Sergeant, lived upon the hill north of the village. But the next comers located mostly on the Plain, or not far out. The Indian dwellings were scattered—some on the Plain, others on the meadows near the river, and a few about Millbrook. The first white child born in the town was Elijah, son of Josiah Jones, in 1742.

The first town meeting was held July 11, 1739, when the town government was duly organized by electing the following board of officers : Ephraim Williams, moderator ; Timothy Woodbridge, town clerk ; Captain John Konkapot and Aaron Umpackenee, selectmen ; and Josiah Jones, constable. From this time forward the population gradually increased and the mission flourished, the Indians taking a prominent part in the municipal government, even from the first. Among the early settlers, recapitulating some already mentioned, down to about the middle of the century, were John Willard, from Connecticut ; David Pixley, Stephen Nash, and Matthew Cadwell from Westfield ; John Taylor and Jacob Cooper, from West Springfield ; Elisha Parsons, from Northampton ; and Lawrence Lynch and General Joseph Dwight, from Brookfield. Among those coming still latter may be mentioned Hon. John Bacon, from Boston ; Hon. Theodore Dwight, from Northampton ; Hon. Theodore Sedgwick, from Connecticut ; Elisha Bradley, and three brothers, Abel, Isaac and Elnathan Curtis, from Connecticut, each of whom had a family of more than twelve children. As from these, previous to the Revolution, we find the names of Ball, Hamilton, Caldwell and Lynch, among the residents of the western portion ; Curtis, Churchill and Whelpley in the north-ern ; and Bradley and Williams in East street.

We will now return to give a brief sketch of the mission. Rev. John Sergeant was a native of Newark, N. J., a graduate of Yale college in 1729, and tutor there for four years from 1733. He first arrived at the scene of his labors, at Great Barrington, as has been stated, in 1734 ; but that visit was only preliminary to his permanent settlement, which took place after the completion of his fourth year's tutorship, in 1745. He was ordained to work at Deerfield, August 31st of the same year, and very soon thereafter assumed the labors of the mission, with his assistant, as teacher, Timothy Woodbridge. In January, 1737, the legislature ordered that a meeting-house, 40x30 feet, together with a school-house, should be erected for the mission, at the expense of the Province, and Col. Stoddard, Rev. Mr. Sergeant and Mr. Woodbridge were appointed to see that the work was executed. There was some delay attending this enterprise, probably on account of the scarcity of materials, for the meeting-house was not dedicated until Thanksgiving day, November 29, 1739. It stood a few rods northeast of the present house of worship.

Mr. Sergeant died July 27, 1749, aged thirty-nine years, and was succeeded by President Jonathan Edwards, who came here from Northampton, and was installed over the United church of the whites and Indians, August 8, 1751. He was dismissed to accept the presidency of Nassau Hall, at Princeton, N. J., January 4, 1758, and died of small-pox in March of the same year, aged fifty-four years. President Edwards was succeeded by Rev. (afterwards Rev. Dr.) Stephen West, of Tolland, Conn., who was graduated at Yale in 1755. He was licensed to preach about the beginning of 1758, and first performed duty as chaplain at Fort Massachusetts, in Adams. Thence he went to Stockbridge, was ordained there, June 13, 1759. Until 1775, he preached to both whites and Indians, to the latter, through an interpreter, in the forenoon, and to the latter the afternoon, of each Sabbath. In 1775 he relinquished the instruction of the Indians to Mr. John Sergeant, son of the missionary, who removed with them to New Stockbridge, where he died, September 8, 1824, aged seventy-seven years. Dr. West continued his ministrations until 1819, when he died, in the eighty-fourth year of his age. In 1810, in consequence of his growing infirmities, Rev. Ephraim G. Swift, of Williamstown, a graduate of Williams college, was associated with him as colleague. He was dismissed in 1818. On the 25th of August, 1819, Rev. D. D. Field, of East Guilford, Conn., a graduate of Yale in 1802, and first settled in Haddam, Conn., was installed as minister. Dr. Field continued to officiate until his dismissal, February 12, 1837. Since that time the pastors, in succession, have been, Tertius S. Clark, D. D., 1837-50; Alfred H. Dashielle, 1850-60; Rev. N. H. Eggleston, 1860-69; Rev. E. C. Hooper, 1870-73; Rev. J. C. Boilwell, 1874-77; and Rev. F. B. Perkins, up to the present time.

In 1784, under the pastorate of Rev. Dr. West, a new house of worship was erected, the old building proving too small for the growing flock. This stood about half a mile north of the town portion of the present Field Park. This structure did service until 1824, when the present building was erected.

Among those born in Stockbridge, aside from those already mentioned, who attained eminence, may be mentioned the following: Erastus Sergeant, M. D., a skillful surgeon, 1742-1814; Samuel Whelpley, an author and clergyman, 1766-1817; Ezekiel Bacon, 1776-1870, an author, and congressman from 1807 to 1813; Catharine Maria Sedgwick, a well-known and popular authoress, 1789-1867; Mark Hopkins, D. D., LL. D., an eminent divine, author, and late president of Williams college, 1802; William Pitt Palmer, a poet and journalist, 1805; John Seeley Hart, LL. D., an able scholar, editor and author, 1810; Cyrus West Field, projector of the Atlantic Telegraph cable, 1819; Henry M. Field, D. D., an able editor, and author of a work called The Atlantic Cable, 1822.

Rev. John Sergeant, of whom we have spoken so often, "was" says Rev. David Field in the History of Berkshire, in stature rather small, but possessed a beautiful countenance and a good constitution. Few persons have been as greatly loved in life and lamented in death as this servant of God. His talents, natural and acquired, were superior, his temper sweet, his manners engaging, and his piety ardent and persevering. His labors with the Indians were exceedingly fruitful. During his ministry, from eight or ten families they increased to more than fifty who had assumed a stable character in society, had twenty houses built after the English manner. Fifty or sixty who had become hopeful converts were admitted to full communion by him, some of whom died in faith before him, while forty-two survived him. He baptized 182 natives, adults and infants. Dying in 1749, as has been mentioned, he left a widow, who subsequently became the wife of Brig.-Gen. Dwight, and three children, Electa, Erastus and John. Electa became the wife of Col. Mark Hopkins, of Great Barrington. Upon the stone that marks the last resting place of this good man is the following:—

"Here lies the body of the Rev. John Sergeant, who dy'd the 27th day of July, A. D. 1749, in the 46th year of his age.

"Where is that pleasing form I ask, thou canst not show,
 He's not within false stone, there's naught but dust below;
 And where's that pious soul that thinking conscious mind,
 Wilt thou pretend vain cypher that's with thee enshrined?
 Alas, my friend's not here with thee that I can find,
 Here's not a Sergeant's body or a Sergeant's mind:
 I'll seek him hence, for all's alike deception here,
 I'll go to Heaven, and I shall find my Sergeant there."

Timothy Woodbridge, who proved such an efficient helper to Mr. Sergeant, was a son of Rev. John Woodbridge, of West Springfield, and was born February 11, 1709. He was one of the first justices of the court of common pleas, in 1761, and at his house was held the first meeting of this court. His dwelling was on the present site of the home of Samuel Goodrich, south of the river on the road to Great Barrington. He was ever high in the confidence of the Indians, and was the principal medium of communication between them and the authorities at Boston, and was largely entrusted with the oversight of their property and persons. He was greatly interested in the civilization and conversion of the Indians and made a missionary journey to the Susquehanna in company with Rev. Gideon Hanley in 1753. He was a justice of the peace from 1736, represented the town in the legislature, was a member of the council in 1771, '72 and '73, being, with Gen. Dwight, the only one in Berkshire county to attain that distinction. He died here May 11, 1774, leaving two sons, of whom one, Enoch, graduated from Yale in 1774, served in the army during nearly the whole period of the Revolution, and settled at Vergennes, Vt., where he was a prominent lawyer and judge, and had several daughters. He has descendants in the female line now residing in the county.

Col. Ephraim Williams was greatly respected, and served for a time as judge of the court of common pleas in Hampshire county. He died at Deerfield. He was twice married, having by his first wife two children, Ephraim and Thomas, and by his second wife seven, Abigail, Josiah, Lizzie, Judith, Elizabeth, Elijah, and Enoch. Ephraim was the founder of Williams college; Thomas was a distinguished physician in Deerfield; Abigail was first the wife of Rev. John Sergeant, and after his death, of Gen. Joseph Dwight; Elizabeth was the first wife of Dr. West; Judith was the wife of Rev. Enoch Thair, of Ware; and Elijah became the first sheriff of the county, and after a number of years' residence in West Stockbridge, finally came back to his native town, and died here June 9, 1815.

Jahleel Woodbridge, son of Joseph, was a graduate of Princeton, held many of the town offices, was repeatedly a member of both branches of the legislature, and was a judge of the court of common pleas and of probate. He died August 13, 1796.

Timothy Edwards, a son of President Edwards, graduated from Princeton in 1757, came to Stockbridge about 1770, and opened the first store here, in 1772. He was a member of the State council, and a judge of probate. He died in October, 1813, aged seventy-five years.

(1.) Robert Sedgwick, born in England about 1600, a friend of Cromwell and major-general in his army, emigrated to the United States in 1635, commanded the Ancient and Honorable Artillery in Boston in 1641, 1645, and 1648, was sent with a fleet under his orders by Cromwell to Jamaica in 1654, was one of the commissioners for the government of Jamaica and died there May 24, 1656.

(2.) Theodore Sedgwick, an American statesman and jurist, descended from the preceding. He was born in Hartford, Conn., in May, 1746, died in Boston, Mass., January 24, 1813. Educated at Yale college, he began practice as a lawyer in Berkshire county, Mass., at Sheffield, which he several times represented in the general court, served as aide to General Thomas in the expedition to Canada, settled in Stockbridge Mass., in 1785, and was in that year and the following, a member of the Continental congress. He took a distinguished part in putting down Shays Rebellion, in 1785 was a delegate to the State convention which ratified the Federal constitution, and was speaker of the Massachusetts house of representatives. From 1789 to 1796 he represented his district in congress, and from 1796 to 1799 was U. S. senator from Massachusetts and acted as president of the senate during part of one session. In 1799 he again represented his State in congress, and was chosen speaker of the U. S. house of representatives. In 1802 he was appointed to the supreme bench of Massachusetts where he remained till his death. He was a leading Federalist. In 1780 Elizabeth Freeman, a negro woman owned by Colonel Ashley, of Sheffield, having intercepted a blow with a heated shovel aimed by Mrs. Ashley at her sister, left the house declaring she would never return. A suit brought by her master to regain her was defended by Judge Sedgwick, and she was adjudged free by the Massachusetts bill of rights shortly before adopted, which declared that "all men are born free and equal." This led to the extinction of slavery in Massachusetts.

(3.) Theodore Sedgwick, an American lawyer and philanthropist, eldest son of the preceding, born in Sheffield, Mass., December 31, 1780, died in Pittsfield, November 7, 1839, while delivering a political address. He was graduated at Yale in 1798; admitted to the bar in 1801, and practiced at Albany, N. Y., in partnership with Harmanns Bleecker, (afterwards United States minister to Holland,) till 1821, when he retired to Stockbridge. He was twice president of the State Agricultural Society, repeatedly Democratic candidate for lieutenant-governor, and once for governor of his State; several times a member of his State legislature, where, against a storm of opposition and ridicule he carried through a bill for the Western (afterwards the Boston & Albany) Railroad, the construction of which encountered obstacles then unprecedented in railway engineering. He warmly espoused the causes of anti-slavery, free-trade, and temperance; published Hints to my Countrymen, in 1826; and Public and Private Economy (3 vols. 12 mo) in 1836-39.

His wife, Susan Anne Livingston, a descendant of the martyr Redley and granddaughter of Governor William Livingston, published The Morals of Pleasure, 1829; Young Emigrants, 1830; Children's Week, 1830; Allen Prescott, 1835; Alida, 1844; and Walter Tromley, 1859.

(4.) Henry Dwight Sedgwick, an American lawyer, younger brother of the preceding, born in Sheffield, Mass., in 1785, was educated at Williams college, practiced law in New York city in partnership with his brother, Robert, died in Stockbridge, Mass., December 23, 1831. In 1822 he published a pamphlet on the common-law practice and pleadings, which suggested to David Dudley Field (at that time a student in the law office of the firm) the code of procedure of which he was the principal author, and which was adopted by the State of New York, and afterwards in substance by more than half the States. Various pamphlets and papers were published by Mr. Sedgwick on political and religious topics, among which were the Reform of the New York City Charter, Abolition of Slavery, and Free Trade, on which subjects a series of articles from his pen appeared in the N. Y. Evening Post, and The Banner of the Constitution. Chiefly through his advocacy a free-trade convention was held in Philadelphia, September 30, 1831. He died by paralysis resulting from his exertions to procure the release of two frigates built in this country for the Greek government. These had been attached for exaggerated demands of creditors, and Mr. Sedgwick, after a fierce litigation, finally obtained the release of one of them in time to aid the Greeks in their successful struggle for independence.

(5.) Catharine Maria Sedgwick, an American authoress, daughter of Judge Theodore Sedgwick (2), born in Stockbridge, Mass., in 1789, died at West Roxbury, Mass., July 31, 1867. She was the first prominent American female writer of fiction, and the graceful freshness of her style and the love of humanity which marked her writings made her widely popular and beloved. In 1822 she published the New England Tale; in 1824 Redwood, which was re-published abroad and translated into French, Italian, German and Swedish; in 1825, The Traveller; 1827, Hope Leslie or Early Times in America, perhaps her most original novel; in 1830, Clarence, or a Tale of Our Own Times; also the same year a collection of tales selected from many published in the magazines; and in 1835 The Linwoods, a story of the Revolution. Among her most popular writings was a series of books for young people, including The Poor Rich Man and Rich Poor Man, Live and Let Live, Means and Ends, Home and Love Tokens for Children (1836-39). She published also a Life of Lucretia Maria Davidson in Spenk's American Biography (1837); Letters From Abroad to Kindred at Home (1841); Carlton Harvey and Other Tales (1845); Married or Single? (1857). A life of Miss Sedgwick, edited by Miss Mary E. Dewey, was published in New York in 1871.

(6.) Theodore Sedgwick, an American lawyer and author, son of Theodore Sedgwick (2d), born in Albany, N. Y., January 7, 1811, died in Stockbridge, Mass., December 9, 1859. He was graduated at Columbia college in 1829, and admitted to the New York bar in May, 1833. In this year he published a life of William Livingston. The next fifteen months he passed abroad as an attache of Edward Livingston, U. S. minister to France. On his return he practiced law in New York with marked success, and in January, 1858, was appointed U. S. district attorney for the Southern District of New York. In 1840 he edited the political writings of William Leggett. In 1847 he published a Treatise on the Measure of Damages which was subsequently much enlarged and became a standard work. It has gone through seven editions, the fourth and sixth of which were edited by F. D. Sedgwick, son of 4th (1868 and 1874). The fifth by Arthur G. Sedgwick, son of the subject of this notice (1869), and the seventh by Arthur G. Sedgwick and G. W. Van Nest (1880). In 1857 he published a Treatise on the Rules which govern the Interpretation and Application of Statutory and Constitutional Law, a subsequent edition of which, edited by J. Norton Pomeroy, was published in 1874.

The Stockbridge Congregational church.—The history of this church has already been given, as is identical with that of the Indian mission. The old church building, erected in 1784, did service until 1823, when the present structure was erected. The successors of Dr. West, who was dismissed with his assistant, Rev. E. G. Swift, in 1818, have been as follows: Rev. David D. Field, D. D., 1819-37; Tertius S. Clark, D. D., 1837-50; Alfred H.

Dashielle, 1850-60; Rev. N. H. Eggleston, 1860-69; Rev. E. C. Hooper, 1870-73; Rev. J. C. Bodwell, 1874-77; and Rev. F. B. Perkins has served since 1880. Rev. David Dudley Field, D. D., who succeeded Dr. West, has left an impression upon the people of the county which renders his memory not less dear than that of his worthy predecessor. He was born in Madison, Conn., May 20, 1781; was graduated at Yale college, 1802; studied theology with Dr. Backus, of Somers, Conn.; was ordained at Haddam, Conn., April 11, 1804, where he remained fourteen years. He was next settled in Stockbridge, where he filled up a prosperous pastorate of eighteen years. By a singular concurrence of circumstances he then returned to his former parish, where he remained fourteen years more. Having now reached the age of seventy, his children, who were acquiring wealth, and have since gained world-wide fame, desired him to retire from the cares and labors of the ministry, and return to the old homestead in Stockbridge, there to pass the residue of his days. Here Dr. Field passed his latter days, enjoying the affection of the people of Stockbridge, and indeed of all the county, whose history he has done more than any other man to illustrate and preserve. For eleven years he was secretary of Berkshire County Bible Society, and in various ways exerted himself to increase its funds and enlarge its usefulness. About 1826 Dr. Field and Judge Walker visited nearly all the principal towns in the north part of the county, and meetings were held, where the object of this Bible Society was explained, and its wants were ably set forth. The result was that an impulse was given to the Society, which continues to this day. This venerable man,—this able divine and accurate historian,—this worthy successor of Sergeant. Edwards and West,—passed quietly to his long rest on the 15th of April, 1867.

The North Congregational church, located at Curtisville.—This society was organized December 22, 1824, by a colony of sixty-three members who withdrew from the old church for this purpose, their first pastor being Rev. Nathan Shaw. Their church building, a neat brick structure capable of seating 250 persons, and valued, including grounds, at $5,000.00, was erected in 1826. The society now has 115 members, with Rev. Timothy A. Hazen, pastor.

St. Paul's Episcopal church, located on the corner of Pine and Main streets.—This society was organized in February, 1834, Rev. (afterwards Dr.) Samuel P. Parker, being the first rector. Services were first held in the upper room of the old academy, and it was not until ten years later, in 1844, that a church building was erected. But the society now has an elegant new church edifice, which was consecrated in the latter part of last November (1884). It is a memorial church, built by Charles E. Butler, in memory of his wife, one of the Sedgwick family, who died March 17, 1883. The building, and its contents, taking no account of land, which was already owned by the society, cost nearly $100,000.00. The furniture and the different parts of the church are arranged according to high church requirements. On the transept wall, below the organ loft, are fac-similies of the ten panels of the singing boys and girls of Luca della Robbina, the Florentine sculptor of 1400-01. These sculptures are in all degrees of relief, and were made for the Florentine cathedral. They are now in the Uffizi palace, where a cast of them was taken by the Berlin Art Society, from whence a few copies have been made, this being one of them. They were given by Misses Laura and Emily Tuckerman, of New York. The organ is of moderate size, but of singular excellence. The pulpit is a mass of carvings and fine cabinet work. It is the gift of Rev. Henry F. Allen, now rector of the church of the Messiah in Boston, who was rector of this church from 1865 to 1872, the gift being in memory of his mother. The center window in the rear wall of the chancel is in memory of Rev. Dr. Samuel P. Parker, the first rector of the church, with a pastorate of fifteen years, and is given by his friends. He founded several churches in New England, and died November 16, 1880. The stained glass of the window represents St. Paul as he stood on Mars hill and preached of a Savior and a resurrection to the Stoics and Epicureans. The artist was LaFarge, and this specimen of his work is said to make as fine a window as is to be found in this country. There are five other memorial windows, bearing the names of former members of the church. The finest art work in the church is the baptistery, which cost $10,000.00. It is opposite the transept, and is faced on floor, walls and semi-dome with marbles of great beauty and fine polish, coming from France. The memorial tablet, surrounded by cherubims and bearing a memorial inscription, was designed by St. Gaulliens. Two stained glass windows in the baptistery came from Tiffany's. The seats, the beautifully carved furniture, and the finely paneled wainscoting of the church are of oak, stained so as to develop the grain and give it an antique appearance. The floor is of tiles. The roof, of southern pine, panels between oak rafters and joists, and is supported by oak trusses, tied to the walls with beams which are carved angels. The inside of the walls is of cream-tinted brick; the outside of bluish-gray stone. The tower has a slight taper and a pyramidal roof in the Swiss style. The clock was given to the church in 1854 by G. P. R. James. The church has had six rectors since its organization, as follows: Rev. Dr. Parker, 1838-'46; Rev. Justin Field, 1846-'49, now rector of the Episcopal church in Lenox; Rev. Thomas R. Pynchon, 1849-'55, lately president of Trinity college and now professor in the same; Rev. Jesse A. Penniman, 1856-'58, now dead; Rev. Dr. Parker again, 1858-'65; Rev. Henry F. Allen, 1865-'72; and for the last twelve years, Rev. Arthur Lawrence, whose family name is well known in New England and elsewhere. The attendants of this church have been and are many famous people. Dean Stanley preached in the old church in 1882, the only country church that he attended or in which he preached while in this country.

The First Methodist Episcopal church.—As early as 1837 Stockbridge began to be included in a preaching circuit, services being held in the old academy building and in the town-hall ; but no church building was erected until 1882-'83, when the present structure, located on Church street was built. It will seat 300 persons, cost $5,250.00, and is valued, including grounds, etc., at $8,000.00. The society has seventy-nine members, with Rev. H. C. Humphrey, pastor.

St. Joseph's church (Roman Catholic), on Laurel Hill street, Stockbridge, was organized by Rev. Peter Eagan, the first pastor, June 9, 1861, with about 375 members. The first and present church edifice, of stone, was erected in 1860, and will seat comfortably about 500 people, the present number of its members. The church property is valued at $17,000.00 and the parish is under the pastoral care of Rev. Michael Carrol.

TYRINGHAM is a small, triangularly outlined town lying in the southern-central part of the county, in lat. $42^{\circ} 14'$, and long. $3^{\circ} 49'$, bounded north by Lee, east by Becket and Otis, southwest by Monterey, and northwest by Great Barrington and Lee. This was one of the four townships designated as 1, 2, 3 and 4, granted on the 15th of January, 1735, for the purpose of building a road between the Connecticut river and the Housatonic settlements. These townships were, in their numerical order, Tyringham, New Marlboro, Sandisfield and Becket. Monterey was embraced within the limits of Tyringham up to 1847, but the history of these early affairs, including that of the Tyringham Equivalent and the North and the South Eleven Thousand Acres, are fully stated in the sketch of the early road referred to above, on page 52, and in the sketches of New Marlboro, Sandisfield, Becket and Monterey, so it would be superfluous to repeat it here. The territory of Tyringham was divided into twenty-one portions, "by lines running from northwest to southeast, half a mile from each other, from the southwest to the northeast corner. House lots from forty to eighty acres each, were laid out on the six portions next to the six southwestern, contiguous to each other, abutting on the lines contiguous to the townships." Lot No. 35 was set apart for the first minister, No. 21 for the second minister, and No. 20 for schools, while sixty-seven lots were drawn by the proprietors, the number of proprietors having been increased by the general court, in this, as in the townships, in consequence of the increase of territory. The remainder of the town, with its rights in the three tracts mentioned, were also brought into division among the proprietors.

The surface of the town is rough and mountainous, though there is considerable good farming land. It is crossed by two heavy ranges of hills, which extend in an easterly and westerly direction. One of these stretches along the northern border of the town ; the other, a little above the south line, takes a westerly direction, and after passing a few miles, rises and spreads into Beartown mountain. In the valley between these ranges, Hop brook, rising in a small pond in Otis, flows westerly and discharges itself into the Housatonic, in Lee. On the northern border of the town lies Goose pond, a sheet of about 225 acres. These ranges of mountainous hills we have mentioned afford many prospects of unusual interest, while one of them, Toby's mountain, in the southwestern section of the town, was used as a point of observation during the late trigonometrical survey of the State.

The geological structure of the town is made up of rocks of limestone, gneiss, mica-slate, and quartz formation. Iron ore has also been found.

In 1880 Tyringham had a population of 542. In 1883 the town employed nine female teachers in its public schools, at an average monthly salary of $23.28 each. There were ninety-seven school children residing in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $878.61.

TYRINGHAM is a post village located on the banks of Hop brook, in the central part of the town. It has two churches (Methodist and Baptist), one store, a paper-mill, rake factory, saw-mill, cider-mill, wagon shop, blacksmith shop, and about twenty-five dwellings.

Tyringham paper-mills.— "The Turkey mill," so-called, was built in 1832, by Riley Sweet and Asa Judd, under the firm name of Sweet & Judd. It had two engines, a cylinder machine, and made about 400 pounds of paper per day. In 1833 it was bought by Ingersoll & Platner, and in 1835, Elizur Smith took an interest and the firm became Ingersoll, Platner & Smith. Mr. Ingersoll soon sold out to his partners and the mill remained Platner & Smith's until the former's death in 1855. In 1849 they put in a Fourdrinier machine and began making water-marked, first-class paper, which soon became known as equal to any made anywhere in the world. By the year 1855 it had been enlarged and improved to a great extent, steam-power was added, and it was fitted with seven engines. A few years later it burned. George Cannon subsequently rebuilt it with three engines, but it has not been successfully operated and is now idle. Ezra Heath and Joshua Boss built the Bay State Wrapping Mill, in 1846. It was afterwards owned by Johnson & Fargo. It burned down, was rebuilt by George & John West, sold by them to John Trimble, burned again in 1870, and has not been rebuilt.

George W. Oles's rake factory, located on road 9, turns out about $10,000.00 per annum, in the manufacture of all kinds of rakes.

George W. Garfield's cider-mill, located on road 9, turns out about 1,000 barrels of cider per annum.

George R. Warren's wagon and repair shop is located on road 9, where he does all kinds of work in this line.

M. V. B. Steadman's rake factory, located on road 17, manufactures all kinds of hand-rakes.

John C. Garfield & Son's rake factory is located on the corner of roads 12 and 13.

The settlement of the original territory of Tyringham was commenced in 1739, by Isaac Garfield, Thomas Slaton, and John Chadwick. In the following August, John Brewer, from Hopkinton, put up a house a little south of the pond (now in Monterey) which now bears his name. Here in accordance with a contract made with the proprietors, he erected and put mills into operation. Mr. Brewer's house was among those fortified in the French war, beginning in 1744, and here soldiers were put in garrison by the provincial government. Among these was William Hale, who afterwards became a settler, and a deacon of the church. In 1750 the proprietors, who had previously held their meetings and done their business in the eastern part of the State, commenced holding their meetings in the township, and March 6, 1762, the town was incorporated, with a name, said to have been suggested by Lord Viscount Howe, a few days before he fell in battle near Ticonderoga, after Tyringham, in England, where he owned an estate. The early settlements were all made in the southern part of the territory, now embraced in the town of Monterey, a part of which was afterwards known as South Tyringham. It was not until the year in which the town was incorporated that the first settler, Dea Thomas Orton, put up his log house on Hop brook, in the northern part of the town. Among the early settlers were the Heaths, Hales, Wilsons, Thompsons, Parkers and Halls.

Isaac Garfield removed from Boston to this town (the part now Monterey) about 1735; and the next bearing that name of whom anything is known, are Isaac, Enoch, John, Elisha, Solomon, Daniel, and Esther. All the Garfields in this place are descendants of Isaac, Sr. Isaac, Jr., was the first child born in the town. He married Margaret Orton who bore him seven children—Archibald, John, Thomas, Isaac, Daniel, Sally and Christine. Archibald and John moved to Onondaga Co., N. Y., and died there. Thomas, who resided on the homestead until his death, in December, 1858, married Hannah Merrill, and reared two sons and three daughters. Isaac made his home in Otis, married Mary Parks, by whom he had a family of four children; Daniel, a merchant of this town, married Sophia Strong, to whom was born one son and three daughters. Sally became the wife of Parden Mosier, and removed to Vermont. Christine died young, and her grave was the first in the village cemetery.

Francis Clark, born in Middletown, Conn., October 2, 1757, married Mary Johnson. He emigrated to this town in 1773, locating on road 19, upon the place now owned by S. C. Johnson. He reared a family of ten children, all growing to manhood and womanhood, but most of whom removed to the west. Two remained in town, and settled here. Daniel Clark, is the only representative of this family in town, and resides on a farm adjoining the one formerly owned by his father. He is an enthusiastic mineralogist and has a fine cabinet of minerals of his collection.

Dea William Hale, a descendant of one of the first settlers in America, and one of the first to locate in Tyrington, married a daughter of Capt. John Brewer, and reared a family of seven sons and four daughters.

Capt. Thomas Stedman was born in South Kingston, R. I., in 1766, where he resided until the age of thirty-three years, following the sea, and engaging mostly in coasting trade. About this time he removed with his family to the East Mountain of Tyringham, where he resided for six years, when he was placed in charge over the pier boat off Point Judith, which position he held three years. During his first voyage from the point to Newport he encountered a heavy gale and was driven upon an island near the mouth of the Bay, and subjected to great hardships. His friends, missing him for three days, supposed him dead, and his funeral sermon was preached. When the American Independence was declared, Thomas was a lad of ten years. He voted for the adoption of the Federal Constitution, and for Washington for President, and voted in this town regularly for fifty-six years. The dark day of 1780 was a memorable event to him. Capt. Stedman reared a family of four children, William, Benoni, Robert and Sarah, who came from Kingston, R. I., with their parents, on horseback, to Tyringham, May 1, 1799. They were accompanied by Thomas Williams, a brother-in-law of Thomas, and were four days on their journey. His daughter Sarah, now the widow of Frederick Cone has had no children of her own, but has reared a family of eight by adoption.

Amos Northup came to Tyringham, from Dutchess county, N. Y., at an early date and located upon a farm on Hop brook, where he reared six sons and three daughters. One of these, John, married Sarah Miller, of Granville, Mass., and reared three children, Dennis, Sabrina and John M. He lived at one time near Goose pond, upon the farm still known as the Northup place. John M. married Caroline Garfield, daughter of Thomas Garfield, December 12, 1833, and live on the old homestead nearly fifty years. He held various offices of trust in his town, and represented his townsmen in the legislature, in 1859. He was born in 1811 and died in 1881. His wife, born in 1813, survived him two and a half years.

Churches.—The conditions of the grant of Tyringham made provision for the establishment and support of the ministry. In 1740 a vote was passed for the erection of a church, which was put up in 1743, though, in consequence of the disturbances of the period, it was not finished for several years. It was situated on one of the highest hills inhabited at the present day, and was located within the present bounds of Monterey. It was a cheerless building, situated in a very bleak place, and occupied a site on house lot No. 1, drawn by Rev. John Cotton, of Boston. This building answered the purpose for which it was built, for many years. In 1796 a second house was built upon the same lot, which was dedicated July 4, 1798, and which was much more decent and comfortable than the original structure. Aside from its unprotected exposure to the wind, the site was as appropriate and beautiful as could be wished, occupying the summit of a gentle elevation, over which the principal road passed, and standing near the center of a common of several acres. To these churches the Congregational portion of the inhabitants of Hop brook came up, a distance of four miles, for two generations. Although nearly two miles south of the present line between Tyringham and Monterey, it was nearly in the center of the original town. The Congregational church was organized September 25, 1750, with eight members, Rev. Adonijah Bidwell being the first pastor. The Congregationalists of Hop brook commenced a church building, but never finished it, and it was subsequently completed by the Methodist and Baptist societies. The Baptist church, was organized in 1827, and the Methodist in 1844. Both have flourishing churches now, located at Tyringham village.

WASHINGTON is an irregularly outlined town, its boundary line having no less than thirteen angles, lying in the eastern-central part of the county, in lat. $42^{\circ} 22'$ and long. $3^{\circ} 51'$, bounded north by parts of Peru, Hinsdale, Dalton, and Pittsfield, east by Middlefield, in Hampshire county, south by Becket, and west and southwest by Lee, Lenox and Pittsfield. The tract of land of which it originally formed a part, was called by the Indians Tukonick. In 1757-58, a company of gentlemen from Hartford and Suffield, Conn., were inveigled into buying the tract, of Robert Watson, of Sheffield, who, with the help of his attorney, David Ingersoll, succeeded in making them believe he had a legitimate title to the same, through purchase from the Indians. But in 1760 it was ascertained by them that Watson was insolvent and in jail, and that his Indian claim was only partially satisfied. Accordingly they decided to re-purchase the land of the Indians, which they did, contracting with three Indians, Benjamin Kokhewewaunaut, John Pophnehauawah and Robert Nunghawot. The township now, which had borne the name of Watsontown, assumed the name of Greenock, from that tribe of Indians, and the proprietors began active preparations for settling the territory, and some of them had actually begun their settlement here, when a new difficulty arose; the Province authorities laid claim to the territory, invalidating the proprietors title thereto. Accordingly early in 1762, Nathaniel Hooker, John Townley, and Isaac Sheldon, in behalf of themselves and fifty-seven other proprietors, petitioned the general court for a grant of the township, which was accorded them, in February of the following year. From this time until April 12, 1777, the township was called Hartwood, but on that day it was incorporated under the patriotic name it now bears. In the petition to the general court the territory was bounded as follows:—

“Beginning on the east side of the Housatonic river, in the south line of Pittsfield, thence running east, nineteen degrees south, nine miles and a half; thence south, nineteen degrees west, 720 rods, to the north line of No. 4 township [Becket]; thence west on said line four miles and three-fourths, to the northwest corner of said township; thence on the west line of said township south, nine degrees twenty-five minutes west, two miles and three-fourths to the north line of the township No. 1 [Tyringham]; thence on said line west, two degrees thirty minutes south, three miles, to the northeasterly line of Great Barrington, thence bounding on the north line of said Great Barrington west, seven degrees thirty minutes north, 600 rods to the southeast corner of the "Glass Works Grant," [see page 192]; thence on the east side of said grant 550 rods to the northeast corner of said grant, and east side of Housatonic river first mentioned; and thence bounding westerly on said river to the first mentioned bounds."

The large tract thus described, however, has been greatly reduced in area by annexation to other towns, as follows: On the 21st of October, following the date of the incorporation of Washington, Lee was erected as a township, taking the southwestern portion of the town towards forming its territory, the tract being separated by the following line: "Beginning on the west side of Becket, about a mile south of the northwest corner thereof, thence running north, thirty and one-half degrees west, 454 rods; thence west, thirty and one-half degrees south, 400 rods; thence north, thirty and one-half degrees west, 1,236 rods, to the east bank of the Housatonic river." March 12, 1783, the eastern section of the town was taken, together with parts of Becket and Peru, to form, with parts of Worthington and Chester, and all of Prescott's Gore, in Hampshire county, the township of Middlefield, of that county. Again, January 31, 1795, a small part of the town was annexed to Lenox, which, February 12, 1802, received another tract, about half a mile wide, lying on the west side of the Housatonic, and extending from Pittsfield to Lee. This latter tract was for a long time known as New Lenox. These, we believe, are all the changes in territorial limit the town has undergone, leaving it an area of about thirty-five square miles.

The surface of the town, rough and mountainous, lying as it does almost entirely upon the Green Mountain range, being the highest land between the Connecticut and Housatonic on the route of the Boston & Albany railroad. Between its mountains and hills, however, are many fertile valleys, and here dwell most of the inhabitants, and here are located most of the productive farms, the soil being in general too wet and cold for grain-raising purposes, though good grazing land is plentiful. The high altitude affords a very salubrious climate, while the diversity of mountain-top and hill-slope, nestling valley and smiling lakelet, form altogether a scenic picture exquisitely charming, with here and there a point which borders on the sublime. Five dimpling lakelets are discovered here, the largest of which is Ashley lake, in the northern part, while West pond lies in the western part, Basin pond in the southern, and Moody pond, with another small sheet near it, in the eastern part of the township. The streams are all small, though pure and clear, Ashley brook, the outlet of Ashley lake, Roaring brook, the outlet of West pond, and Basin brook, draining the western part of the town, while some of the head waters of Westfield river drain the eastern section. Gushing springs of pure, cold water are numerous.

The rocks entering into the geological structure of the territory are principally of gneiss formation, with considerable quartz rock in the western por-

In 1880 the town had a population of 493, and in 1883 the town employed two male and nine female teachers in its public schools to whom was paid an average monthly salary of $24.00 to the males, and $19.32 to the females. while the entire cost of the schools for the year, ending April 2, was $743.33. There were 94 school children in the town.

WASHINGTON DEPOT (Washington p. o.), a hamlet and station on the Boston & Albany railroad, located in the northern part of the town, consists of about half a dozen dwellings.

WASHINGTON CITY is a hamlet of about half a dozen dwellings, located about a mile south of the depot. These are the only points approaching the dignity of a village, and the town has no shops or mills and no store. Formerly, however, a branch of Westfield river, in the eastern part of the town, afforded power for driving the machinery of the saw-mills and a clothier's works, while in the western part were three saw-mills. The manufacture of charcoal is carried on to a considerable extent, there having been manufactured here as many as 77,000 bushels in a single year.

Originally the town was surveyed, or laid out, into lots of 200 acres each ; but these were subsequently cut into fifty-acre and one hundred-acre lots, the two hundred-acre lots proving too large. One sixty-third of the grant was reserved as a bounty to the first settled minister, one sixty-third for the use of the ministry forever, and a like quantity for the support of the common schools. The first settled minister received his share, but the other reservations were so managed and disposed of that the town has long since ceased to receive any income from them. The settlement was commenced about 1760, the first ten settlers being George Sloan, Andrew Mumford, William Milekan, Elijah Crane, Amos Beard, William Beard, Joseph Knox, Nathan Ingraham, Joseph Chaplin, and Matthew DeWolf. When the troubles relative to land titles was finally settled, immigration became quite rapid, so that the first census, taken in 1791, shows a population of 588 souls, which in 1800 had increased to 914, and in 1810 to 942. About this time, however, occidental fever struck the town, many of the principal farmers exchanging their improved lands here for wild farms in Ohio, on the St. Lawrence in New York, and elsewhere, removing thereto, so that between 1810 and 1820, the population decreased to 750.

The first record of a meeting on the town book of records is dated April 16, 1778, when George Sloan was chosen town clerk and Asa Stevens and David Ensign, selectmen and assessors. Rev. William Gay Ballantine was the first settled minister, ordained June 15, 1774, and on the 27th of the following month he united the first couple in marriage, making one John Phelps and Mary Ashley. The first church building was erected in 1773.

Elijah Crane born in Lebanon, Conn., February 22, 1746, was one of the ten who first came to the town. He located on road 16, near the place now occupied by Curtis Messenger, and married Sarah Hill, about 1770, rearing a family of three sons and five daughters. Amos, his second son, located in Washington, off road 29, and married Martha Remington, who bore him seven children, three, Amos L., John M., and Martha, locating in town. John M. resides on road 14. Amos L. afterwards removed to Suffield, Conn., where he now resides.

Anthony Eames, with his brother Mark, was among the early settlers of this town, coming here from Connecticut. Anthony cleared a place on road 10, and built a cabin, afterwards erecting the first framed dwelling in Washington, which house still stands, and is retained in the possession of the Eames family, being owned by Edwin H., a grandson. On September 12, 1781, Anthony married Lydia Mattoon, who bore him six children, Mark, Viley, Philip, David and Sally, being five of the number. On the death of his father, February 24, 1808, he being killed by the overturning of a load of shingles upon him, Philip succeeded to the farm and in the care of the family. He was thrice married, and had, by his first wife, Beulah Messenger, six children, Henry, Beulah, Edwin A., Harriet E., and Alonzo being five of them; and by his second wife, Hannah H. Messenger, five children, Albert F., Edwin H., Milo A., George D., and one dying in infancy. Five sons grew to manhood. Edwin H. resides on the old homestead, dwelling in the house built by his father, the stone for which he quarried from Summit Rock, in 1843. Edwin has been a selectman for several years, and was recently appointed justice of the peace. Milo A. was killed by train robbers, while engineer on the Vandalia road, at Effingham, Ill. Henry P., Albert F., and Edwin H., are still living. Philip Eames, their father, was appointed a selectman in 1813, and from that time until his death, May 20, 1873, held some town office. He was a member of the State convention to revise the Constitution of Massachusetts, in 1820, and represented the town in the legislature many times.

Benona Messenger came to this town, from Becket, about 1800. He married Serena Fowler, and reared a family of eleven children, two residing in Washington—Mrs. Nancy Savery, on road 34, and Curtis, who has reared a family of seven children, three, Myron C., Caroline L., and Mrs. Harriet F. Middlebrook, living on road 16.

Oliver Pease, born in Lebanon, September 5, 1777, immigrated to this town about the year 1801, locating in the western part. In 1804 he married Catherine Chapel, the union being blest with a family of ten children, eight of whom lived to maturity, and resided in town for a time. But one, however, Spencer, remained here, permanently. He married Sepha French, of Norfolk, Conn., and had a family of two children, one son, William, residing on the homestead. Spencer died January 23, 1882, at the age of seventy-three, leaving a widow, who resides with her son William.

Alanson L. Pomeroy, a native of Southampton, came to Washington with his parents about 1820, when but nine years old. He has buried two wives, the first being Mary E. Chanter, by whom he had two children; and his second, Anna Brown, who bore him four children. Four of his six children lived to maturity, and one, Edwin S., resides in town. Mr. Pomeroy has held nearly all the offices of trust, serving in the legislature.

William Beach came with his father, Ransford, to this town, in 1822, at the age of eleven, and located on the farm now owned by his son, A. K., on road 8, where he reared a family of eleven children, eight of whom are surviving. Two of these, A. K. and Royal J., reside in town.

John Coates, a Revolutionary soldier, enlisted from Lenox, and removed, after the war, to Middlefield, rearing a family of eight children, three of whom located in that town. One of these, Theodore, reared a family of eleven children, three surviving, and one of whom, Charles, removed to Washington in 1845, and located on road 29, where he now resides, at the age of eighty years. His son, Oliver C., succeeded to the management of the farm.

Robert Delaney, came to this country in 1851, and to Washington in 1852, locating on road 25, where he now resides. He came from Kings county, Ireland, and was the first native of Ireland to locate in this part of the town. He reared a family of five children, two sons, Thomas and Michael, residing at home. Robert has been selectman four years.

George H. Hubbard came to Washington, from Boston, Mass., in 1873, and located off road 29, a very pretty place about one and a fourth mile from Becket depot, where he accommodates city boarders. The water upon his place contains a medicinal property, which makes it desirable for invalids.

Philip Eichelser, a native of Baden, Germany, immigrated to this country in 1856, married Angeline Bolton in 1861, and reared a family of seven children. In 1875 he came to this town and located on road 1. He was appointed a selectman in 1884.

The late ex-Gov. E. D. Morgan, of New York, is one of the men whom Washington is proud to own as her son. He was born in an old tavern, near the center of this town, and but a short distance from the Congregational church, February 8, 1811. Here he received his early education, remaining in the place until seventeen years of age, when he went to Hartford, Conn. carrying all his goods in a bundle under his arm. He was governor of New York from 1859 to 1863, and United States Senator from 1863 to 1869.

The Washington Union Society.—The Congregational church in Washington was organized as early as 1772, Rev. William Gay Ballantine being the first pastor, and a church edifice was built the following year.

A Methodist class was formed about 1815, in the eastern part of the town, and also one in the northern part in 1831, and a house of worship built in the valley in 1832.

A Wesleyan church was organized in 1844, and the third house of worship erected. This church was ere long given up and the building purchased by the Methodists. The church property is valued at about $1,300.00.

Early in 1859, the town having been for some time without regular preaching, the two societies, Methodist and Congregational, both being in a low state, made a union effort, and March 3d, unanimously elected Rev. M. M. Longley pastor for one year, the meetings to be held alternately in their respective houses of worship. To sustain this movement, "The Washington Union Society" was legally organized July 13, 1859.

WEST STOCKBRIDGE lies in the western part of the county, in lat. $42^{\circ} 18'$ and long. $3^{\circ} 38'$, bounded north by Richmond, east by Stockbridge, south by Great Barrington and Alford, and west by Alford, and Austerlitz, N. Y. It originally formed a part of the township of Stockbridge, so its history, down to February 23, 1774, the date of the division, is incorporated with the history of that town, and written on page 356. Before its division and incorporation, it was known as Queensboro, and like its parent town, belonged to the Stockbridge Indians, who sold portions of its territory to individual purchasers. At incorporation it had an area six miles long and two and one-half broad, containing about 9,600 acres. It was increased March 2, 1793, by the annexation of a small gore on the west, left on the establishment of the boundary line between New York and Massachusetts. February 12, 1824, about 930 acres were added to the northeast corner of Stockbridge, and February 6, 1830, the boundary line between the two towns was changed, so that West Stockbridge now has about 11,000 acres of territory.

The surface of the town is, in common with all the towns of this vicinity, replete with charming scenery, being broken into hills that vary from 500 to 900 feet above Williams river, the principal stream, while between them lie valleys whose beauty cannot fail to charm even the most careless and unromantic. Between Stockbridge mountain on its eastern border and Maple hill and Tom Ball mountain, which extend nearly through the whole length of the central part of the town, lies the beautiful valley of Williams river, with that stream gracefully winding through it, and threaded by the silver-like rails of the Housatonic railroad. Between this central range of highlands and a range of hill on its western border, lies another comparatively level tract of land, drained to the north by a large branch of Williams river, and to the south by a stream that flows into Alford. In these sections there is much arable land, while the many hill-sides afford large areas of pasture land.

But to the treasure that "lie hatched in the own loins of mother-earth" the town owes its principal source of wealth. Geologically, its rocks are mostly of talcose and mica-slate, and limestone formation, or by some classed as Levis limestone and Lauzon schist. But among these are found hematite, fibrous pyrolusite and spathic iron, while the limestone is in many places in the form of a beautiful marble of a fine texture. The first quarry opened was on the west bank of Williams river, and is now known as the "old quarry." This was operated until 1790, since which time many other quarries have been opened. Much of the marble used in the structure of the State House, at Boston, the old City Hall, in New York, and of Girard college in Philadelphia, came from this town. In 1828, at the quarries then owned by Messrs. Boynton, an immense blast was made, by charging a fissure about eighteen feet deep and from four to eighteen inches in diameter, with 204 pounds of powder. A mass of marble about sixty feet square and eight feet thick was raised, while as much as twice that quantity was loosened. In 1826 the first iron mine was opened, upon the farm then owned by Dea. Nathan Leet, since which time many others have been opened and thousands of tons of ore mined. Traces of lead ore are also said to have been discovered.

In 1880 West Stockbridge had a population of 1,923. In 1883 the town employed three male and fourteen female teachers in its public schools, to whom it paid an average monthly salary of $43.11 to males and $29.66 to females. There were 397 school children in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $3,500.00.

WEST STOCKBRIDGE, a pleasant little post village, lies in the northeastern part of the town, at the base of Stockbridge Mountain, on Williams river. It has two churches (Congregational and Methodist), a fine graded school, town-hall, three dry goods stores, hardware store, furniture store, drug store, two meat markets, bakery, harness and wagon shop, a hotel, two or three groceries, a tailor shop, and the usual complement of dwellings. It is a station on the Housatonic railroad.

WILLIAMSVILLE is a small village located in the southeastern part of the town, on Williams river. It has a paper-mill, machine shop, grist-mill, and about a dozen dwellings.

WEST STOCKBRIDGE CENTER is a hamlet located on a high hill just west of the central part of the town. It has one church (Congregational), and about half a dozen dwellings.

ROCKDALE MILLS (p. o.) is a hamlet located about a mile north of Williamsville, on the Williams river, and is a station on the Housatonic railroad.

STATE LINE (p. o.) a hamlet and station on the Boston & Albany railroad, is located in the extreme northwestern part of the town. It has a grocery store and a few dwellings.

The Hudson Iron Co.'s ore bed, located on the south side of road 10, in the northern part of the town, gives employment to 125 men, who mine about fifty tons of ore per day. This company purchased their property, about sixty acres, of Chauncey Leet, in 1849. Their vein is from twenty-five to seventy-five feet in width and from nine to 250 feet in depth.

The Richmond Iron Co.'s ore bed.—In 1832 the Stockbridge Iron Co. acquired an ore bed of Nathaniel Leet, and continued mining until 1858, when they leased the property to the Richmond Iron Co., who now employ seventy-five men and mine forty tons of ore per day. The bed is located on the north side of road 10, where the Stockbridge company owns 200 acres of land. The vein is from two to twenty feet in width, and has been worked to a depth of 160 feet.

The Pomeroy Iron Furnace was established in 1854, by the Troy Iron and Nail Factory, of Troy, N. Y., Stephen R. Gay, of West Stockbridge, being the prime mover in the enterprise. In 1868 the property was purchased by the late Theodore Pomeroy, of Pittsfield; in 1872 the works were destroyed by fire, rebuilt during the same year, and were kept in operation until September, 1881, since which time they have been idle. While the furnace was in operation it gave employment to about fifty men and turned out thirty tons of pig iron per day.

The Potter ore bed is situated just south of the Leet ore beds. It was first opened by Willam M. Kniffen, but is now owned by stockholders in Boston, New Bedford and West Stockbridge. The vein is fifty feet wide. The company employed twenty-five men and mined about twenty-five tons of ore per day, but has done no mining since September, 1883.

John G. Wilson's saw and grist-mill, located in the southwestern part of the town, on road 23, was built by him about fifteen years ago. The first mill on this site, however, was built by Rufus Wilson, about one hundred years ago.

O'Neill & Arnold's paper-mill, located at Williamsville, on road 31½, was built about 1870. They manufacture manila wrapping-paper. The water-power at this point was first used for turning a saw-mill, about one hundred years ago.

Henry J. Dobson's grist-mill, located at Williamsville, has been owned by Mr. Dobson, of Great Barrington, three years, though the building was erected about 1850. The first use made of this water-power was for sawing marble, in 1820.

The Rockdale Mills, for grinding buckwheat, rye, corn and oats, is owned and operated by Platt, Barnes & Co. It is located on Williams river, road 26. The company employs from seven to eleven men. The water-power here was first used in 1800, in operating a forge.

M. Truesdell's Sons' lime kiln, located at West Stockbridge, near the depot, makes about ninety barrels of lime per day, employing twenty men. The kiln was established by Perley Truesdell, in 1856. The firm manufacture the barrels used for shipping.

Fuary & Gaston's lime kiln, located a little west of West Stockbridge village, gives employment to about fifteen men, turning out fifty barrels per day. The kiln was first started by Nichols & Thompson, in 1867.

site is one of the oldest in the town, having been originally bought of the Indians by Elijah Williams, in 1763, the sale being in the form of a lease for 999 years, upon payment of one barley corn per year, if demanded. Here Mr. Williams erected a forge, selling it to E. W. Thayer, who erected the mill. From Mr. Thayer's hands the mill passed into the hands of the Tyringham Shakers, hence its name of "Shaker Mill." Mr. Moffatt has owned the mill since 1867, having in partnership with him Isaac M. Rees, until his death in July, 1882.

The settlement of West Stockbridge was begun by Joseph Bryant, from Canaan, Conn., who settled near the northeastern part of the town, in 1766. During the latter part of the same year, Col. Elijah Williams located upon the tract he had purchased in 1763, as mentioned above, and the village that sprung up here was known for many years as Williams' Iron Works, the river also receiving its name from Mr. Williams. Between this time and 1774 about forty families settled in the town, among whom were those of Increase Hewins, from Sturbridge; Elisha Hooper, from Bridgewater; Lemuel Burghardt and Christopher Brazee, from Egremont; John Minkler, from Mount Washington; Ichabod Miller, from Simsbury; Samuel Mudge and Elijah Slosson, from Sharon; Josiah Arnold, from East Haddam; John Deming, from Fort Edward; Matthew Benedict, from Ridgefield; and Roderick Messenger and Benjamin Lewis, from Farmington, Conn. These were soon after joined by John Ford and Ambrose Collins, from Farmington; Amasa and James Spencer, from East Haddam, Conn.; Samuel Boynton, from Grafton, and others, the migration continuing so rapidly that in 1791 the town had 1,113 inhabitants. Col. Williams opened a store at the village in 1773.

February 23, 1774, the town was incorporated, and July 4th, of the same year, the first town-meeting was held at the house of Christopher Brazee, when the following list of officers were elected: I. Stevens, John L. Denning and Benjamin Culver, selectman and assessors; Benjamin Lewis, treasurer; Elijah Stosen, constable; John Deming, Simeon Parmelee, Christopher Parks, John M. Kenion, Josiah Arnold and Wilson Minklen, surveyors of highways; Josiah Arnold, Benjamin Culver and Moses Parmelee, wardens; Elisha Cooper and Roger Woodruff, tythingmen; Simeon Gillett, Josiah Stevens, Jonas Standish, Nathaniel Dunham and Nathan Baker, hog reeves; Peter Hull and William Filler, fence viewers; and Benjamin Lewis, sealer of leather. Grove Pomeroy was the first representative from the town, elected May 4, 1801.

John Rees, among the early ones to locate in West Stockbridge, removed from Egremont, with a large family, in 1768. He reared thirteen children, Rebecca, Fichta, Andrew, Jacob, Isaac, Hannah, Mary, Katie, Caroline John, William, Electa and Abraham, the last three being born in this town. Being pursued by the Indians he took refuge in a hollow log, which log, when observed the following morning by his pursuers, with a spider's web across the end, was supposed to be vacant, they remarking "No white man there, cause spider's web," and he was unmolested. Lester, officiated as pastor. In 1843 they erected a church building, which did service until May 26, 1881, when it was destroyed by fire. WILLIAMSTOWN, noted as the seat of Williams college, lies in the northwestern corner of the county, in lat. $42^{\circ} 41'$, and long. $3^{\circ} 47'$, bounded north by the State line of Vermont, east by Clarksburg, Adams and North Adams, south by New Ashford and Hancock, and west by the State line of New York. The town was originally called West Hoosac, in contradistinction to East Hoosac, now comprised in the towns of Adams and North Adams. In 1749 a committee consisting of Colonel Partridge, of Hatfield, and Colonel Choate and Captain Nathaniel Dwight, of Belchertown, was appointed to trace and explore the limits of the two towns, and April 6, 1750, this town was ordered to be laid out. It seems that provisions for the settlement were early made, and once commenced were pushed rapidly and successfully. The first meeting of the proprietors, of which there is any record, was held December 5, 1753, the warrant warning the same being issued by William Williams, Esq., of Pittsfield. Alluding to the meeting, the History of Berkshire says: "But the house-lots, so-called, had been laid out in the north part of the town, previous to this meeting. They were laid on both sides of a principal street, fifteen rods in width, and a mile and three-eighths in length, reaching from Green river on the east to Hemlock on the west. This street runs over the highest part of these eminences, on the second, the West college, and on the third, the meeting-house. * * * These lots were 120 rods in length, and thirteen and one-half in width upon the street, containing ten acres each." Upon these lots most of the settlements were made. The town was incorporated June 21, 1765, and named in honor of Col. Ephraim Williams, the founder of Williams college.

The surface of the town is pleasingly diversified and presents a fine aspect. It is surrounded by lofty mountains on almost every side. The Clarksburg mountain rises to a height of 2,272 feet in the northeast; Greylock lifts its head to an altitude of 3,505 feet in the southeast; Berlin mountain in the Taconic range, which forms the western barrier, has an elevation of 2,814 feet; and the mountains on the north ascend nearly the same distance. The township therefore, occupies, in the main, a beautiful valley enclosed by these lofty, wooded eminences, through which the Hoosac river finds an opening on the east and north, and the two branches of the Green river an entrance on the south. The view of these bold-mountain ramparts from the college buildings in the center is, on every hand, magnificent. The fine scenery in the vicinity of Greylock and the magnificent view the old monarch affords has already been spoken of in the sketches of Adams and North Adams, while the mountain scenery of the other surrounding towns has been spoken of in their respective sketches.

The valley in which the two branches of the Green river meet is rich and beautiful, and the land of the whole town, indeed, is productive and remarkably well adapted to the growth of the cereals, of timber and to grazing. The underlying rock is Levis limestone, Lauzon schist, and Potsdam sandstone, with here and there a bed of clay and iron ore. Fine specimens of crystal quartz are also found. Near Williamstown village there is a mineral spring, the waters of which remain at a temperature of about 70° throughout the year, and are said to be efficacious in the cure of cutaneous diseases. For the accomodation of those who desire to linger here to enjoy the healthfulness and fine scenery of the town, three fine hotels open their hospitable doors—the Kellogg House, the Mansion House and Greylock Hall.

In 1880 Williamstown had a population of 3,394. In 1883 the town employed five male and fifteen female teaches, and an average monthly salary of $43.89 for males, and $29.36 for females. There were 668 school children in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $5,200.00.

WILLIAMSTOWN is a post village beautifully located just northeast of the central part of the town. This village is noted throughout the country as the seat of the famous old college that has its site here; through its quite, shaded streets have strolled many who have been, many who now are, and many who are to be, beacon lights in literature, in art, in politics and in theology—for the alumni of old Williams boast of not a few whose talents have placed them in the first ranks of these professions; for its beauty, too, Williamstown is not unnoted, while its local history turns not a single page which is uninteresting, from the planting of the old fort on what is now the public square, to the present time. Of the beauties of this quite college town, one writer speaks as follows, giving a description which is, perhaps, as faithful and happy as can be made:—

“Williamstown has come to rival Stockbridge as the model village of New England. Its appearance from within is peculiar—unique as far as I have knowledge—which comes chiefly from a singular and very artistic unity of arrangement. It is in effect a broad peak, of perhaps a mile in length, subdivided into shapely plats and wide and unfenced court-yards of verdent turf, with shaded avenues between: and all compassed within a rim of college edifices, churches, hotels, private dwellings and business structures; while on the moderate elevations to which the ground rises towards the western extremity, a church, two or three college buildings, and a soldiers' monument surmounted by a statue, stand out in bold relief. There are some pieces of exceedingly creditable and pleasing—even of striking—architecture. The scrupulous care with which the village society, modelled on the Laurel Hill Association plan, keeps every thing in exact order, as well as the perfection of grass, flower and foliage everywhere maintained, increase the attractiveness of the scene. But the characterizing element is the unity and harmony of plan which seems to embrace at once town and college, and to have its counterpart in the life of those who dwell in that charmed circle."

The college buildings, situated on a broad and beautiful street which runs over three delightful eminences, consist of Griffin Hall, containing the college cabinet; Goodrich Hall, which holds the chemical laboratory; the East and South colleges, both used as dormitories; Lawrence Hall, which contains the college library and some sculptured slabs from Nineveh; the chapel; and Jacksons Hall, together with the old West college (erected in 1790) and the Kellogg Hall. In the vicinity of the soldiers' monument, mentioned above, a marble shaft, surmounted by a globe, indicates the spot where Samuel J. Mills and his companions met in 1807 near a hay-stack, and there made a consecration of themselves to foreign missionary labor. We have not space to follow the history of Williams college from its foundation, to mention the many bequests that have enabled its management to bring it to its present proud state of perfection, nor to go into the details of even its more important historic dates, from the will of its honored namesake, Ephraim Williams, made at Albany on the eve of his departure for the battle-field which drank his blood, down to the comparatively recent retirement of its honored president, whose hair has grown gray in its service. As we have said, it is the brave and philanthropic Ephraim Williams, whose life has already been sketched in the county chapter, and mentioned in the chapter on Lee and in other places. Incorporated June 22, 1793, Dr. Ebenezer Fitch was chosen its first president, and was followed by Rev. Z. S. Moore, D. D., in 1815; Rev. E. D. Griffin, D. D., in 1821; by Mark Hopkins, D. D., in 1836, whose long service was rewarded with such enviable results, and who, only a few years since, gave place to his successor, the present Rev. Paul A. Chadbourne.

SOUTH WILLIAMSTOWN, another handsome post village, is located south of the central part of the town, on the west branch of Green river, near the confluence of New Ashford brook, and is the seat of Greylock Institute.

SWEET'S CORNERS (p. o.) is a hamlet located on Green river, about midway between Williamstown and South Williamstown. It has one church (Baptist) one store, a grist-mill, and about fifty inhabitants.

COLEVILLE, a hamlet located in the northwestern part of the town, on the Hoosac river, and a flag-station known as Cole's switch, was named in honor of Porter R. Cole. It contains Mr. Cole's steam mills, Greylock Hall, a noted summer resort, the famous mineral waters of the Sand Springs, two stores, a blacksmith and carriage shop, a livery stable, and about twenty-five dwelling.

WHITE OAKS, a hamlet located in the northwestern part of the town, is very picturesquely situated in the deep valley of Brood brook. It has one church, a wagon shop and about thirty dwellings.

Williamstown Manufacturing Company, whose works are located on the Hoosac river, near the depot, is a stock company engaged in the manufacture of print cloths—A. C. Houghton, president, and George Hopkins, treasurer. The company was organized in 1865, and the fine brick factory was then built. The machinery is driven by water-power, with steam as an auxiliary. The factory has 17,424 spindles and 400 looms. It employs 200 hands and manufactures 18,800 yards of cloth per day. Mr. S. S. Edwards is the efficient and energetic superintendent, William B. Clark, book-keeper.

Green River Mills, C. S. Tower, proprietor, located on Water street at Williamstown, were built by Mr. Tower in 1859. They have three runs of stones, with capacity for grinding 150 bushels of grain per day.

Patrick Lally's saw-mill, located on road 13, is operated by steam-power, and turns out about 500,000 feet of lumber per annum, giving employment to from twelve to twenty-five hands.

P. R. Cole's steam saw and planing-mill, located at Coleville, gives employment to six men in the manufacture of lumber, shingles, boxes, and barrel heads, turning out about $6,000.00 worth annually.

D. J. Sweet's grist-mill, located at Sweet's Corners, was built during the war of 1812. It has two runs of stones and does custom grinding.

The first settlements were made on the house-lots previously mentioned, though but a few of them seem to have been settled by those who originally drew them. Three of them were drawn by Lieut. Samuel Brown; two each by Samuel Calhoun, W. Chidestre, Lieut. Abadiah Dickinson, Ebenezer Graves, Lieut. Moses Graves, Thomas Moffatt, John Moffatt, Æneas Machoy, Josiah Williams, Ephraim Williams, Jr., and Lieut. Isaac Wyman; and one each by Elisha Allis, Lemuel Avery, Oliver Avery, Elijah Brown, Reuben Belding, Samuel Brown, Jr., John Bush, John Chamberlain, Capt. Elisha Chapin, John Crofford, Elizur Dickinson, Joel Dickinson, Aaron Denio, Daniel Donelson, Ezekiel Foster, Nathaniel Harvey, Micah Harrington, Joseph Halley, Esq., Daniel Haws, Lieut. Elisha Hawley, Col. Oliver Partidge, Nathaniel Russell, Abner Roberts, Joseph Smith, Dr. Seth Hudson, Benjamin Simonds, Samuel Smith, Thomas Train, Samuel Taylor, George Willis, Timothy Woodbridge, Elisha Williams, Jr., and Samuel Wells.

The settlement of the town, like that of most others at that day, was retarded by Indian hostilities. Nehemiah Smedley, William and Josiah Horsford, and some other young men, came to prepare for themselves and families a settlement here, it is believed, in 1751 or 1752. But they were interrupted by the increasing hostility of the Indians in those years. Returning to Connecticut, they enlisted in a company raised to protect the frontiers, and came again with others to this place and garrisoned a fort, which stood on the village square, and also a block-house near the West college. A few soldiers were kept here in garrison till 1760; but the inhabitants were exposed to frequent alarms, some were carried into captivity, and in an attack July 11, 1756, Capt. Chapin and two others by the name of Chidestre were killed. These dangers nearly ceased after 1759, and entirely so when peace was concluded between England and France, in 1763. These events, and the incorporation of the town, in 1765, led to a rapid increase in population, so that the inhabitants were, for a number of years, unable to raise grain enough to support the population.

Among the early settlers were Richard Stratton, from Western (now Warren); Jonathan and James Meacham, from Salem; Thomas Train, Thomas Dunton, Elkanah Paris (a Quaker), Derrick Webb, Capt. Isaac Searle, William and Josiah Hosford, from Canaan, Conn.; Capt. Nehemiah Smedley, from Litchfield; Samuel Kellogg, from Canaan; Nathan Wheeler, from New Milford; Seth Luce and Nathan Smith, from Western; David Nichols, from Middletown, Conn.; Mr. Byam, from Templeton, and John Talmadge, from Colchester.

Among the most prominent of the early settlers and inhabitants were Col. Benjamin Simonds, David Noble, Gen. William Towner, Gen. Thompson, J. Skinner, and Hon. Daniel Dewey. Col. Simonds was a native of the eastern part of Hampshire county, and at the age of twenty was a soldier of the garrison in Fort Massachusetts. He became one of the wealthiest inhabitants of Williamstown, and died April 11, 1807, aged eighty-one years. Mr. Noble, who was one of the principal inhabitants at an early period, was a native of New Milford, Conn., and graduated at Yale in 1764. He came to Williamstown in 1770, and was subsequently a lawyer and a merchant, in which latter business he acquired a considerable fortune. He was one of the first trustees of Williams college. In 1797, he was appointed judge of the court of common pleas, and died March 4, 1803, at the age of fifty-eight. General Towner was a native of New Fairfield, Conn., and settled as a practitioner of medicine in Williamstown, about 1790. He was a lover of politics and the parade, and relieved his professional cares by serving as a member of the State legislature, and as general of brigade. He died at Pownal, Vt., in 1813, at the age of fifty-eight. General Skinner came from Colchester, Conn., (his birth place), in 1775, and subsequently acquired an extensive influence in the town and county, both of which he repeatedly represented in the general court. For many years, he was chief justice of the court of common pleas for the county, was treasurer of Williams college, major-general of militia, a representative in the fifth congress, marshal of the district of Massachusetts, and treasurer of the State. He died at Boston, January 20, 1809, at the age of fifty-six. Hon. Daniel Dewey was a native Sheffield, and read law with Judge Sedgwick, of Stockbridge. He commenced practice in Williamstown in 1790, and became an eminent and very successful lawyer. He was a member of the thirteenth congress, and of the Governor's council, and in February, 1814, was appointed one of the justices of the supreme judicial court. He died May 26, 1815, in his fiftieth year. Chief Justice Parker said of him: "He is almost the only man, in elevated rank, of fixed and unalterable political opinions, and who was never remiss in enforcing those opinions, who has been at no time calumniated."

The first white child born in town was Prudence, daughter of Colonel Benjamin Simonds, December 4, 1763. The first male child was Levi, son of Captain Nehemiah Smedley, born October 8, 1764. The first meeting of the proprietors on record was held at the house of Seth Hudson, December 5, 1753. The first town-meeting was held July 15, 1765. From the list of that year, it appears that the taxable polls were fifty-nine, oxen fifty-seven, cows seventy-five, and sheep eighty-three.

The two largest dairies were of six cows each, and there were two others of four. The largest flock of sheep was eighteen, the next, fourteen, thirteen and eleven. Improvements were listed at 15s. the acre, and amounted to £426; from which it appears that about 578 acres were then under cultivation. Asa Johnson was rated for two mills, Nehemiah Smedley for £126 at interest, and Isaac Searle for £700. In the list of 1766 there were seventy four polls, in 1768, 102; while the "voters by law" were only twenty; in 1770, 119 polls; in 1774 the polls at the north end were 108; south end ninety-eight; and in town 206, and on the gore west of the town, twelve; in 1776, 220 in the town, and the valuation of the town was £5,921, viz.: of the north part £3,535, the south part £2,372.

The oldest house in the town was built by Theodore Boardman, and is occupied by his granddaughter, Chloe Bingham. The first two-story house was built by Dr. Henry Sheldon, and is now owned and occupied by James Waterman. The second was erected by Capt. Nehemiah Smedley, in 1776, and is owned and occupied by Benjamin F. Bridges. The following were built between 1790 and 1804: The brick house now occupied by J. M. Cole, built by Judge David Noble; the one occupied by Mrs. Brown, by William B. Sherman; the one occupied by Samuel T. Mather, by Daniel Day; and the one now occupied by the president of the college was built by Gen. Samuel Sloan; also the one built by the trustees of Williams college, first occupied by President Ebenezer Fitch, and now by Professor Safford.

Capt. Nehemiah Smedley one of the first five proprietors of West Hoosac, now Williamstown, born in Litchfield, Conn., settled here sometime between 1750 and 1760. He was driven away by the French and Indians during the French war, but soon returned, as the captain of a military company, and built a block house for the defense of the town, about where the Mansion House is now located. He located his farm and built the house, where his great-great-grandson, B. F. Bridges, now resides. This house was erected in 1776, and is now in a good state of preservation. It was first covered with pine clapboards that were riven out by hand. The old oven still remains in the basement, in which Mrs. Smedley baked a large quantity of bread and sent it by her son, a lad of seventeen years, to the Revolutionary army at Bennington. Capt. Smedley left his house before its entire completion, and joined the Continental army in 1776, remarking that he "would know who owned his house before he finished it," and led his command in the battle of Bennington. He remained with the army to the close of the war, contributing at least one half of his fair fortune in aid of this sanguinary struggle. At the close of the war he resumed his peaceable pursuits as a farmer, and continued on his homestead till his death, aged less than fifty years. He was twice married and was the father of six sons and two daughters, viz.: Levi, Moses, Elijah, Elisha, Samuel, Rachel and Mary, children of the first marriage, and James son of the second wife. Moses, Elisha and James settled in Hinesburgh, Vt.; Samuel settled in New Lisbon, Otsego county, N. Y.; Rachael died unmarried; Mary was twice married and died in Ohio; Levi, the oldest son, and Elijah, the third son, bought the homestead of the other heirs and lived as one family until they raised their children. Levi had eight, children, viz.: Adna, Irene, Lydia, Annis, Levi, Jr., Lydia, Mary and James, the only surviving member of this family, now eighty years of age, of whom we gain this information, a retired physician, educated at Williams college and at the Berkshire Medical Institution at Pittsfield. The children of Elisha were Adna, Electa, Rachael, Harvey, Lucy, Minerva (drowned at five years of age), Mary, Minerva, Emaline and Elijah. Only two of these are now living, Rachael, widow of Dea. Horace Hawks, in Charlemont, and Minerva, wife of Andrew Thomas, residing in the southern part of this town.

Dr. James Smedley, the only surviving grandson of Capt. Nehemiah Smedley was born on the homestead December 1, 1804. He married Miss Lucy Bridges, daughter of Jonathan Bridges, and granddaughter of Col. Benjamin Simons, September 6, 1829. They had six children, all of whom are living but one. Mary B. is the wife of Prof. Perry, of Williams college; Dr. Alvin H. Smedley, a practicing physician of Boston, died in 1872; William H., one of the first 70,000 who enlisted in the Union army, served two years and was discharged for disability, and now resided in town and looks to the comfort of his aged parents; James L. served as a lieutenant in the Union army, is a merchant at Davenport, Iowa; Lucy M., wife of Rev. Jonathan Wadhams, of Ashfield, Mass.; and Edward G., who served on the signal corps, is a merchant in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Col. Benjamin Simonds came to Williamstown, from Northampton, Mass., before the Revolutionary war, and was one of the earliest and most influential citizens of the town. He held the office of colonel, and led his regiment in the battle of Bennington, which included all the forces of Berkshire county. He located as a farmer where Mr. George H. Prindle now lives. He was twice married. His children were Rachel, who was married to Dea. Skinner, Justin, Sarah, Marcy, Joseph, Prudence, Abilena, Electa, Polly and Benjamin.

Benjamin F. Mather came to Williamstown, from Pownal, Vt., and formed a co-partnership with Orrin Kellogg as general merchants. The firm continued until 1836, when Mr. Mather bought Mr. Kellogg's interest and has continued that business alone and is now doing a flourishing trade in the same, building where he began, though it improved and enlarged on all sides. He is now seventy-three years of age, and has been in trade the longest period of any merchant in Berkshire county. Mr. Mather began without any capital, except good habits, industry, and indomitable perseverance, and by a course of fair dealing he has continually added to his fortune. until he now ranks with the wealthy men of his town. He is father of nine children to each of whom he gave a good education. Two of his sons are merchants in town, one is a practicing physician in the place, and another, B. F. Mather, Jr., is engaged with his father. He was the clerk of his town seven years, and represented the first district of Berkshire county in the legislature of 1879. The eldest daughter married J. C. French, D. D. of Newark, N. J.; the second, D. D. Woodbridge, M. D., of New York. The third daughter is unmarried and is living at home. The fourth daughter married Arthur Hale, a banker of Ulyses, Neb. The fifth married Bushnell Danforth, a merchant of Williamstown.

James Meacham, born March 10, 1733, came to Williamstown, from Salem, Miss., in the autumn of 1762, and settled as a farmer where his grand daughter, Miss Emiline Meacham, now lives. At the time he came there were only eighteen families who had preceded him in the town. He had left his family in Salem in the spring, and spent the summer in cultivating a crop of wheat and in building his log house with its stone chimney, and in the autumn he was joined by his wife and four children. June 22, 1756, he married Miss Lucy Rugg, and had born to him eleven children. Mrs. Meacham died June 22, 1803, and Mr. Meacham July 28, 1812. Their son, James Hawkins, born December 25, 1769, succeeded to the homestead, where he remained till his death, March 26, 1837. He married, September 30, 1795, Nabby Warner, and reared six children, only one of whom, Miss Emaline Meacham, who resides on the homestead, is living. Her only brother, James Meacham, born February 3, 1805, was his father's successor on the old farm, and died May 20, 1883. It will thus be seen that the Meacham home has been owned and occupied by James Meacham, James Hawkins Meacham and James Meacham successively, during a period of 121 years.

Mr. Joseph Tallmadge, born in Wales, came to Williamstown at a very early date, when there were only a few families in town. He settled in the wilderness where Willard Sherman now lives, where he continued to live the remainder of his life, dying at the age of seventy-three years. He cleared and improved this farm, containing 150 acres. He married Miss Martha Marks, and they were the parents of five children, only one of whom made a permanent home in Williamstown, viz.: Josiah Tallmadge, who settled on the homestead. Late in life he removed to Victor, N. Y., where he died, at the age of seventy-seven years; and Asa who settled as a farmer where Nathaniel Chamberlin now lives. He lived to the age of eighty-six years, being born in 1776 and died in 1862. The nearest descendants of Joseph Tallmadge now residing at Williamstown are his grandchildren, Mrs. Mary E. Hosford, Mrs. Orcelia Blakeslee and Mr. Edwin Tallmadge, and his great-granddaughters, Mrs. Mary A. Kellogg and Mrs. Martin A. Sanderson, and Hannah, Lillie and Mary Tallmadge.

Professor Albert Hopkins, was born in Stockbridge, Mass., July 14, 1807, and early manifested those traits for which he was afterwards distinguished. At Stockbridge he was prepared for college by his uncle, the Rev. Jared Curtis, and entered Williams college in 1823, graduating therefrom in 1826, at the age of nineteen. He was noted among his fellows for his robust frame, feats of strength and physical endurance, fine scholarship, amiable manners, and great love for natural sciences. After graduating, he directed his thoughts to the ministry with the intention to become a missionary; but meanwhile he received an invitation to become a tutor in Williams college, and accepted it, entering upon what proved to be his life work. In 1829 he was elected professor of mathematics and natural philosophy, and several years later his department was enlarged so as to include astronomy. His great force of character and fine tact caused him to be much respected and loved by his pupils. Admiring the beautiful in nature, he gave much attention to landscape gardening, and to the cultivation of flowers, his garden being a delight to see. He originated those useful scientific expeditions which have since been frequently sent out from American colleges, and he founded Williams Natural History Society. As he was very desirous the students should with their own eyes follow the course and motion of the stars, in 1837, almost wholly at his own expense, he erected an astronomical observatory, which was the first built on the American continent, exclusively for educational purposes. He also organized an Alpine Club, of which he was chosen leader. It consisted of a party of young friends of both sexes, who, in the summer holidays, selected a pleasant spot on which to camp out in tents on the mountains for a week or two in order to enjoy social intercourse in the presence of nature, interspersed with his teachings in botany, geology, and the analogies of religion. This novel sense of freedom and the pure air proved so delightful, refreshing and invigorating that these campings-out have been kept up at Williamstown from year to year. In 1834 he visited Europe to procure the best and newest astronomical apparatus for his class.

In 1841 he married a daughter of Edward Payson, who proved a true help-mate to him for twenty-one years, when she died, in 1862. He again married, in 1868, Miss Eliza Kilby. His son, a fine young man, perished on the battle-field in the late war, and twice his bereaved father made weary pilgrimages to the South before he discovered the dear remains, which he finally laid in the College Cemetery, at Williamstown. At the hamlet of White Oaks, on the other side of the lovely valley of the Hoosac, was a scattered and neglected population in a state of great poverty and degradation. To reclaim and christianize it, the good professor directed his energies. Here he established a preaching station, opened a Sunday school, gathered the people together and interested them, and at length, with the approval of the White Oaks people, and aid of the friends in the college and village of Williamstown, the building of a church was begun. One contributed nails, another drew wood, many gave work, and he, with his own strong arms, set a good example by helping to quarry the stones. Within a year, 1866, the church was completed. He took upon himself the pastoral duties of White Oaks, and the people who had sat in darkness now gladly saw the gospel light. Physically, Professor Hopkins was a powerful and fine looking man. He was tall, erect, dignified, though unassuming, simple in dress, even to plainness, but always courteous in demeanor, with a frame that would have suited an athlete, and a head such as the Greek sculptors gave to their great orators—large in feature and well-poised, beneath the rugged brow, eyes of raven hue and of unmatched depth and brilliancy. He preached his last sermon in the Congregational church in Williamstown, on the first Sabbath in January, 1872, and in the afternoon of the same day, and at the same place, he administered the communion. His professional duties and the pastoral care of two churches several miles apart, and the shock occasioned by the death of his son, proved too much for his impaired strength, and in July, 1871, he was prostrated with severe illness, from which he rallied, but disease gradually undermined his powerful frame; he lingered until the evening of the 24th of May, 1872, when he peacefully passed away. The funeral services, held in the Congregational church, were characterized by universal expressions of love for the deceased and grief for his death.

Elisha Bingham born June 4, 1780, in Plainfield, Conn., came to Williamstown in 1805 and settled in the village, where his daughter, Miss Chloe Bingham, now lives. In 1806 he married Miss Abigail Boardman, and they were parents of eight children, six of whom lived to mature age, and three of whom now resides in Williamstown, viz.: Samuel, residing in the north part of the town; Miss Chloe, on the homestead, as before mentioned; and Sarah E. (Mrs. Benjamin), near the railroad depot. Mr. Bingham was somewhat eccentric, but possessed a strong and original mind. He lived to the advanced age of eighty-three years. His wife died October 28, 1858, aged seventy-nine years.

Warren Southworth born in Freetown, Mass., near Taunton, removed to Lanesboro where he resided a year or two, and then removed to Cheshire, about the year 1800, and located as a farmer. Here he lived the remainder of his life, dying at the age of twenty-three years. Here his son Sumner was born, in 1803, and at the age of nineteen years he commenced business as a merchant, in company with Caleb Brown, where he remained until 1825. He then resided at Hoosac Corners two or three years, engaged as a general

Here he continued his mercantile business until 1838, when he formed a co-partnership in the manufacture of print cloths with Stephen Walley. The firm name was Southworth & Walley, and continued twenty-seven years, when Mr. Southworth sold his interest to Mr. Chadbourne. Their factory was destroyed by fire in the spring of 1883. In 1865, the Williamstown manufacturing company was organized, which erected the fine brick factory on Hoosac river, near the depot. This firm was composed of the Arnolds (three brothers) Mr. Southworth and Mr. Chadbourne. In 1879 Mr. Southworth sold his interest in the firm to Mr. Chadbourne, since which time he has been out of business. In 1825 he married Miss Emily Burbank, with whom he lived fifty-eight years. She died June 10, 1883. They had no children, but in their kindness have taken three to their home and brought them up. In 1850, and again in 1872, Mr. Southworth represented his district in the legislature. In religion he is a decided Methodist, the strong supporter of his church, and through his generous liberality, largely, the present elegant brick church edifice was built, about twelve years since. Although at the advanced age of four score, and in feeble health, Mr. Southworth still retains his faculties, and is able to conduct all his business transactions.

John Prindle came to Williamstown, from New Milford, Conn., about 1790, and settled as a farmer on Birch Hill, in the western part of the town. Here he remained a few years, then went West as far as Genesee county, N. Y., where he remained a few years, though he eventually returned to Williamstown, where he continued to live the remainder of his life. He married Nellie Johnson, about 1810, and reared nine children, only two of whom reside in Williamstown, viz.: Marshall Prindle, an active, energetic farmer, and reliable citizen residing near the village, and Adaline (Mrs. Daniel B. Galusha) in the southern part of the town. John Prindle led an exemplary and honorable life, and died at the age of sixty-two years. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Prindle resided with her son, Parley J., in the western part of the town, till her death, aged seventy-six years.

Nathaniel Chamberlin, came to Williamstown, from Colchester, Conn., about 1790, and settled in the wilderness on Northwest Hill (road 2). Late in life he bought the farm which his grandson Nathaniel Chamberlin, now owns and occupies. Here he lived until his death, in 1843, at the age of eighty-four years. He was the father of four children, all sons. The elder two, when young men emigrated to Chenango county, N. Y. The other two settled here. Emory located as a farmer in the immediate neighborhood but later removed to the village, and eventually died in Illinois. Ralph, the youngest son, remained on the homestead until his father's death, then removed to the place his son Nathaniel now occupies. Ralph Chamberlin died on this place in 1868, aged seventy-five years.

Porter R. Cole, born in New Ashford, June 26, 1819, came to Williamstown in 1837, when a little less than seventeen years old. He lived on River Bend farm, the homestead, until 1840, when he married Miss Mary Richardson and settled as a hotel-keeper in the "Stone Tavern," only a few rods from his present residence, in Coleville. Here he remained only two years, when he moved to his present location, built a store adjoining his residence, and occupied it for the next twenty-five years, as general merchant. In 1869 he built, in company with his brother, John L. Cole, the mills he now owns and runs. This partnership continued one year, when Mr. Cole bought the interest of his brother, and continued the lumber business alone. In 1874 he formed the firm of P. R. Cole & Sons, which continued about seven years. He is now the sole owner.

John Krigger, of German parentage, came to Williamstown, from Pownal Vt., during the Revolutionary war, and immediately erected the first grist-mill at Sweet's Corners. A part of the same building is now the mill of D. J. Sweet. One set of the mill stones which he used are now in the Green River Mills, at Williamstown, and doing good service for its proprietor, C. S. Tower. Mr. Krigger remained here the remainder of his life, dying at about the age of seventy years.

Nathan Smith, the eighteenth settler of the town, as we are informed, located upon the farm now occupied by W. H. Meacham. He was a Revolutionary soldier and present at the battle of Bennington. He reared a family of four sons and two daughters, and attained the great age of 102 years. His only descendants now in Williamstown are his grandchildren, Mrs. Mercy (Bennett) Read, and Lyman Bennett.

Daniel Timothy, for many years familiarly called "Uncle Daniel," came to Williamstown at an early date and settled on Northwest Hill, near the State line. Here he remained several years and cleared up his farm, but later he bought another farm, in Pownal, Vt., to which he removed but a few years before his death. He lived with a friend in Cummington, where he died, at the great age of 100 years. He was a Revolutionary soldier. He married Anna Boyd, a French lady, early in life, and they were parents of two sons and two daughters, though only one, a son, survives him. His only relative in Williamstown for the last thirty years has been his grandson, Elkanah Cronk now aged eighty years.

Elkanah Cronk was born in Williamstown, October 19, 1803, on the farm where his grandfather, Daniel Timothy first settled. Mr. Cronk has followed farming and has always resided in this town. He married early in life, Clarissa Foster, who was the mother of his ten children—five sons and five daughters. Mrs. Cronk died at the age of seventy years. Five of the children still live, three in Williamstown, viz.: Elizabeth (Mrs. George Rickards), Helen (Mrs. Patterson), and Dwight E. Norman L. lives in North Adams, and Benjamin F. in Beloit, Wis. Mr. Cronk still lives and enjoys a green old age at a little over four-score years.

Capt. Stephen Hickox, of Welch descent, and a captain in the Revolutionary war, came from Granville, Conn., to Williamstown, in 1781, locating on Bee Hill, road 18, where he purchased a lot on which was a log-house. He moved his wife and two children to this place, from Granville, on horseback, the common mode of traveling at that early day. With his own hands and the aid of his two sons, as soon as they were old enough to assist, he cleared a large farm, where he continued to live in his log-house until 1813, when he and his sons, Stephen, Jr., and John, built a fine two-story house, which is now owned and occupied by his grandson, Chauncey E. Hickox.

Mr. Hickox was the father of two sons and five daughters, and lived to his ninetieth year. He assisted to build the first church and Williams college. His son Stephen drove four yoke of oxen to draw the heavy timbers from the mountains for these buildings. Stephen, Jr., succeeded his father on the homestead, and John, with the aid of his father and brother, built for him a house only a few rods distant, on their farm, which then contained about 600 acres. Stephen, Jr., raised a large family, only one of whom now lives in town. Chauncey E. Hickox, before mentioned, resides on the old homestead. Like his father, the pioneer of the family, he lived to the great age of eighty years. Henry D., oldest son of Stephen, Jr., and brother of Chauncey, resided with his father on Bee Hill till he was about thirty years old, when he bought the fine farm near the village of South Williamstown where he lived about thirty-five years, when he sold it to his son Stephen A. Hickox, the present proprietor, and emigrated to Beloit, Wis., where he died, in March, 1880.

His son Daniel succeeded him on the homestead, reared seven children, and lived here to the age of eighty-one years. His son Daniel B., as before named, now owns and occupies the place, aged sixty-two years, and is assisted by his son, Daniel. It will thus be observed that the homestead has been owned for three generations by a Daniel Galusha.

Three grandchildren only represent the family in Williamstown, but none bear the name of Briggs. Mr. Briggs was a thrifty farmer, and at the time of his death was owner of a number of improved farms and was accounted a rich man. He lived to the advanced age of eighty-nine years, and Mrs. Briggs to the great age of ninety-four years.

They settled on the old homestead, cleared from it the wilderness, and remained there till his death, in 1868, aged eighty-six years. Rachel survived him till 1871, aged eighty-four years. They were the parents of twelve children who lived to mature age. Only two of this large family are now living, Henry Worthy, living in Wolcott, N. Y., and Elisha Worthy in Williamstown.

His son Elisha, born on the homestead in 1781, succeeded his father, and also raised four children. He died on the place in 1856, at the age of nearly seventy-five years. The place is now owned and occupied by the Charles Williams above mentioned, grandson of Elisha and son and Elisha, Jr.

He was the father of twelve children, who nearly all settled in the town. He lived to the great age of 102 years. His nearest descendant bearing the name living in Williamstown is his grandson, J. A. Daniels, a farmer, residing at Sweet's Corners.

These sons grew to manhood, and were all drafted at the same time into the United States army, during the war of 1812. He came to this place with a cart drawn by one horse, which brought his wife and goods for house keeping, and they commenced life in a log cabin. By constant industry he added to his possessions till, at the time of his death, he was accounted one of the wealthiest men in the town. His children divided the estate between them. His daughter Dorcas (Mrs. Bentley), received the homestead, where she lived her life time. He is represented by numerous grandchildren, but in the vicinity of the homestead there are two only, Norman L. Sweet, of South Williamstown, and Marancy Sweet, in Hancock.

He married Fanny Wright, of Colchester, and they were the parents of eleven children, of whom two live in Williamstown. On the farm is a barn now in a good state of preservation, built 144 years ago; also there is on the farm the site of an Indian camp or village, where relics are often found. The youngest son, Dan A., has a world wide reputation as the originator of seedling potatoes of great value, among the best of which are "Bulkeley," "Berkshire," "Monitor," "Berkshire No. 2," and "Snow Flake."

Capt. Samuel Mills was born in Wallingford, Conn., and came to Williamstown about 1776. He purchased several original lots of land on the "oblong," where he cleared a farm and erected a house and barn. The house he continued to occupy till his death, and it is now standing. Mr. Mills was early identified with the military interest of his town, was a captain of militia, and participated in the battle of Bennington. He married Jemima Harrington, the union being blessed with four sons and three daughters. Two of these, John and Reed, settled as farmers on the "oblong" and occupied the old homestead. Theodore S., the third son, became a successful physician and settled in the town of Western, Oneida county, N. Y., but later emigrated to Half Day, Wisconsin, where he located his large family and remained until his death. Samuel, the youngest son, died in early manhood. John raised a family of five sons and four daughters. The sons went west and became farmers. Reed had a family of three sons and one daughter. Benjamin F., his oldest son, and his brother Josiah A., inherited the old homestead and possessed it together until October, 1883, when they sold it. In 1842 these brothers organized Greylock Institute. Josiah, who was a lawyer, severed his connection with the Institute in 1858, and located in Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Henry L. Sabin was born in Williamstown, May 29, 1801, and died here. He was the son of Jesse and Esther Bulkeley Sabin; he won his education at Lenox academy and Williams college less easily than boys are "put through college" in these days; he taught school and studied medicine at Chatham, N. Y., and attended lectures at the Pittsfield medical school and at New York; and then, ready for his life work, he came back to Williamstown and never left it. The young doctor identified himself with all the local concerns, including his alma mater, and the results of a career so circumscribed are worth noting: No man knew so intimately and sympathetically as Dr. Sabin the lives of the people among whom he practiced. He shared in their joys, sorrows, hopes and associations. He remembered faces, incidents, dates and family records, and his visits were a household event. Outside of his profession Dr. Sabin assumed his full share of public duties. His religion was the old-fashioned, genuine New England article, and for just half a century he was a deacon of the Congregational church. When abolitionism was a reproach, Dr. Sabin took it up with usefulness, made his house a center for its advocates, and he preached temperance when New England rum was a popular beverage. The industrious village doctor never narrowed his interests within his immediate limits, but kept abreast of the great popular movements outside. He early became a Republican, was sent to the lower branch of the legislature, served with credit in the senate of 1857, and was prominent in county affairs. His life spanned great events in national progress, and none of these found him heedless of their passage or significance. This made him a most entertaining companion, and he learned much by contact with men. Besides holding many offices under the county medical society, Dr. Sabin was for many years a trustee of the Northampton lunatic hospital, and also medical examiner. He was the oldest trustee of Williams college, having assumed the office in 1838, about the time Mark Hopkins became president. Dr. Sabin enjoyed this official association, and was cordially esteemed by his associates of the board, among whom was for many years his classmate, the late Judge E. C. Benedict of New York. He was twice married, first to Lucy, daughter of Nathan Benjamin, in November, 1829, and after her death, April 24, 1833, to Abby B., daughter of Nathan Benjamin, of Catskill, N. Y., who died in April preceding his death. The doctor's surviving family consists of two sons,—Nathan Henry and Charles, who are in business in New York city; and three daughters,—Mrs. John Adriance and Mrs. Frederick Leake of Williamstown, and Mrs. Joseph Benjamin of New York.

Dr. Mark Hopkins, the late president of Williams college, was born in Stockbridge, February 4, 1802, a son of Archibald Hopkins, and grandson of Col. Mark Hopkins, the first lawyer who settled in Great Barrington. He was fitted for college partly in Clinton, N. Y., and partly at Stockbridge, under the tuition of his uncle, the Rev. Jared Curtis, and for a short time was a member of Lenox academy. He entered Williams college in the autumn of 1821, joining the sophomore class, and was graduated in 1824, when he pronounced the valedictory oration. Directly after leaving college he became connected with the former medical institution of Pittsfield, and devoted a portion of the year to teaching in his native town. He was a tutor in his alma mater two years, and received the degree of M. D. at Pittsfield in 1829. In August, 1830, he was appointed professor of rhetoric and moral philosophy in Williams college, and after the resignation of Dr. Griffin, in 1836, he was made his successor and professor of moral and intellectual philosophy. He married, December 25, 1832, Miss Mary Hubbell, of Williamstown. He received the honorary degree of D. D. from Dartmouth, in 1837, and from Harvard in 1841, and that of LL. D., from the board of regents of New York, in 1857.

Thos C Phelps

The Phelps are an ancient Staffordshire English family. From high and reliable authority Rev. Professor Austin Phelps, of Andover, Mass., John J. Phelps, Esq., of New York city, and Judge Phelps, of Vermont, assert, and many more besides affirm, that this ancient and honorable family, whose earliest traces date back to the eleventh century, and that about ten years after the "Mayflower" landed her first installment of one hundred and one "live Yankees" on Plymouth Rock, in New England, the "Mary and John," another British ship of 400 tons burthen, after a comfortable passage of ten weeks, disembarked another installment of one hundred and forty passengers, May 30, 1630, at Boston, Mass., among whom were William Phelps, wife and four sons,—William, Samuel, Nathaniel and Joseph,—and George Phelps, William's brother, with his son Richard, the first Phelps pioneers, all of whom came from the borough of Exeter, in the beautiful county of Devonshire, England. Isaac Phelps, Esq., of Patchway, near Bristol, England, writes a member of the family in this country, under date August 31, 1859, that the Phelps family's coat of arms is "A Mailed arm, two Wolves Heads." John G. Phelps also writes, September 21, 1859, that Arms has been granted by the English Herald's college—"Phelps" (Russell's Square, London), Walter Phelps, Esq., of Hartford, Ct., sent from Cherry Valley, N. Y., a pencil sketch of still another description of the family coat of arms, drawn by his nephew, James L. Phelps, Jr., son of Dr. Phelps, of New York city. From colonial and other records we learn that William Phelps, Sr., the pilgrim father and pioneer sire, with his wife, were original members of Rev. John Warham's church, in Exeter, England; that on the 9th of November, 1630, he was chosen a member of the first jury impanelled in the colony, to try Walter Palmer for killing Austin Bratcher, on the 9th of May, 1632, and was also one of two commissioners for the Dorchester plantation, appointed to confer with the general court about raising public stock; that on the 14th of May, 1634, he was a member of the general court held at Boston, and at this court was appointed one of four commissioners to "view the place and certify to the next general court whether Boston shall have convenient enlargement at Mount Wallaston ;" that on the 6th of May, 1635, he was a member of the general court held at New Town, and that in the course of this year, by order of the general court, he established the bounds between Hingham and Weymouth ; that on the 15th of October, 1635, William Phelps and family and his brother George Phelps, set forth from Dorchester, Mass., on their long, toilsome and wilderness journey to the valley of the Connecticut river. Never before had the forests of America witnessed such a scene—the compass, their only guide through the unbroken forest. Dr. Stiles says that William Phelps was an excellent, pious and upright man, both in his public and private life ; that he was truly a pillar of church and state, and that he was one of the most prominent and highly respected men in this then British colony. In the year 1658 he was appointed magistrate.

Nathaniel Phelps, third son of William Phelps, September 17, 1650, removed to and was one of the pioneers of Northampton, Mass., where he died, May 1, 1690. He had four children,—Nathaniel (2), born April 2, 1653, married Grace Martin, and was the grandfather of Martin Phelps, who was born at Northampton, January 3, 1724, and who died November 12, 1795. Martin married and had nine children,—Spencer, Eliphalet, Martin, Seth, Daniel, Andrew, Martha, Sarah and Mehitable. Sarah, second daughter of Martin, moved to Williamstown and married Dr. Porter, of that place. Daniel, fifth son of Martin, born at Northampton in 1762, married Mary Hanes, removed to Williamstown, July 4, 1799, and had three children,—Weltha, born August 22, 1791 ; Maria, born in 1793, and died March 14, 1798 ; and Thomas C. born July 24, 1795. Weltha Phelps married Eliakim Foster, of Leyden, Mass., in December, 1815, by whom she had five daughters and two sons,—Maria L., born December 21, 1816 ; Mary A., October 19, 1819 ; Caroline, June 12, 1820 ; Weltha P., September 18, 1822 ; Harriet E., February 20, 1825 ; Horace B., April 26, 1828 ; and Lucius Foster, April 26, 1831.

Thomas Cooley Phelps, Esq., only son and third child of Daniel Phelps, removed with his parents from Northampton, July 4, 1799, to Williamstown, Mass., where he resided continually till his death, which occurred September 7, 1866, aged seventy-one years. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Mark Hopkins. Mr. Phelps was one of Northern Berkshire's most prominent men. He spent a long life of usefulness, highly esteemed by his fellow citizens for his integrity and uprightness, and was repeatedly honored by them in the election to offices of trust and responsibility, which he filled worthily and acceptably. A man of refined principles, endowed with a high intellect, and sincere whether the occasion was political or otherwise, his words carried weight because his hearers knew that he ment and believed what he said. In his intercourse with men he was genial, and met the humblest individual and most exalted dignitary with the same cordial greeting. It was this that endeared him to the whole people, and made them feel that a friend and peace-maker was at hand. He always took a keen interest in the town, and was ever ready in word and deed to help forward every worthy cause. In politics he was a Republican, and represented the town in the general court at Boston in the winter of 1837-38. He was also a magistrate for twenty-eight years. Mr. Phelps was a member of the M. E. church. In the various relations of life, as citizen, neighbor, friend, he was above reproach, and it is seldom that a life thus lengthened is found so free from unpleasant memories. He made a name that will always be held in grateful remembrance by a community which loved to honor him. He was a farmer, and was twice married, first to Miss Lucy Hall, of Pownal, Vt., November 28, 1819, who died December 20, 1830, aged thirty years, by whom he had four sons and four daughters, as follows: George W., born November 10, 1820; Francis E., February 8, 1822; Daniel H., March 4, 1823; Mary A., September 7, 1824; Thomas C., Jr., June 18, 1826; Seth, July 7, 1827; Weltha, M., May 9, 1829; and Lucy J. H., November 8, 1830. For his second wife he married Miss Sophia Hosford, September 8, 1831, by whom he had eight daughters and one son, namely: Thirsa R., born September 18, 1832; Marthan, M., April 9, 1834; Louisa A., March 17, 1836; Sophia A., May 28, 1838; Henry S., April 16, 1841; Charity E., August 29, 1842; Emma L., July 11, 1844; Sarah F., February 18, 1847; Nancy A., February 17, 1849.

George W. Phelps, first son of Thomas C., married and had five sons,—Henry, Allen, Elburt, Warren, and Carlton. Daniel H. Phelps, second son of Thomas C., married and had three sons and three daughters, Cassius D., Gershom C., George L., Lucy Elizabeth, Weltha S., and Ella A. B. Thomas C. Phelps, Jr., third son, married and had two sons and four daughters,—Frederick, Frank, Alice, Ella L., Minnie B., and Mary O. Henry S. Phelps fifth son, married and had three daughters, Ruth O., Mary and Abbie, all of Williamstown, Mass.

“Life forever runs its endless race,
And like a line, death but divides the space,
A stop which can but for a moment last,—
A point between the present and the past.”

Charles Haley, born in North Adams, came to Williamstown when a young man and resided here until his death, rearing a family of children. His son, George W., now resides at South Williamstown.

Henry Green, a pensioner of the war of the Revolution, came to Williamstown from Rhode Island soon after peace was declared, and resided here until his death in 1859, at the age of ninety-two years. Henry, Jr., one of his fourteen children, and the father of Mrs. Hiram A. Chase, of North Adams, died here in 1819.

Zadock Ford, from Austerlitz, N. Y., came to Williamstown, about the time of the Revolution locating in the northwestern part of the town, where he resided until his death, which occurred in 1835. None of his eleven children are now living. One of his sons, Ira, born here in 1787, died in 1841, having reared nine children, five of whom are now living,—George Z., in Williamstown, Mrs. Harriet Sales, Mrs. Amelia Blackinton, and William S., in North Adams, and Charles I., in Missouri.

The First Congregational church of Williamstown, located at Williamstown village, was organized in 1765, Rev. Whitman Welch being the first pastor. Three years later, in 1768, a church building was erected. The present structure, built in 1866, of brick and freestone, will seat 800 persons, cost $45,000.00, and is valued, including grounds, at $50,000.00. The society now has 275 members, with Rev. WINDSOR lies in the eastern part of the northern section of the county, in lat. 42° 30' and long. 3° 58', bounded north by Savoy, east by Plainfield and Cummington, in Hampshire county, south by Peru and Hinsdale and west by Cheshire and Dalton. It was originally "No 4" of the nine townships sold at auction in Boston. June 2, 1762, being purchased by Noah Nash, for £1,430. Nine years later, July 2, 1771, it was incorporated under the name of Gageborough, in honor of General Gage, then the British governor of Massachusetts. January 9, 1777, however, the people having changed their minds relative to the honor due Gen. Gage, he having taken a part in the Revolution that was far from pleasing to loyal Americans, they petitioned the legislature to change the name to Cheshire, "because the present name of Gageborough may serve to perpetuate the memory of the detested Gen. Gage." In 1778 the name was changed, but to Windsor instead of Cheshire. March 14, 1793, a portion of the town was taken towards forming the town of Cheshire. February 26, 1794, a part of Cheshire was annexed to this town, and February 28, 1795, a part of Windsor was annexed to Dalton. Other than these, no changes in its

The surface of Windsor is uneven and hilly, enough so, at least, to afford a pleasing diversity to the eye, while its broken character does not seriously retard cultivation of its soil. A little west of the center of the town a ridge of highland extends north and south, from which the land slopes gradually to the east and to the west. On the east side rises a large branch of Westfield river, while a large branch of the Housatonic rises on the west, the sources of the streams being only a few rods apart, a little south of the site of the old Congregational church on road 40. On the latter stream, in the southwestern part of the town, the water falls over a precipice of about seventy feet, forming Wahconah falls, one of the finest scenic pictures in this section. "Here pours through perpendicular cliffs of dark grey rock," says Godfrey Greylock, "a considerable volume of water, which, in two or three leaps, makes a descent of seventy or eighty feet. The dark, precipitous cliffs form a striking and sombre vista, and the black and glossy surface of the water affords a fine contrast with the silvery white of the foam into which it breaks." The soil of the town is various, though largely warm and productive, being in some sections argillaceous, and in the eastern section sandy. It is also a fine grazing town. The rocks entering into its geological structure are principally of gneiss, mica-slate and limestone formation. There are also several beds of steatite, or soapstone.

In 1880 Windsor had a population of 644. In 1883 the town employed one male and twelve female teachers in its public schools, to whom was paid an average monthly salary of $20.00 to the male and $18.13 to the females. There were 115 school children in the town, while the entire amount raised for school purposes was $437.77.

EAST WINDSOR, or Jordanville, as it was formerly called, because of the numerous family of that name that resided here, is a pleasant little post village located in the southeastern part of the town. It has a store, machine shop and foundry, scythe-stone factory, blacksmith shop, paint shop, and about a dozen dwellings.

WINDSOR (p. o.), or Windsor Hill as it is locally known, is located on a high hill of that name, in the central part of the town. It has one church (Congregational), a store, town house, blacksmith shop, and half a dozen dwellings. "The old central spot of business and trade," says J. G. Holland, "where the people met for worship for many years, was on the top of a high hill, nearly as high as the tallest mountain in the town. To this bleak spot through drifting snow and freezing cold, the goodly generations of olden times resorted to worship in an unwarmed and altogether uncomfortable house. But the old locality is now deserted. The buildings, consisting of the old brick meeting-house, dwelling house, stores, and the large mansion known as 'Monk's Tavern,' have all been removed."

Francis Barden's saw and shingle-mill, located on road 47, was built by Levi Herrick, of Dalton, about twenty-five years ago. Mr. Barden manufactures lumber, and cuts about 4,000 shingles per day.

James L. White's saw and shingle-mill, located on road 27, was built by him in 1868. He employs three men in the manufacture of lumber, shingles and lath. He makes about 5,000 shingles per day.

William Reed's axe factory, located on road 8, on a branch of Westfield river, was built by A. J. Babbitt, about thirty years ago. He has owned the works about ten years, employs three men and manufactures about twenty-five axes per day.

H. L. Allen's saw and shingle-mill, located on road 9, was built by his father, Josiah Allen, in 1830. Mr. Allen manufactures all kinds of lumber, shingles, lath and brush and broom-handles.

G. J. Jordan's foundry and machine shop located at East Windsor, was built by his father, John Jordan, about 1860. Mr. Jordan is engaged in the manufacture of Jordan's Improved Turbine Water Wheels, circular and band saw-mills, and all kinds of wood-working machinery.

Torrey Bros.' saw and shingle-mill, located on road 54, just over the line in Hampshire county, erected in 1866, manufactures lumber, shingles and lath, turning out about 3,000 feet of lumber and 4,000 shingles per day. A cider-mill is also connected.

E. A. Jordan's scythe-stone factory located at East Windsor, gives employment to three men in the manufacture of scythe-stones.

The settlement of the town was commenced by Joseph Chamberlain and Ephraim Keyes, from Ashfield, Conn., and Edward Walker, from Hadley. They were followed soon after by John Hall, Jeremiah Cady, and Josiah Lawrence, from Plainfield, Conn., and in May, 1768, the first birth occurred, that of a daughter of Mr. Lawrence. In 1791 the population had increased to 916 souls. Lester Grosvenor was the first town clerk. The first town records were destroyed. The earliest record of officers to be found in the clerk's office are dated August 19, 1771. Hon. Byram Green was a native of Windsor, but, when he was fitted for college, his father removed to Williamstown, in order to lessen the expense of his son's education. He is remembered as one of five young men, who, in the year 1806, are said to have prayed the Foreign Mission into existence. They met in a maple grove, in Williamstown, and, during a thunder shower, fled to a haystack for protection. The place was identified by him years afterwards, a stake driven in the ground, and subsequently a monument was erected, to commemorate the "birth-place of foreign missions." Byram survived the other four. He became a minister and preached in several places in New York, until his voice failing, he was obliged to resign. He was a member of the New York legislature four years, and a member of Congress from 1843 to 1845.

Zebulon Allen, who was born May 18, 1771, removed to this town, with his wife, from Bridgewater, Mass. He had ten children. Zebulon located on the farm now owned by his son, Wait A, on road 16, where he resided until his death, April 12, 1846. Of his children, Susannah married Andrew Ford, removed to Ohio with an ox-team, and had two children. Josiah married Sally Kingsbury and lived on the homestead, removing, in 1834, to the farm now owned by his son Heman L. He reared six children, Erastus B., Mehitable, Erastus G., Martha, Eliza and Heman L. Erastus B. died when a child. Mehitable married H. D. Capen and resides on road 53. Erastus G. married Julia A. Robinson, of Worthington, Mass., and resides in West Cunnington. Martha, wife of Levi W. Thatcher, from Savoy, now resides in Brightwood, Mass. Eliza, wife of Fordyce Whitman, is a resident of East Hampton, Mass. Heman L. married Leonora Dean, of Savoy, and has always resided on road 9. They have two children. Mehitable, sister of Josiah Allen, became the wife of Jonathan Oakes. Priscilla, who married Clark Prince, of this town, removed, after a few years, to Hinsdale, Mass., and reared a family of five children. Waite A. married Lucy Jenks, of Windsor, who bore him six children, two dying in youth. Henry married Cynthia Smith, of Dalton, and died in 1871. Thomas married Eliza Jordon, of Windsor, and resides, with his father, on road 16. Leora, wife of Oscar Gloyd, is a resident of Plainfield. Mary resides at home, on road 16. Harriet N. sister of Waite A., is the wife of Priestly Mitchell, and resides in Dalton. She has two children. Joseph, who married Maria Snow, of this town, and always resided here, reared a family of three children. None of this family survives.

The Browns, of Windsor, were people of note, from whom, for four successive generations, a deacon was chosen for the Congregational church.

Seth G. Torrey removed to this town from Cummington, Mass., in 1805, and located on the farm, on road 55, now owned by E. W. and C. E. Torrey where he resided until his death. He had two children, Hiram P. and Hannah A. Hannah A. married Noah Ford, of this town, and died in Conway, Mass. Hiram P. married Betsey Whitman, and remained on the farm with his father, rearing four children, Rodney W., Sidney M., Sarah A. and Cessius E. Sidney M. is married and resides in Cummington, just over the line from East Windsor. Sarah A. resides with her brother, Rodney W., and Cessius E., upon the homestead, which was previously owned and occupied by their father and grandfather.

John and Alfred Jordon came to Windsor, from Cummington, Mass., about forty years ago and located in East Windsor, building the first saw-mill in this hollow. So numerous were the persons by that name, that the place took the name of Jordonville, but the postoffice is known as East Windsor. John Jordan reared three children—Eliza Ann, who married Thomas A. Allen, and resides on road 16; Erastus, who died early in life; Granville J., who married Cora Arnold, of Adams, and resides on road 54 corner 58.

Samuel and Ephraim Baldwin, brothers, were early residents of Windsor, and were surveyors, having been taught the profession by their father, who was a coast surveyor.

J. L. Phillip went from this town to Williamstown and became a professor in the college, but was subsequently obliged to resign, on account of failing eyesight.

The Church of Christ, Congregational, located near the center of the town, on road 38, was organized in 1772, with ten members, Rev. David Avery being the first pastor. The first house of worship was erected soon after Mr. Avery's installation, but was destroyed by fire before fully completed. Another house was then built, a modest wooden affair that did service from 1790 until 1823, when a brick building was erected. The present building, which will accommodate 300 persons, and is valued, including grounds, at $3,000.00 was erected in 1847. The most prosperous period in the history of this society was the forty years' pastorate of Rev. Gordan Dorrance, who was installed, after preaching one year, July 1, 1794, and dismissed in July, 1834. He admitted to membership 275 persons during his ministry. The organization of the Congregational church in West Cummington, Hampshire county, in 1840, took a great many of the members of this church, residing in the eastern part of the town. The society now has thirty-five members, with Rev. Abijah Stowell, pastor.

CLASSIFIED BUSINESS DIRECTORY

EXPLANATION.

The towns are alphabetically arranged at the end of the line, under the business classifications. The postoffice address of each individual or firm follows after the name, except in cases where the name of the postoffice and the township is the same. In the villages the name of the street is generally given and precedes that of the postoffice. The classification of farmers is omitted in this list, as they can readily be found in the general list, by noting the figures at the end of the line, which indicate the number of acres owned or leased by each. Road numbers signify the same as in the general list.

Indian Herb Doctor,

ASHLEY FALLS, MASS.,

TO WHOM ALL COMMUNICATIONS SHOULD BE ADDRESSED.

Behold, the Wonder of the World!

ROOTS AND HERBS have sole power over disease. Vegetable and Botanic Medicine! Reform Practice Triumphant!

DR. MERRIAM is widely known as Coppeway, the Great Indian Medicine Man, the Chief Medicine Man of the World.

EVIDENCE OF SUCCESS.—In justice to myself and for the benefit of those who may not be acquainted with the successful result of my practice, I will point out to you, when you call at my office, many remarkable cures of the first families of this vicinity, performed by me. Proofs of successful treatment are the most desirable credentials to the public that a physician can produce. The public mind being naturally better satisfied with the evidence that a physician exercises a mastery over disease, than with the most elaborate demonstration of the scientific character of his theory.

CHRONIC DISEASES.—All those who are afflicted with chronic diseases should consult me by letter or in person, as I am often called away, and wish to see my patient before completing a cure. Years of experience among the Indians of Western Canada and among the tribes of this country from Maine to Oregon, and a life devoted to travel and study of chronic disease in every form and stage, constitute me the master of my profession. I tell your disease without asking questions, putting my finger upon any ache or pain, thus pointing out the diseased organ. By this means I am enabled to prescribe successfully in all diseases.

OVER 5,000 PATIENTS treated by me in this State during the past year, and all who followed directions CURED or benefitted. If you are sick, no matter what the disease, write to me at once and I will see you immediately.

— Consultation Free. —

A FORFEIT OF $500 wherein I fail to reduce a large, fleshy person to any weight desired.

☞ Private Parlors for Ladies, and all communications strictly confidential.

Yours truly,

Dr. S. D. MERRIAM, Ashley Falls, Mass.

MILTON, VERMONT, August 30, 1882.

DR. S. D. MERRIAM—DEAR SIR:—It is a duty that I owe you, myself and also suffering humanity, that I acknowledge the good received at your hands, after lying on my back for five years, perfectly helpless while in a lying or sitting posture, so much so as to be unable to move a muscle or even turn an eye in its socket, my flesh all gone, in short, perfectly helpless. After remaining in this situation for five years, employing seven of the best Allopathic physicians and one Clairvoyant, (to whom I give great credit,) all of whom failed in getting up any muscular action or power, I, as a last resort, resolved to try something entirely new, to me at least. I now proclaim to the world that the test surprised me, as it also did the community at large. It is now nearly fourteen years since I first saw Dr. Merriam. I seem to be in the best of health and still improving.

Any one wishing more minute particulars can be furnished the same by addressing

H. D. KINNEY, M. D.
